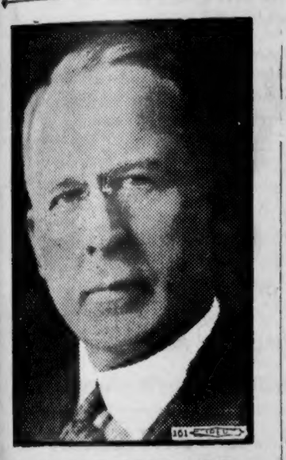
BARBER TRADE CODE SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Affects More Than 300,000 Craftsmen.

LOCAL MEETING SET FOR MONDAY NIGHT

J. B. Robinson Will Advise With Local Bosses on Operation.

Fought for Code



JAMES C. SHANESSY
President Journeymen Barbers' International Union.

All barbers of Chattanooga, union or non-union, journeyman or "boss," are urged to be present Monday night at 7:30, at Roosevelt hall, Seventh and Market streets, to discuss operation of the industry under the code just signed by President Roosevelt.

President George W. Perry, of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, has issued the call, and will preside at the meeting. Mr. Perry said Thursday that J. B. Robinson, international representative of the Barbers, who is in the city, has been prevailed upon to remain over for the meeting and advise the local craftsmen as to details of the code. Mr. Robinson is said to have been in close touch with developments during discussions of the code, and his knowledge of details is expected to prove of value to the Chattanoogans.

Washington, April 26.—President Roosevelt has approved a code of fair competition for the barber shop trade, affecting more than 300,000 barbers, manicurists and other employes in addition to providing for the determination of fair, minimum prices by local administrative boards.

The code, however, will not become fully effective until trade areas have been designated by the code authorities, administrative boards for each area have been created and the minimum prices proposed by such local boards have been approved by at least 70 per cent of the members of the trade in the respective areas. In all cases the local price schedules will be subject to the approval of National Recovery Administrator Johnson.

The code establishes a 48-hour work week for all employes and provides that owners of one-chair shops may render barber services not to exceed 52 hours a week. The opening and closing hours of shops will be determined for each area by the local administrative board subject to approval of the administrator.

Barbers will receive as heretofore commissions based on their gross weekly receipts for services rendered, but in no event shall they receive less than a minimum wage ranging from $17 weekly in the larger northern cities to $12 in smaller southern towns and villages. Manicurists are to be paid not less than 50 per cent of their gross weekly receipts with a guaranteed minimum ranging from $5.50 in the south to $8.50 weekly in the north according to population of the city or town.

Transmitting the code to the president, Administrator Johnson reviewed the present demoralized condition of the trade as a result of price wars with the result that "neither barbers nor shop owners are making a living wage."

"The general improvement characterizing other industries has not been felt by the barber shop trade," the administrator's report continued. "This can be explained by the trade's inability to establish reasonable prices. The inability to obtain a fair price for services rendered has compelled the barbers and shop owners to live on starvation wages or appeal to various charitable organizations for relief. No immediate relief in the barber shop trade can be expected until prices for the several barber shops services have been established at a level that will permit living wages for barbers and legitimate profits for shop owners."

Harriman Mill Barons Branded By Eagle's Flight

Emblem of Fair Dealing Removed by Order U. S. Government.

SCENE OF REVOLT IS SHIFTED TO HARRIMAN SECTOR

Revolt against the United States government, which began some two weeks ago in the camp of southern coal mine owners, has spread to Harriman, Tenn., and the Harriman mills, which have displayed such amazing arrogance in their relations with agents of the United States government, are now sponsoring a movement in the East Tennessee town to boycott the Blue Eagle, insignia of fair dealing with employes and of co-operation with the United States in its efforts to bring the nation out of chaos and restore a measure of prosperity to the people.

Although merchants and business men in the strike-ridden city made no protest when employes of the mill were forced to strike in support of the code, a "special" to the Chattanooga Times declares sixty merchants have discarded the Eagle and a movement is on, doubtless ordered by the mill barons, to boycott those who display the government's emblem.

Local workingmen, however, are inclined to doubt the extent of the "rebellion," and suggest the possibility that the Times' correspondent may have been under the influence of the mill magnates—and the average citizen knows what that means in a small town.

Washington, April 24.—The Blue Eagle took wing and flew away from the notorious Harriman mill Monday.

Word that the eagle was removed was flashed here to the national labor board by W. R. Massie, assistant postmaster of Harriman, Tenn.

Till this week the bitter fight of the Harriman mill management, among the very worst of the southern textile barons defying the NRA, the labor boards, the compliance boards and all the other agencies set up by the government had managed to detain the eagle.

For over a half year, in the very shadow of the eagle's wings, the Harriman mill owners had not only refused to consent to the principle of collective bargaining, recognition of the union, the right of workers to representation of their own choosing, but had attempted to starve 600 strikers into submission to autocracy of the worst sort, had refused to allow the representatives of the government and the labor and compliance boards to arbitrate, and even refused the kind offer of the governor of Tennessee, the Hon. Hill McAlister, to mediate the dispute.

The company, on the basis of a decision which was rendered against them by the regional labor board, so twisted the verbiage that they obtained from the local judiciary a stringent injunction prohibiting the workers from even laughing and talking together and jailed the strikers on their return from Washington, where they had testified against the company, just as they stepped off the train. At one time, at the behest of the company, over a hundred and fifty strikers were lodged in a jail made to accommodate seventy-five at capacity. Among the jailed were Fred G. Held, organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and Roy L. Gossage.

The company will protest the removal of the eagle, it was intimated.

LABOR WORLD PUT ON SPOT BY RAILROADER

Chides Failure to Comment on "Home Store" Suit.

OFFERS ITEM FROM LOCAL DAILY PAPER

Story Alleges Spoiled Meat Caused Death of Woman Customer.

A correspondent who desires his name to be signed simply "Railroader" chides The Labor World for alleged failure to give publicity to an item in the Times some two weeks ago reciting that a lawsuit was filed aginst the Home Stores charging one of the units of the chain concern sold meat allegedly admitted to be "unfit for human consumption," and from the effects of which it is charged that a woman was poisoned and later died.

The correspondent's letter follows:

Editor The Labor World:

Several days ago I noticed an item in a local daily stating that the Home Stores concern has been sued for $10,000 damages following the death of a local woman who is alleged to have been poisoned by "rotten" meat bought at one of the local units of the chain store concern.

In the knowledge that The Labor World has always been on the alert to protect its readers, I believed the item would be published in our paper, but waited for it in vain. The incident also recalled to mind another suit filed some time ago, details of which were not published because, according to the papers, the attorneys "did not wish to hurt the Home Stores."

We railroaders are wondering, also, why the health department does not investigate such matters, and if meats or other products "unfit for human consumption" are being sold, those responsible should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

The item which I refer to was published in the Times, as follows:

"Suit for $10,000 damages was filed against the Home Stores, Inc., by E. E. Counts, administrator of the estate of Dollie Wilkerson, through Attorney R. W. Kemmer in circuit court yesterday.

"The administrator's suit charged that Charlie Wilkerson, husband of the deceased woman, bought some hog jowl at an East Ninth street Home Store April 10, which his wife cooked and ate, allegedly causing ptomaine poison, from which she died April 18. It is claimed that the husband returned a portion of the meat to the store and the agent allegedly admitted that it was 'unfit for human consumption.' The suit was brought for benefit of the husband and five surviving children."

Trusting that you will give this matter a little publicity, and thanking you in advance,

RAILROADER.

Chattanooga, April 24, 1934.

In defense of its failure to note the item above referred to, The Labor World submits that it has for many months past endeavored to explain to working people of Chattanooga that the management of these so-called "Home Stores" is unfriendly to organized labor, and we believe that this is as far as our duty goes.

However, it might be stated as the opinion of this paper that if Roy McDonald's meat is as rotten as his business policies, it is to be wondered that many of his customers have not died from eating it.

TURBINE PLANT EMPLOYES STRIKE FOR PAY INCREASE

Hartford, Conn.—Employes of the Terry Steam Turbine company of this city, 1,100 in number, went on a strike when their demand for a 50 per cent wage increase was refused by the management, which is operating under the Electrical NRA code.

SECRETARY OR LABOR UNIVERSITY GUEST FOR PUBLIC ADDRESS

Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor in the Roosevelt cabinet, will be a guest of Dr. Alexander Guerry, president of the University of Chattanooga, Saturday, and will deliver an address at the university chapel at 11 a.m., on the topic, "New Challenge to Industry." The address will mark the close of the Valley institute conducted by the university, which has brought a number of outstanding national leaders to Chattanooga during the past two weeks.

A buffet luncheon at noon, at the home of Dr. Guerry, will honor the distinguished guest, and in the afternoon she will be entertained by members of the Kosmos and Business and Professional Women's Clubs. A conference with a delegation from Chattanooga Trades and Labor council is also scheduled for the afternoon.

Miss Perkins will probably return to Washington Saturday night.

Tribute to Memory Of E. L. Barringer

Tribute to the life and character of E. L. Barringer, member of Chattanooga Typographical union, who died recently at his home on Missionary ridge after a service of more than a quarter-century on the local dailies, was paid by his associates in the composing-room of the Times, when at a special meeting the following resolutions were unanimously adopted and made a part of the chapel records:

Whereas, it has pleased the Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our esteemed brother and co-laborer, E. L. Barringer (by death, on April 6, 1934), who for forty-eight years had occupied a prominent place in the ranks of Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89, and of the Times chapel; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. Barringer we have lost a friend whose fellowship it was an honor and a pleasure to enjoy; that we gladly testify to his many virtues, to his untarnished character and irreproachable reputation, to his unquestioned sincerity and exemplary life; that we extend to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and pray that Infinite God may comfort their broken hearts. And be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be hung in the Times chapel, and that copies be sent to the bereaved family, to The Labor World, and to the Chattanooga Times.

Done by order of the Times chapel, Chattanooga, Tenn., this the 15th day of April, 1934.

S. J. LAWRENCE,
THOMAS SHADRICK,
FRANK E. DAY,
Committee.

DANISH SAILORS END STRIKE.

Copenhagen.—Danish seamen and firemen have ended a strike which began on April 12. A court of arbitration directed slaughter house workers, who struck in sympathy with the seamen, to resume work.

OFFICIAL ORDER SAYS OWNERS ACTED "IN BAD FAITH"

The text of Gen. Johnson's order directing removal of the Blue Eagle from the Harriman mills, sent by telegraph, follows:

"The national labor board has made a recommendation that your Blue Eagle be withdrawn, based upon the board's findings and its conclusion that 'the Harriman Hosiery mills has infringed the rights of its employes to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, as recognized by Section 7-A of the National Industrial recovery act, by entering negotiations in bad faith with the definite intention not to make any agreement with the representatives of its employes.' The compliance board has concurred in this recommendation. In accordance with these recommendations, I hereby direct you to surrender all your Blue Eagles to the postmaster at Harriman and to refrain hereafter from using the Blue Eagle at your plant or in advertising or in any other manner."

DALTON STRIKE IS DESCRIBED AS 'IMPRESSIVE'

Mill Is Picketed 24 Hours a Day.

FELLOW UNIONISTS OFFER ASSISTANCE

Cuthbert Advises Pickets to Protect Property and Their Jobs.

Dalton, Ga., April 26.—The Real Silk Hosiery mill in Dalton, Ga., is really and truly down tight—as we have heard politicians tritely boast, it is "100 per cent." Some 400 union employes decided to go to bat when a demand for a wage increase and union recognition was denied them, and now the immediate territory around the mill resembles a war camp. Pickets patrol the mill vicinity twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

The most impressive aspect of the strike is the silence attending it. There is no loud yelling here, no drinking and boisterous horseplay. Each striker wears a quiet but grim face. One reads in them the determination that this union will secure recognition and that nothing but victory will be thought of.

The strikers themselves are not alone in the fight. The textile union of the cotton mills in Dalton, with an intensely union-minded membership of over 1,000 members, have told the strikers that if they will stay on the picket lines that food will be brought to them. This message was sent out to the strikers from a meeting attended by representatives from the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the Chattanooga Typographical union, which was so well attended that at least 450 were jammed into the hall. After the meeting a parade was formed that extended some four blocks long, four abreast, and a line of march was drawn around the mill, relieving the pickets on duty there long enough to assemble in the front of the mill to listen to T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, who talked briefly.

"Protect your job in this mill. But do not forget to also protect the mill. Let no one injure it. Keep it in good shape, for you will be going back to work in it. But most of all, protect your investment in this mill. The owners of it have dollars tied up in it—you have your lives and your familes' lives invested in it, and it is only natural that you should fight bitterly to make that investment pay dividends just as much or more than the dividends that the dollar investors receive," Mr. Cuthbert said.

While in Dalton the enthusiastic unionists there (and there are few in Dalton now who are not in the union or who are not hunting for some union to join) told the Chattanooga Typographical union that they would take up the case of the Home Stores. The way the owner of the Home Stores treated the working people was retold, his trouble with NRA, his arrogant attitude and his business practices were received with pledges that the Home Stores will hear the protest of the Dalton workers.

Dalton seems to be a union camp. The chief of police here is not in the employ of the Real Silk mill. He has told the strikers that he will be square with them, and he has been. The conduct of the strikers has been such that there has been no disorder and it is reasonable to predict that there will be none.

DALTON BARBERS ALL JOIN A LOCAL UNION

A new local of the Journeymen Barbers' International union was formed this week at Dalton, when J. B. Robinson, representative of the parent body, and George W. Perry, president of Local 415, visited the North Georgia city at the request of a number of the craftsmen and instituted the local.

"There are fourteen shops in Dalton," Mr. Perry said, "and fourteen union shop cards have been placed. The sentiment was unanimous for organization, and the new local is 100 per cent. Working rules, etc., have not yet been completely worked out, but this matter will be taken care of in the immediate future.

"First official act of the union was to send a message of confidence and good-will to the strikers at the Real Silk mills, and the local bids fair to be a tower of strength to the rapidly growing movement in our thriving neighboring city."

Municipal Power Plant Upheld By U. S. Court

Paragould, Ark., Wins Public Ownership Fight Against Utility Co.

St. Louis, Mo.—The right of a municipality to construct an electric light and power plant transcends the franchise rights of a private utilities company already serving that municipality, the United States circuit court of appeals held here recently in a far-reaching decision.

By its decision the court reversed the eastern United States district court of Arkansas, which had issued an injunction enjoining the city of Paragould, Ark., from building such a plant because the city had granted a franchise to the Arkansas Utilities company, which contended that the proposed public plant would violate its rights.

The decision read in part:

"When private rights of an indefensible nature are sought to be derived from regulatory powers, the case is peculiarly one for the application of the universal rule that grants of special rights and privileges are to be strictly construed in favor of the public right, and nothing is to be taken for granted concerning which any reasonable doubt may be raised."

History of the case showed that Paragould granted a franchise to the predecessor of the utilities company in 1915. In 1919 the state legislature created a commission to grant such a franchise. Thereafter the the original company surrendered its franchise and was granted an indeterminate one. Five years later, the Paragould properties of the original company were sold to the Arkansas Utilities company, including the franchise.

Branch 53 Changes Dates for Meetings

Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, announces a change in meeting schedule, to take effect Saturday. The local union has heretofore met on the first and third Saturday afternoons of each month, at 2 p.m. Beginning tomorrow (Saturday), however, the schedule calls for a session every other Saturday at the same time and place, Roosevelt Hall, Seventh and Market streets, over Liggett's.

Local 1744, Seamless Hosiery Workers, recently voted to consolidate with Branch 53, and increased business matters, it is explained, made necessary the bi-weekly meetings.

Mrs. Alice White Goes to Reward

Mrs. Alice White, 34, passed away at a local hospital last Saturday. She is survived by her husband, J. O. White, member of the Woolen Workers' union, and three daughters, Lucile, Katherine and Ruth. Her mother, Mrs. Mary Hicks; a brother, Abe Hicks; three sisters, Mrs. Vergas Emory, Mrs. Polly Ann Thompson and Mrs. Bertie Witt, of Athens, Tenn., also survive. Remains were taken to Athens, her former home, for interment.

The Labor World joins the fellow-workers of Brother White in extending to him and other surviving relatives sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

WORKERS PROTEST.

Allentown, Pa.—Resolutions protesting against the NRA code for the women's handbook industry were adopted at a meeting here of 500 pocketbook workers from Allentown, Bethlehem, Easton and Stroudsburg. Copies of the resolution were sent to Gen. Johnson, national recovery administrator, and other officials at Washington.

WISE UNCOVERS POLITICS IN WIRT CHARGES

Gary Educator Dubbed "Steel's Baby."

FAITHFUL RETAINER OF CORPORATION

Correspondent Finds Illuminating Facts Behind "Kerensky" Incident.

Worries Wirt

JOSEPH A. WISE
Special Correspondent International Labor News Service.

Believing that the truth of the influences behind Dr. William Wirt and his charges that revolution is being plotted at Washington had not been revealed, International Labor News Service commissioned Joseph A. Wise, Chicago ILNS correspondent, to go to Gary, investigate Dr. Wirt's background and tell the facts through the labor press. Mr. Wise has unearthed some startling facts, not known to the country at large. The first of Mr. Wise's articles is presented herewith. The second will appear next week.—Editor, ILNS.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Gary, Ind., April 26.—There was a lot of buck passing on the floor of the house of representatives at Washington the other day as to who owned Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools at Gary. The statesmen were eager to declare that "he is not our baby."

Almost any citizen of Gary, if assured that he or she will not be quoted, will tell the inquirer that Dr. Wirt is the "baby" of the United States Steel corporation. Strange it is that none of the solons at Washington, many of of whom certainly are familiar with that fact, did not mention it in the debates on the issue raised by the Wirt charge that communists are using the so-called "brain trust" as a means to "bore from within" and plan to use President Roosevelt as the Kerensky of "the revolution."

Citizens of Gary are afraid to say anything out loud about the truth of the matter because of the certain vengeance of the U. S. Steel corporation, which owns and governs Gary as a feudal barony. Are our congressmen influenced by this same fear?

Dinner Party Talk Unimportant.

Out this way it is not considered important whether a handful of so-called intellectuals did or did not indulge in certain loose talk at a dinner party in Virginia. It is not of deep national concern even if a few individuals of communistic tendencies really have wormed their way into the inner circles of the recovery administration. Their services can be dispensed with when found out, just as were the services of a woman lieutenant of Dr. Wirt's curtailed a few years ago when it was learned that she was using her official government position to further the interests of Dr. Wirt's brand of U. S. Steel corporation education.

The important points to establish, say my informants, are to fix Dr. Wirt's status in the scheme of things and to ascertain why he hurled verbal "pineapples" at the time that he

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Is organized labor supporting proposed old-age pension legislation in congress?

A.—Yes. The American Federation of Labor has indorsed the Capper-Norton bill.

Q.—When were tailors first organized in the United States?

A.—The organization of tailors began before the nineteenth century. Three unions existed in 1806, one of which, that in Boston, celebrated a century of continuous existence in 1906.

Q.—What big railroad labor organization was formed at Oneonta, N. Y.?

A.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, organized Sept. 23, 1883.

What Next!

Hammers, chisels, wrenches and other tools strike sparks that are dangerous where there is a fire or explosion hazard, as in the petroleum and chemical industries, grain elevators, coal mines, etc. The problem is now being solved by making the tool itself of beryllium copper. This new alloy can be worked into shape, whether hot or cold, and has hardness and durability enough for cold chisels.

Wisdom

True virtue cannot exist where pomp and parade are the governing passions. It can only dwell with the people, the great laboring and producing classes, the form, the bone and sinew of our Confederacy.—Andrew Jackson.

Stretch-Out, Eviction Bills Killed in S. C. Legislature

Spartanburg, S. C.—The house bill to abolish the "stretch-out" system in the textile plants of South Carolina, which flared up in the senate a few days before adjournment, died on the senate calendar, along with several house measures to prevent eviction during strikes and requiring sanitary sewerage in mill villages.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the Syrup."

Congratulations Due County Court

Patrons of the public schools owe a debt of gratitude to members of the county court for the splendid manner in which that body met the assaults of the so-called "economy experts" at the adjourned session of the court last Monday.

Anticipating the attack, a large number of progressive citizens gathered at the courthouse to protest against this latest effort of enemies of education to further cripple the public schools.

Opposition to adoption of the budget, it is reported, was confined principally to remarks by Mr. R. E. L. Cook, president of the Hamilton County Taxpayers' league, which had recommended reduction in the teaching personnel and in salaries in the amount of $30,000.

We repeat, the members of the court should be congratulated on their firm stand to protect the schools of the county, and the incident will go far toward checking the campaign to compel the schools to bear the brunt of depressed economic conditions.

NRA Hampering Co-operatives

Co-operatives in the United States are running afoul of the codes. Groups of families who have escaped the status of unemployment by joining together into a self-supporting society on the barter basis have had some of their barter arrangements curtailed by code authorities. Their system of production and distribution doesn't conform to the one approved by the administration. Hence difficulties.

For instance, one colony has been cutting lumber and trading it for wheat in an adjoining state. Code authority intervened. Why? Non-observance of code hours, code wages, price-fixing, price maintenance, cost accounting formula, ond so on. Unfair competition, it is held.

A conference of representatives of co-operative and self-help groups has been unable to get any definite assurances of help in solving their problems from any of the departments of government. They have gone through the alphabet. They are not regular business, so the RFC and the NRA can't help them. They are not unemployed and they are not asking for relief as individuals, so the relief organizations can't help them. They feel, however, that they are doing a permanent service for the unemployed of the country which the government should recognize; consequently they are planning to enlist the support of congress. There seems no reason why they should not have it.

Company Unions Trounced

Joseph B. Eastman, federal rail co-ordinator, gave company unions a trouncing railroad managements won't soon forget in testifying before a senate committee in support of the Dill bill to put "teeth" in the railway labor act.

Eastman told the senators railroad managers support company unions because they can control them, whereas that is not the case with genuine unions organized by the free will of the workers. Of course what he said applies with equal force to company unions in all industries. Yet employers go on pretending they have no interest in the form of organization their employes adopt and company unions are organized because the workers want them.

Eastman argued for statutory provisions proposed in the Dill bill guaranteeing independence of railroad labor organizations and freedom of choice to employes in selecting their labor representatives. Such legislation is in line with national policy as expressed in Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act and should be speedily adopted.

Profits and War Making

Adoption by the senate of the Nye-Vandenberg resolution for a sweeping investigation of the activities of the munitions making interests should do much to tear the veil of mystery from profit as a factor in the promotion of war.

The committee of seven which is to make the investigation inquiry is charged with the duty of investigating the extent to which munition makers encourage war through propaganda, what their profits are and whether it is desirable to set up a government monopoly to manufacture the weapons of war. Broad powers have been given the committee and in all likelihood it will be able to throw a big light on the munitions interests and their profits and activities.

If the committee can find out whether or not, in Senator Vandenberg's words, we shall be permitted "to live at peace among ourselves and with our neighbors without artificial encouragement to friction and misunderstanding, then to conflict and then to disaster," it will have well spent the $15,000 placed at its disposal.

Economic Balance Imperative

The American Federation of Labor continues to point out that an economic structure cannot endure when the forces of production and consumption are out of balance.

Management is now trying to evade this principle, the federation charges. This is a dangerous factor in the present situation and should be brought to the attention of the entire nation. The federation says:

"Last summer, when business was on the verge of bankruptcy, employers joined willingly in the re-employment program, to shorten hours, raise wages and put men to work. This spring, although they are more able to raise wages, when the president urged a 10 per cent cut in hours and 10 per cent increase in wages, the only large industries to respond were those where labor organizations were strong or strikes were feared: automobiles, steel, bituminous coal.

"Cases where wages were raised to prevent unionization, as in steel and automobiles, and numerous cases where workers were laid off for joining a union are striking evidence of how ownership is trying to evade the principle of balance and the purpose of NRA."

COMPANY PAYS 'UNION'S' EXPENSES

Washington, April 26.—At a NRA hearing on a proposed code for the telephone industry, Chas. Cooper, vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, admitted that the Bell system pays the "reasonable expenses" of company unions. Minutes of the meetings are sometimes disclosed to the management, he said, though not all the proceedings are made known.

"Would employers pay the expense of sending employes to this code hearing?" Cooper was asked.

"That is a question for individual employer divisions to answer," Cooper replied. Personally, he said, he thought the employers would pay the "reasonable" expenses, but added that to his knowledge no employes had been sent to Washington with that understanding.

Representative William P. Connery, Jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, made an unscheduled appearance at the hearing and reminded those present that Congress intended to have company unions "definitely outlawed" under the National Industrial Recovery Act.

After quoting from sections of the Congressional Record relative to the passage of the act, the Congressman flatly declared that any form of company union which is allowed to remain in existence "is against the intent and law of the congress of the United tates."

The man who says "I forgot" to demand union goods or service is a full brother to the one who "rocks the boat."

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Natural are the objections raised by school teachers of New York to the statement made by Dr. Emil Altman that of the 36,000 teachers in New York City's public school system 1,300 of them are somewhat unbalanced, extremely nervous, subject at times to hallucinations and in consequence arouse nervous irritability among pupils.

The teachers' organizations are aroused, are really mad at the doctor. Despite their indignant denials there is probably some foundation for the charge. Why wouldn't there be? Conditions in many cities are such that a teacher would be justified in going stark mad. In many places the meager pay of teachers has been reduced, the hours of work lengthened and burdens otherwise added. Many have been discharged, others threatened with disemployment, payment made in script that must be heavily discounted if cashed, and salaries unpaid for months or years.

Possibly the hallucinations of teachers may take the form that sometime there will be social justice for them; that they may be well paid; that their great service to humanity may be recognized; that they may be relieved from tyrannies of ignoramuses on school boards, and that, in fact, they will be treated with consideration and justice.

Love of human nature for familiar scenes is interfering with the planned economy and transplantation of stranded populations projected by Federal Relief Director Hopkins. The Hopkins idea has been to move idle persons from towns and areas where there is no work into sections where there is work and they can become self-supporting. But this involves breaking home ties, acquaintanceships and familiar environments, and Hopkins is meeting with difficulties. Again men and women do not turn easily to unfamiliar occupations; what they want is the old job back.

So Hopkins is not making much headway and admits there are still a lot of stranded people. He would like to move a lot of coal miners, for instance, to places where steel mills, lumber camps, road building and other things need more workers, but he faces the resistance of old homes, old friends and old environment. He says thusly: "The more I see of this the more I feel these people will have to have some kind of economic adjustment right where they are. Home ties, hillside homes, state lines and every other factor enters into it. We had hoped to move a million people from stranded industrial districts to farms, but we haven't found the million yet who will consent to be moved."

Hopkins is still working on his problem; he is debating whether to apply it to the young fellows "who are not so tied down to things as they are," or launching some kind of a new homestead plan that will attract the old folks into new locations.

President Roosevelt is right, not Mussolini, the London Sunday Express points out in an editorial.

"Mussolini cuts all food prices and rents on all dwellings," said the Express. "He cuts, too, salaries in excess of £2 ($10) a week.

"Roosevelt works the opposite way by raising wages and prices all around. Mussolini wants to reduce the cost of living. Roosevelt seeks to increase purchasing power. Roosevelt is right. What the people need is a means to buy themselves back to prosperity."

Eastman Urges Ban on Railway Company Unions

Managements Oppose National Unions Because They Can't Readily Control Them, Tells Committee.

Washington, April 19.—Railroad managements prefer company unions because they can more readily influence their policies than would be the case with national organizations, Joseph B. Eastman, federal railroad co-ordinator, told the senate interstate commerce committee, in urging support of the Dill bill to strengthen the railway labor act.

The standard railroad labor organizations are supporting the bill, which would abolish company unions. The measure contemplates creation of a national adjustment board for adjustment of disputes and reorganization of the present United States board of mediation into a national mediation board and reduction of the membership from five to three.

Eastman said the railway labor act had been tried for eight years, that it had served a good purpose, but was lacking in that it provided "no penalties or other specific means of enforcing the duties which it imposed." He sharply criticized company unions and said in part:

"To understand this 'company union' question you must realize the influence which a company is able to exert over its employes, if it cares to use it, particularly in a time when jobs are not to be had for the asking. It is like the power of life and death: for it means the power to deprive a man of the very means of subsistence.

"The influence may be exerted at the time when a man wants a job, by making him agree to limit his freedom of choice in the matter of labor organizations, or it may be exerted after he becomes an employe, by instilling in him the fear that if he does not do as the company wishes, he may lose his job.

"Bear in mind that there are any number of plausible reasons which may be conjured up for demotion or dismissal, and that the real reason need not be brought out into the open. In addition to this use of fear, which is a most potent instrument of influence and easy to employ, there is the hope of gain. This is utilized by paying the salaries of officers or in other ways meeting or helping to meet the expenses of favored organizations and extending concessions of this sort to them which would not be extended to organizations which are not favored.

"In the investigations which my staff has made, I have gone rather exhaustively into this matter, and I entertain no doubt whatsoever that the chief reason why railroad managements prefer so-called company unions is because they can more readily influence their policies and management than would be the case with national organizations. Nor do I have any doubt as to the fact that they have in the past played a larger part in both the initial organization and the subsequent operations of these company unions. Proof of this fact can be supplied, if necessary, but for present purposes I do not believe it to be necessary."

STRIKE SETTLED.

Fall River, Mass.—A strike of 2,200 workers at the American Printing company, the largest cotton print plant in Fall River, has been settled, with workers and plant officials agreeing to submit their disputes to arbitration. The workers struck in protest against the discharge of an employe.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Jobs, Payrolls, Show Continued Gains in March

Employment Increase of Over 400,000 Reported by Labor Department—Job Index Rises.

Washington, April 26.—Continued gains in employment and payrolls were announced by Secretary of Labor Perkins in making public the figures gathered by the bureau of labor statistics for March.

The total increase in employment over February for all the private industries reporting to the bureau was estimated at 419,500 and the total gain in weekly payrolls was estimated at $12,904,000. This means a return to private industry of approximately 2,750,000 workers since March, 1933, and an estimated increase of $79,000,000 in weekly wages. The gains in employment and payrolls were widely distributed among the manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries, Miss Perkins said.

"The ninety manufacturing industries showed an estimated increase of 255,000 employes, and a payroll increase of approximately $8,475,000," Secretary Perkins announced. "There was also an estimated increase of 163,600 in the number of workers employed in the non-manufacturing industries reporting and an estimated rise of $,437,000 in their weekly payrolls.

"Employment in the manufacturing industries increased 4 per cent and weekly factory payrolls rose by 6.9 per cent in March.

"The index of employment represented the highest point recorded since December, 1930, and payrolls advanced to the highest level since August, 1931. While gains in factory employment from February to March have been shown in twelve of the last fifteen years for which data are available, last month's gain of 4 per cent in employment is much more pronounced than the increase reported in March of any previous year."

The increases in factory employment and payrolls over the month interval were particularly pronounced in the "durable" goods group, these industries showing an increase of 5.6 per cent in employment from February to March, coupled with an increase of 10.3 per cent in payrolls. The other manufacturing industries showed gains of 2.7 per cent in employment and 4.2 per cent in payrolls, according to the report.

PURE OIL REFINERY RECOGNIZES UNION

Port Arthur, Tex.—Officials of the Pure Oil refinery at Smith's Bluff, near here, recognized Local No. 228, Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America, as the collective bargaining agency for the men in the plant. The agreement is regarded as a big victory for organized labor. The Pure Oil refinery is the first refinery in the Sabine district to recognize an American Federation of Labor union as the proper representative of refinery employes in negotiating contracts covering wages, hours and work conditions.

Officials of the Pure Oil refinery took action favoring the union during the visit of Dr. Stocking, of the petroleum labor policy board to this territory. Employes in the plant were organized almost 100 per cent and had requested recognition by the management. Following a hitch in this they circulated a petition for an election of representatives. On the arrival of Dr. Stocking he and J. L. Coulter, international secretary of the Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers, conferred with the management of the refinery at Port Neches, with the result that recognition was granted without the formality of an election.

Reflecting the prevalent enthusiasm over the unionization of the Pure Oil refinery, Local No. 23 of the Refinery Workers here initiated 150 members at its last meeting, with fifty applications held over.

NEW SCHEME TO GIVE COMPANY UNIONISM MORE POWER PRESSED BEFORE LABOR ADVISORY BOARD

Washington, April 12.—A definite campaign to hamstring the effect of the president's encouragement of employe organization in industry is apparent in Washington. Privately antagonism toward the A. F. of L. is as vociferous and as illogical as at any previous time in history, expressed chiefly by corporation attorneys. Publicly there is more subtletry. The company union is still the wedge of the attack.

Battle lines were formed at a meeting of the NRA labor advisory board against the inclusion of company union representatives on the industrial relations board to be set up under the code for the shipbuilding industry. Gen. Johnson favored inclusion of the company union on the board. He thinks it should have one of the three labor representatives, all of them to be nominated by the labor advisory board and appointed by him. Labor objects.

Johnson argues that only 25 per cent of the workers in the industry pay union dues; that the other 75 per cent should have a representative; that the company union should be recognized as their representative. The Johnson-Richberg interpretation of the president's executive order on employe representation seems to support his position.

Labor argues that the company union was organized many years ago as a strike-breaking tool of the employers and has always been company dominated. Acceptance of Johnson's argument, they say, would mean the end of genuine collective bargaining, would emasculate the effectiveness of the industrial relations board. With four of the six members representing the companies, the appointment of a company chairman would probably follow, and negotiations regarding labor conditions would be a farce. It is believed the A. F. of L. will refuse to accept Johnson's argument.

A. F. of L. spokesmen are also outraged at the future prospect of being forced, as a result of the Johnson-Richberg interpretations, to sit down in arbitration disputes with communists. With A. F. of L. unions asking for wage scales graduated according to skills, training and experience, and communist representatives asking for a flat wage for all workers, collective bargaining is again a farce.

Labor is asking whether industry and the communists are joining hands against the A. F. of L. and whether as a result it will be forced to carry on its fight for collective bargaining even against the NRA.

A resident in a street undergoing repairs protested about a pile of broken paving outside his front gate.

Resident (shouting to one of the men on the job)—Can't you take this away?

Good-natured Irishman—Where will I take it?

Resident (clearly and forcefully)—You can take it to hades!

Irishman—Hadn't I better take it to heaven. It would be more out of your way there.

Maximum Penalty for Code Violator Drastically Reduced by Sympathetic Court.

Trenton, N. J.—The inclination of federal judges and attorneys to deal leniently with employers caught red-handed in flouting the labor section of NRA codes was strikingly illustrated here in the case of the Allied Dye and Print Works, Inc., of Clifton, whose officials pleaded guilty to a bill of complaint charging them with eleven specific violations of the code for the silk dyeing and printing industry which stipulates that production must be halted from 6 a.m. Saturdays to 6 a.m. Mondays.

Three counts of the information charged Saturday employment. The other eight allegations were that the company employed its workers more than eight hours a day on eight days in January. Counsel for the defendant said the violations were due to lack of co-ordination between dyers and printers. He claimed silk run through the printing machinery Friday nights had to be placed on the drying machinery Saturdays or the materials would be spoiled, and the Saturday work which the management forced on the employes was caused not by wanton determination to violate the law but merely to save the profits that would be lost from spoiled materials caused by running the printing machinery on Friday nights, implying that the machinery just ran itself without human volition.

United States district attorney recommended leniency to Federal Judge Phillip Forman. Besson admitted that the national industrial recovery law provided a maximum fine of $500 on each count, but under the circumstances he suggested that a fine of $120 be imposed for each of three counts and $80 each, for the other eight, $1,000 in all, instead of $5,500 maximum provided by the letter of the new law. Judge Forman reflected Besson's sympathy for the company and let the concern off with a $1,000 fine, which the officials paid with the promise never to violate the code hours again.

The case was said to be the first criminal prosecution of its kind in the United States.

TEXTILE WORKERS OFFER LABOR PLAN FOR WOOLEN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY

Wages of 1929, 35-Hour Week and Code Authority Representation Demanded.

New York.—A six-point program asking the restoration of wages to the 1929 level, the 35-hour week, the setting up of uniform standards throughout the wool industry, immediate action on the question of the machine load, representation on the wool code authority, and the setting up of machinery for the arbitration of labor disputes was presented to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers by officials of the United Textile Workers after a series of conferences between officials of the two associations here.

Labor was represented by Francis J. Gorman, Thomas F. McMahon, William J. Dunlap and George M. Jabor. The program was presented to Arthur Beese, president of the association.

The program presented by the the United Textile Workers follows:

1929 Wages, Not Wage Rates.

1. We are asking for the restoration of wages paid in 1929. This does not mean the hourly rate, but means the restoration of the full purchasing power of 1929. This, of course, means a substantial increase in hourly rates because of the reduced number of hours under the N. R. A.

2. In connection with this wage demand, it is also essential that we have a leveling out process and the setting up of the uniform standards throughout the industry.

3. Immediate action on the part of the wool textile code authority on the question of the machine load in order that all employers engaged in the production of wool products can be placed on the same basis.

4. Reduction in hours of labor to no more than thirty-five hours in any one week.

Code Authority Representation Necessary.

5. We reiterate our insistence for representation on the code authority in the industry in order that labor at all times may be informed of the developments and may assist in combating the damaging effects of employers who are still chiseling and practicing cut-throat competition.

6. Some machinery for the purpose of settling strikes is becoming more essential day by day. While this industry at the present time is more or less free from labor disputes, it is the aim and purpose to keep it so. However, we, the representatives of the workers, feel it cannot be done unless the proper machinery is set up for the adjustment of any differences that might arise.

RECRUITER OF STRIKE-BREAKERS ARRESTED IN NORTH CAROLINA

Los Angeles, April 26.—A spirited and enthusiastic strike is being conducted here against the Mission Hosiery mills by Branch 43 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

The company, despairing of securing any local strikebreakers, has its agents in the east and the south recruiting the scum of the industry in an effort to start the mill up with non-union help. None of the strikers have deserted the ranks.

Greensboro, N. C.—A. J. Cobert, "scab-herding" for the Mission Hosiery mills of Los Angeles, was jailed here for hiring a crew of thirty-five knitters to break the strike at the California mill.

North Carolina requires anyone hiring workers for jobs out of the state to secure a state license which costs $500. In addition a city license costing $300 is required.

Colbert was held by the police until he could raise the needed $800 but the strikebreakers were permitted to leave for California in a specially chartered bus.

Colbert's arrest was brought about by the prompt action of labor men here including active members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

MOLDERS WIN WAGE RAISE IN RENEWING 42-YEAR-OLD STOVE INDUSTRY AGREEMENT

Washington, April 19.—Successful conclusion of a collective bargaining agreement, providing for a 10% wage advance to molders and coremakers, has been reported to the national labor board by the International Molders' union and the Manufacturers' Protective and Development association.

The association is the manufacturers' organization in the stove industry, which together with the Molders' union promoulgated forty-two years ago the first national wage wage agreement announced in this country.

This year the parties reported to the national labor board that they were unable to make an agreement. At a hearing held on Jan. 23 they requested the board to impose a uniform wage scale on the industry as a whole, particularly on manufacturers not members of the association. The board on March 2 notified the parties that it was without power to do this and deprecated any interruption by the parties of their long established practice of collective bargaining. The board recommended renewal of the wage conference which began in New York on April 6.

The new agreement with the wage increase goes into effect June 18 to the end of the year.

In notifying the board, Lawrence O'Keefe, president of the International Molders' union, stated "this was satisfactory to both sides and our agreement of over forty years' standing is again renewed."

LOUISIANA LABOR PUSHES BILL TO TAKE OVER PUBLIC UTILITY

New Orleans, April 26.—A bill backed by New Orleans labor organizations giving the city power to take over the properties of New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and operate them in place of the private corporation, will be introduced in the Legislature, and Mayor Walmsley has assured representatives of labor that he will support it, it was announced at a meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Mayor Walmsley, at a conference attended by A. P. Harvey, president of the council, and members of a municipal ownership committee named for this purpose, "told us that he couldn't do anything but approve such a bill," Harvey declared.

The Louisiana Federation of Labor already has approved the plans of the next session of the Legislature, Edward Veillon, chairman of the municipal ownership committee, announced.

CODE CHISELERS COMPELLED TO PAY $20,000 BACK WAGES

New York.—Every employe of every company in New York state operating under NRA codes who has not been receiving code wages was urged by Nathan Straus, Jr., state director of the National Emergency council, to file complaints with his office.

He said that in two weeks about $20,000 had been turned over to his office in back pay due to employes not receiving wages stipulated under the codes, and that these wages had been given to the workers. In one day his office paid out $1,500 in back wages due workers and withheld by chiseling employers.

Boy—I'm too polite to say it, madam.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. chose, or rather that was chosen for him.

Wirt Is Well-to-Do.

Dr. Wirt is not a humble, hard-working, low-paid Hoosier schoolmaster, a hero and a martyr in a sacred cause. He is said to receive $15,000 a year salary as the directing head of the public schools of this city of 110,000 population, and that his wife is on the payroll for $6,500 a year. Aside from that he is alleged to have received substantial fees for professional services rendered in the inauguration of the Gary educational system in more than 200 other American cities since the beginning of the depression.

Dr. Wirt lives in regal style in a castle set amidst a beautiful estate in the famous Dunes on the shore of Lake Michigan about nine miles from the center of the business district of Gary. It is said that Dr. Wirt also owns a beautiful villa on the picturesque Hudson river, where he lavishly entertains his friends during the summer months.

Is Retainer of Steel.

Dr. Wirt has acquired his commanding position by being a faithful retainer of the U. S. Steel corporation for the last quarter of a century. He holds his position as head of the Gary schools through the good will of the board of education, which is selected by the city councilmen, whose election is dictated and manipulated by Bill Gleason, superintendent of the steel corporation's Gary mills and political boss for the corporation.

Dr. Wirt's charges are characterized here as "U. S. Steel corporation politics." Indiana holds a state-wide primary election May 8. Illinois held a primary election April 10. Dr. Wirt hurled his charges well ahead of the Illinois primaries. The U. S. Steel corporation has huge mills in both states. There will be primary elections and political conventions between now and September in various other states where U. S. Steel has vast holdings.

Candidates Galore in Gary.

There are more than 500 candidates for office in Gary at this writing. There are seven candidates for mayor alone, three of whom are said to be U. S. Steel men. There are 1,800 candidates in Lake county, of which Gary is a part. It is charged that U. S. Steel always runs "splitters" when deemed necessary; "divide and conquer," its policy.

U. S. Steel longs for the "good old days" when it did not have to bother about unions, collective bargaining, codes, NRA or any other interference.

Dr. Wirt was sent in as a pinch hitter and proved a flop. The question arises, Will U. S. Steel, a hard taskmaster, reward or punish Dr. Wirt?

SHIPYARD STRIKERS REJECT 6 PER CENT PAY INCREASE

Camden, N. J.—An offer of a 6 per cent pay increase by the New York Shipbuilding company was refused by representatives of the 3,000 striking employes.

Union leaders replied that they would not consider an increase of less than 25 per cent. Their original demands were for a 37½ per cent raise.

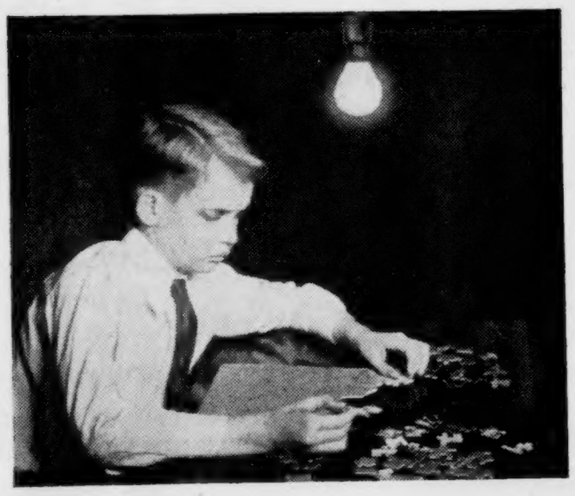
Poor Lighting BREEDS POOR EYESIGHT



Just as insanitary conditions breed poor health, so does poor lighting breed poor eyesight. Here is a boy working on a jig-saw puzzle under an unshaded lamp of a low wattage. He is doing serious damage to his eyes by straining them.

It is simple to substitute a lamp of 75 watts and to see that it is properly shaded. Check all the lighting in your home right now. Remember that good lighting is CHEAP. With reduced electric rates and extra electricity available to nearly every home at no added cost, you can use more lighting at little or no increase in your electric bill. For reading, studying, sewing . . . change the bulbs in your lamps to the 75-watt size. They cost no more.

One of our Home Lighting Advisors will gladly go over the lighting in your home and assist you in providing proper lighting for every purpose. This service is free to our customers.

State Labor Forces Faced With Major Problems at Meet

Thirty-seventh Convention Opens Monday at Memphis.

R. SPENCER MILLER TO HOLD INSTITUTE

Indications Point to Largest Attendance in Years at Annual Sessions of Organized Workers in Bluff City.

W. E. CHEEK

One of the most important gatherings—if not, indeed, the most epochal in the history of Tennessee organized labor will open Monday at Memphis, with headquarters at the Gayoso hotel.

Reports from every section of the state indicate that a record attendance of delegates will be present to discuss many major problems which have arisen within recent months, and which call for the best thought of active workers for their intelligent solution.

A feature of the sessions will be a round-table institute under leadership of Spencer Miller, Jr., on the subject of the National Recovery program. It was tentatively agreed at a conference here last Saturday between Dr. Miller and state labor officials that the institute will be held Monday, subject to change should the program of the Bluff City unionists interfere. In such case, the date will probably be set for Tuesday morning or afternoon. Delegates may look forward to an interesting and profitable session in the institute, as Dr. Miller is recognized as one of the nation's foremost authorities on economic affairs. Members of the state labor body recall with pleasure a similar session held under leadership of Dr. Miller at the Nashville convention two years ago.

Secretary W. E. Cheek, in Chattanooga for the address of Secretary Perkins Saturday, said he is constantly receiving credentials for delegates from various central bodies and local unions throughout the state. From the large number which have already been returned, Mr. Cheek said, it is almost certain that the convention will be the biggest from the standpoint of attendance held in many years. Each of the five principal cities, he declared, will have unusually large delegations, and many of the smaller towns and communities, some of which have never sent a representative, have filed credentials for one or more delegates.

It is understood that the Memphis labor movement is preparing to care for the guests in the usual manner, which means that the "playtime" of the visitors will compensate for the many hours of serious thought necessary to meet the problems which will be brought up for consideration.

Chattanooga delegates will leave Saturday afternoon and Sunday, some going by rail and others in cars.

Electrical Worker Compares Rates On Domestic Power

McDaniels Figures T. V. A. Charge Less Than Half Now Exacted.

By E. E. McDANIELS
Business Manager Local 175, Electrical Workers.

The question of how we will face the power issue seems simple to me. We have had several years of experience with private ownership, and we should know by this time that the prices we pay per K. W. H. are out of reason. Still it is legal, according to the decision of the state board of public utilities. It seems that the proper way to express these decisions would be "legalized robbery." Why should we support any corporation that pays its employes wages far below that paid in other similar lines?

Now permit me to give you some facts about the policy of the Tennessee Power company. First, I wish to remind you of the prices that you are now paying for power and lights in comparison with those which will be charged by the T. V. A.

On a minimum bill of $1.00 the Tennessee Electric Power company's rate for 60 K. W. H. would cost you $3.38.

To obtain the above cost the bill was figured on the basis of:

First 25 K. W. H. @ 6½c	=$1.62½
Next 35 K. W. H. @ 5 c	= 1.75
Average cost per K. W. H. 5.6 cents. Total	$3.37½

On a minimum bill of 75c the Tennessee Valley Authority rate for the same 60 K. W. H. would cost you $1.70.

To obtain this cost the bill was figured on the basis of:

First 50 K. W. H. @ 3c	=$1.50
Next 10 K. W. H. @ 2c	= .20
Average cost per K. W. H., 2.8 cents. Total	$1.70

The average cost to you, Mr. Consumer, on the Tennessee Valley Authority rate would be $3.38—minus $1.70, which equals $1.68. In plain figures, the Tennessee Valley Authority power would cost you for the same 60 K. W. H. approximately half of what the Tennessee Electric Power company charges you.

The Tennessee Electric Power company has another rate which they call their promotional rate (in reality, a "come along rate"), which is based on the consumer using as much or more K. W. H. per month as he did the same month the past year. Provided the consumer uses as much this month as he did the same month last year, the Tennessee Electric Power company will give him a few extra K. W. H. at no cost. The few K. W. H. they give serve as a big advertising scheme in order to get the consumer to add additional lights or appliances in order to benefit from the few K. W. H. given. What they are trying to do, Mr. Consumer, is to lead you into using enough light or K. W. H. to increase your bill year by year.

The Tennessee Electric Power company could give you twice as many K. W. H. for the same amount of money as they now charge and raise their employes to a living wage.

The Tennessee Valley Authority will give you approximately twice the number of kilowatts for the same money as the Tennessee Electric Power company now does and, at the same time, pay the workingman double the wage that the power company pays.

The Tennessee Electric Power company pays linemen 58 cents per hour. At 40 hours per week this would be $23.20.

Tennessee Valley Authority linemen receive $1.00 per hour; for a 40-hour week this would amount to $40. All skilled mechanics are paid $1.00 per hour.

All I ask is that you study this set-up, then when the time comes vote for Tennessee Valley Authority power and public ownership.

The Issue at Harriman

During last summer employes of the Harriman Hosiery mills, main industry in a town of some 4,700 in upper East Tennessee, organized a union, depending on the law of the land, as expressed in the National Recovery Act, to protect those who joined against discharge, which they doubtless knew would be inevitable were it not for the protection afforded by Section 7-a of the Act.

As a result of their temerity, twenty-three of the leaders were immediately stricken from the company payrolls, and a strike of some 500 to 600 other employes followed. The Regional Labor Board at Atlanta, after hearing the evidence, ruled against the mill heads, and set out plans for ending of the strike.

Assuming an arrogance seldom displayed against an arm of the United States government by any citizens, the mill management and its attorneys refused to comply with the board's ruling, and when the National Labor Board, after numerous hearings and the taking of voluminous evidence, sustained the verdict of the Regional Board, the company officials became even more defiant, and eventually a virtual rebellion against the United States Government, presumably initiated by them, caused perhaps half the business firms in the town to remove the Blue Eagle, insignia of fairness and patriotism, from their stores and shops.

At this writing personal representatives of Gen. Hugh Johnson have just completed another effort to adjust the difficulty, and settlement may have been made before this issue of The Labor World reaches its readers.

However, it is well to remember that the National Labor Board, representing the United States Government, said:

> The Harriman Hosiery mills has infringed the rights of its employes to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, as recognized by Section 7-a of the National Recovery Act, by ENTERING NEGOTIATIONS IN BAD FAITH, with the definite intention not to make any agreement with the representatives of its employes.

The issue at Harriman, therefore, is not altogether a case of union or non-union, but the immediate task of Gen. Johnson is to decide whether a country lawyer who parts his name in the middle and a board of small-town mill barons, drunk with an unbroken reign of master-and-man power over employes in the mill, can successfully defy the government of the United States, thus opening the way for a complete collapse of the Recovery Program instituted by one of the greatest Presidents the country ever had, and backed by practically every real American, whatever section he may reside in, or whatever may be his political inclinations.

Commissioner Jacobs Urges Closer Co-Operation Between Labor, Social Worker Groups

In a message to the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, which opens in Memphis Monday, released Thursday for readers of The Labor World, William E. Jacobs, commissioner of labor for the state of Tennessee, urges upon the organized workers of the state that they take such action as will insure continuation of various labor laws, and advises closer co-operation with the railroad brotherhoods and the state and national departments of labor.

Mr. Jacobs points out the necessity of constant contact among various forces working for social legislation, and recalls the nation-wide conference held in Washington in February under direction of Secretary Perkins. Plans were made at this conference, the official reports, for regional and state organizations for the promotion of uniform labor and social laws, and he urges the Tennessee Federation to indorse this movement and take an active part therein.

Commissioner Jacobs' message follows:

To the Editor of the Chattanooga Labor World, Officers and Members of the Thirty-seventh Convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, Memphis, Tenn. Greetings:

Realizing the seriousness of the present economic situation and the importance of the salaried people's taking advantage of the great opportunity afforded them by the president of our country to organize for self-preservation and advancement in the same manner and to the same extent as was granted to the employers of labor under the National Recovery Act, I urge you to take such action as you may deem necessary to continue the present female and child labor laws under the National Recovery Act permanently in effect. Improve all state labor laws, and strengthen the present very friendly relations that exist between the Transportation Brotherhoods and the American Federation of Labor.

The United States department of labor held a conference in Washington this spring which was composed of delegates from the various departments of labor and representatives of the

WILLIAM E. JACOBS

American Federation of Labor from all forty-eight states in the Union.

Tennessee was represented in this conference by myself and Brother R. M. Cooke, a representative of the American Federation of Labor.

The purpose of this conference was to agree, if possible, on a plan of uniform laws, which, it is hoped, will be adopted by all states in the Union. This would be a very desirable thing to bring about as it would eliminate the old stock argument (can't compete) used by the opposition to defeat proposed labor legislation introduced in the various state legislatures for the betterment of the salaried people.

It is a recognized fact that labor legislation, nationwide in scope, such as has been achieved under the codes of the National Recovery Act, has been productive of great good to the working people of the country and has brought about the reduction of unsound competition between the states, and a resolution was passed at this conference approving the continuance of the female and child labor regulations in the codes beyond the present terms of the National Recovery Act as a permanent part of our national economic structure; and that all labor laws be strictly enforced; and be it further resolved, first, that there be regular contact between the labor department officials, representatives of employers, and representatives of workers from competing states for the purpose of discussing and proposing labor laws which will tend to raise and unify standards for the states participating in such conferences. Second, that such conferences include representatives of the federal department of labor. Third, that such conferences be held semi-annually on a regional basis, to include the following regions: Southeast, northeast, middle west, far west and the southwest. Fourth, that such conferences consider the adoption of interstate compacts, providing uniform labor legislation or any other practical devices to achieve this objective. Fifth, that this conference urge the prompt ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution by all of the states which have not yet done so. Sixth, that all states accept the Wagner-Peyser act and establish free employment offices.

A regional conference as described above will be held in the late spring or early summer in the southeast district which will include Tennessee. I suggest that the state convention indorse the proposed legislation and name a representative to attend this meeting upon my invitation.

Much progress has been made in this state in the enforcement of the laws pertaining to labor, even though the department of labor has been badly handicapped on account of a 50 per cent cut in the budget for their operating expenses.

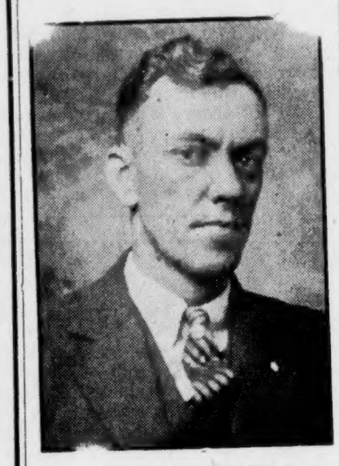
The labor laws are being enforced for the first time in the history of the state and the salaried people are being given every consideration possible by the present administration. This was brought about by the hearty co-operation of Gov. Hill McAlister, who received your indorsement in his race for governor.

My wish is that this thirty-seventh convention will be the greatest and most progressive one ever held.

Unionism Distasteful To Southern Bosses Three Decades Ago

Death Angel Calls Ernest L. Blair, Well-Known Painter

Former Central Body Official and Active Unionist Succumbs at Hospital.



ERNEST L. BLAIR

Ernest L. Blair, known to hundreds of friends throughout Hamilton county as "Bully," passed away Wednesday morning at Erlanger hospital, where he had been taken on Sunday for treatment after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Blair had been in bad health for the past two or three years, and his passing was the result of complications.

Ernest Blair was unusually active and energetic in the work of organized labor, having served for several terms as recording secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. He was formerly business agent of His local union, the Painters and Decorators. As a delegate to the Tennessee Federation of Labor at several conventions, he had become well known throughout the state, and numbered many friends in every city in Tennessee.

Mr. Blair was born Jan. 14, 1891, and came to Chattanooga twenty years ago. He immediately became identified with the union of his craft, and was a continuous member until his death. He was recognized as an unusually competent craftsman, and many of the finer homes and buildings in Chattanooga were made beautiful through his skilled hand.

He is survived by his widow, three children, Mrs. Lawrence Brinkley, Ty Cobb and Fred Blair, all of Chattanooga; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Blair; three brothers, O. N. Blair, of Douglasville, Ga.; C. F. Blair, of Piedmont, Ala., and Cecil Blair, of Sycamore, Ala.; two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Amos, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. K. M. Newby, of Dayton, O., and a grandchild.

Funeral services will be held from the Chapman funeral home Friday afternoon at 3:00, with interment at the National cemetery. A firing squad from the army post will accord full military honors.

Pallbearers, all members of Local 226, will be the following: Fred Falk, George Goode, Walter O'Donald, Homer Tarwater, George Sivley and C. F. Weidner.

DEATH CALLS FATHER OF MEMBER OF LOCAL 1785

Funeral services for Mr. Hugh Parker, father of Luther Parker, of Local No. 1785, were held Wednesday, April 25, at the home of his son.

Asbury Wright Ordered Organizers Out of Rockwood.

"BRUSH" SMITH DIGS UP SOME HISTORY

Veteran Mine Worker Goes Into Archives for Interesting Dope on Small-Town Labor Haters.

Up at Rockwood, Tennessee, sister city of Harriman, the board of mayor and aldermen, thirty years ago, found a threat of unionism distasteful and "dangerous" to the main institution of the community—coal mines—and organizers for the United Mine Workers of America were notified by the then mayor, T. Asbury Wright, that their presence in the city was not wanted.

Wright is the same man who has been so active as attorney for the Harriman Hosiery mills in their defiance of the United States government during the present troubles.

Among the reasons given for official action against the Mine Workers' union was that organization of a local "might result in closing the mines"—an awful thought—thus causing a "serious blow to the business of the town." And further, the organizers were notified by the city officials (Mr. Wright, mayor), that the coal miners had a "union of their own," and were well satisfied until outside agitators came in to disturb the picture.

"The company has positively declared," recites a resolution approved by Wright and his fellow-officials, "that it will not employ the union as an organization in its mines, and therefore the efforts of the union would be futile should it control all the miners, for it would result only in the stoppage of the coal mine." Another awful thought.

Because "The Roane Iron company now has watchmen guarding its property, for fear organizers or officers of the union may incite someone to destroy property," and all other premises considered, organizers of the union, Rice and Vaughn, were notified that their presence in the town was against its interests, and they were advised to "leave to the miners and the workmen of the town the management of their own affairs."

Thus it is made plain that the "company union" is not a new thought, and that efforts of the workers to unite for self-protection were accompanied in the old days by as great opposition as is the case today.

Also it is shown that "the leopard cannot change his spots," and the T. Asbury Wright of 1934 is the T. Asbury Wright, mayor, of 1904.

The letter from the mayor to the union organizers, together with the resolution which was approved, makes interesting reading in the light of recent events in upper East Tennessee, and The Labor World is indebted to Mr. Thomas Jefferson Smith, of Graysville, veteran mine union organizer and former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, for the unusual privilege of passing it on to our readers. Mr. Smith, who has devoted a long and useful career to an effort to make easier the lot of those compelled to dig their living from the bowels of the earth, recalls vividly, he told The Labor World, the circumstances described in the documents.

The correspondence follows:

Gentlemen:

I enclose you herewith a copy of a petition that was presented on yesterday evening to the board of mayor and aldermen at their meeting, and which was signed by a very large number of citizens and business men of the town. After consideration of the matter, a resolution was passed by the board reciting that the board took the same view of the matter as

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—When was the International Union of Elevator Constructors organized?

A.—July 18, 1931, in New York City. The organization was called the International Union of Elevator Constructors of the United States. The jurisdiction was later extended to Canada and the name changed to International Union of Elevator Constructors.

Q.—Was there an organization of blacksmiths before the Civil war?

A.—Yes. An organization called the Grand Union of Machinists and Blacksmiths was formed in Philadelphia in 1859 but it did not survive the war.

Q.—What was the Federal Society of Journeymen Cordwainers?

A.—It was the first union of shoe workers in the United States to attain any degree of permanency, organized in Philadelphia in 1794.

What Next!

Among scores of other wood products which have come out of the department of agriculture's forest products laboratory at the Wisconsin is a cattle food made of wood. Sawdust is cooked under pressure with diluted sulphuric acid. This action converts a portion of the cellulose and allied substances into sugar—and the cows like it!

WAGE INCREASE PREVENTS GRAIN SHOVELERS STRIKE

Buffalo, N. Y.—Acceptance of a compromise increase by members of the grain shovelers here averted immediate possibility of a waterfront strike. They accepted a 6½ per cent rise over the scale adopted at the close of navigation last summer.

"Pains Gone," Says Lady, After She Had Taken CARDUI

In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Unionism is Strength

The necessity of the workers organizing in strong bonafide unions to secure without question the right of collective bargaining guaranteed to them by the labor section of the National Industrial Recovery Act is well illustrated by two recent decisions of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board.

Seventy employes of the Col-Tax Refining company, Colorado, Texas, filed a petition with the board requesting that an election be held to choose by secret ballot representatives for collective bargaining.

An investigation by Joseph S. Meyers, of the U. S. Department of Labor, indicated that a large number of the employes belonged to the local union of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America. To put the facts on an incontrovertible basis, Mr. Meyers, with the consent of both the company and the union, suggested that in lieu of an election the union's membership list be checked against the company's payroll. The check showed that 85 out of the 106 employes were union members and desired to have the union as their collective bargaining agency.

On receiving Mr. Meyers' report the Labor Policy Board declared:

> "On the basis of this report and in accordance with the decisions approved by the Petroleum Administrator, the Petroleum Labor Poliby Board certifies that a majority in excess of 94 per cent of the employes of the Col-Tex Refining company, at Colorado, Texas, have duly chosen as their accredited representatives for collective bargaining Local Union No. 260 of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America as authorized by Section 7a of the National Industrial Recovery Act and Article II, Section 7, of the Code of Fair Competition for the Petroleum Industry."

In the case of the Empire Oil and Refining company, East Chicago, Ind., a check of the list of union members against the company payroll showed that 316 employes out of 327 were on the union list. Without the formality of an election the Labor Policy Board thereupon declared that "a majority in excess of 96 per cent" of the employes of the company had chosen the local union of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America as "their accredited representative for collective bargaining."

These two instances are striking proofs of the American Federation of Labor's persistent slogan that only through strong unions can working men and women safeguard their rights guaranteed by the Recovery Act.

In both cases it was the large percentage of the employes enrolled in the union which presented indisputable evidence that the formality of an election was not necessary to determine whom the workers desired to represent them in negotiating agreements with the employers.

War Prevention Made Easy

The formula for the prevention of wars is absurdly simple. It is so simple—and so far-reaching—that it will not be applied.

If all the nations whose citizens are engaged in the manufacture of war materials were suddenly to be prevented from selling any of their products to the nations who are known to be itching for war—there would be no wars.

Germany is generally thought to be desiring to get ready for war. Under such conditions, of course, it is unthinkable that England or France—or even the United States of North America—should tolerate the furnishing of military armaments to Germany by citizens or corporations of these peace-loving nations.

Quite so! And for that reason, the great British munitions makers have set up offices in Berlin. For a similar reason, French gun makers and ammunition manufacturers have their representatives in the German capital.

Nothing is said in the reports of our commerce department—not very openly, at any rate—about business opportunities in Germany that include the furnishing of machine guns and TNT and the like, to the present Hitlerized German government. Nevertheless it would be surprising to find that American salesmen of such articles of international commerce were not putting in their bids for such business.

Wars are expensive business. That is why there have been so many millionaires made in the business.

Co-operation and Farm Recovery

Farm recovery can come about only through sound economic planning. The co-operative division of the Farm Credit Administration reports that a million more animals were handled by farmers' co-operative sales agencies operating on terminal live stock markets in 1933 than in 1932. The value of the increase is placed at $7,000,000. That record is similar to those made by other major co-operative groups last year.

The cotton producers, the dairymen, the fruit farmers of various sections—all of them showed an increasing faith in the necessity and efficacy of the co-operative plan. And the result was, in a disorganized and chaotic year, that the American agriculturist made genuine progress in building for a prosperous future.

Co-operation is the keystone of agriculture—precisely as it has been the keystone of industry for many years. All the Government relief in the world, no matter how well intentioned and how expertly administered, can be of but temporary benefit. It can aid—but it can not cure a problem. It may carry farmers over lean periods—but it can not assure fat ones.

The co-operatives are permanent. They are unaffected by political considerations. They do not go out of business with a change of administration. They are here to stay—and their work never stops, never wavers. Loyal support of the co-operatives and their extension means that real farm recovery is on the way.

THEATRICAL UNIONS OPPOSE INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS BOARD

Washington, May 3.—A proposed amendment to the code for the establishment of an industrial relations board to arbitrate labor disputes in the legitimate theater industry drew sharp protests from representatives of trade unions who insisted that collective bargaining always had worked out well in the theatrical industry and that they wished to continue this method of settling differences with managers.

Virtually all the witnesses who testified on behalf of the unions said they would not accept the industrial relations board and that they would not consent to anything except collective bargaining.

Speaking for the American Federation of Musicians, Gen. Samuel T. Ansell said acceptance of the proposal made by the League of New York Theaters for an industrial board would mean "involuntary servitude" for the members of the crafts. He said:

"The very moment you confer power on a court in the industrial world you unnecessarily take away the most cherished thing the American worker has—the right to bargain collectively. As far as the members of the union I represent are concerned, they need no interference by the government."

John Casey, of Stage Union No. 1, of New York City, and Fred J. Dempsey, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, both stated flatly that their organizations would not consent to the proposed industrial relations board. Frank Gilmore, head of the Actors' Equity association, was even more blunt.

"If the proposed provision is inserted into the code, it will be my duty," Gilmore said, "to ask the governing board of the Actors' Equity to withdraw from the code authority. I say with all deference that an industrial relations board would bring danger to our organization."

RAIL PAY DEDUCTION CUT.

Washington.—Agreement was reached April 26 on the railway wage dispute. Basic rates of pay will remain as of Jan. 1, 1932. Present 10 per cent deduction is reduced to 7½ per cent, from July 1 to Dec. 31, 1934 and 5 per cent from Jan. 1, 1935, until March 31, 1935.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Better housing for millions of people is a social problem that cannot be ignored. Throughout the land there is an increasing demand for better homes as a guarantee of better citizens. This movement, however, is not confined to this country only. Germany is moving rapidly in the same direction and England is developing a five-year program that aims to eliminate slum regions from England to Wales. The plan, of course, does not merely call for demolishment. It constructs better homes at low rentals in substitution.

Northern cities are now wideawake to the connection between slums and crime. Virtue and honesty find it hard to flourish where misery, extreme poverty and grime prevail. By far one of the best preventives for crime is to see to it that citizens are decently housed. The Wallace-Tugwell program has in view the gradual remedying of the wretched conditions of so many rural homes. Farm life and farm homes are in prospect of readjustment.

The United States must see to it that American citizens lead the world in the comfort of their homes. Slums in cities must go and rural homes should be decent and not hovels unfit for human habitation.

What are fair rates on public service utilities? The question has complexities and it will be well if the federal trade commission can clarify matters in the investigation it is about to make, upon the order of congress. The investigation will cover both private and public utility rates, one of the aims being to get a line on fair rates for such government utility projects as the Tennessee Valley enterprise. No such inquiry has ever been made, it is reported at Washington.

The Pennsylvania public service commission has issued an order for a revision of all utility rate structures on a basis of 6 per cent return. Some years ago the United States supreme court fixed a rate in an important case before the court in such a way as to lead to the interpretation of "fair return" as meaning as much as 8 per cent. Other states have recently made orders fixing the rate at 7 per cent, which has been the rule in Pennsylvania.

Fixing earnings of utility companies would be a simple matter if investment factors were really determinable. It is at this point that the difficulty arises. The federal trade commission in various inquiries and hearings has accumulated a great deal of data on that question and its general investigation will throw further light on it.

The public would have less prejudice in the matter of utilities if it knew more about what these institutions have invested. The public is bewildered by capital structures so intricate, complicated and pyramided that it is doubtful if the builders of these structures know exactly what they represent in the way of property values.

Railroad capitalization, complicated as it is, is simple in comparison with that of utilities.

The public has no objection to fair charges, but expects commissions and courts to inform it what fair charges are.

LABOR POLICY BOARD CREATED BY JOHNSON

New Group Will Handle All Questions Involving Workers Under NRA Codes.

Washington.—A labor policy board will be one of the essential features of the new organization of the national recovery administration for handling labor questions in connection with codes of fair competition, according to an order issued by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator.

The labor policy board, the office order states, "will consider all problems involving the labor provisions of codes and all questions of labor policy."

"Typical problems within the fields of this board," it adds, "are those involving hours and wages, differentials, conditions of labor, inconsistencies in codes for similar industries, etc."

The board is to include a chairman appointed by Gen. Johnson and "one representative each from the labor, industrial and consumers' advisory boards, and from the legal and planning and research divisions."

In a brief comment on the new board, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said that the fact that labor would have but one of five members would appear to make the board one-sided in the handling of labor policies. He said that labor was of the impression that the new board seemed to usurp authority already delegated to other agencies.

Howard Becomes Labor Advisory Board Member

Typographical Union President Says Workers Should Support Roosevelt's Recovery Program and Back Up NRA.

Miami, Fla.—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, enjoying a short vacation at Miami beach, was notified by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, that he had been appointed a member of the NRA labor advisory board at Washington. Mr. Howard's appointment was recommended by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

In addressing a special meeting of Miami Typographical union, Mr. Howard admitted there are many things in the codes of fair competition established under the national industrial recovery act that are not satisfactory to labor, but said it is best for working men and women to co-operate with the government because it offers the first constructive program that leans toward the things for which the organized workers have been fighting for half a century.

In regard to the codes pertaining to the printing industry, he pointed out that they are to be reopened within the next ninety days, which will give labor an opportunity to urge the correction of some faults to which the workers object.

Mr. Howard concluded his talk with the statement that the best way for labor to obtain what it wants is to co-operate with the government and work with it toward the achievement of labor's desires. He said he believed that President Roosevelt is a man whose constructive ideas and program will lead to better conditions for all.

Match and Chemical Workers Win Strikes in Barberton

Barberton, O.—The Match Makers' Local Union No. 18928 won a complete victory in their strike against the Diamond Match company here. Complete recognition of the union and elimination of the Bedeaux system were won.

Coupled with the match makers' victory, Chemical Workers' Local Union No. 19019 won their strike for better work conditions.

Both unions are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

THOUSANDS OF RAILWAY EMPLOYES PAUPERIZED BY THE DEPRESSION

Department of Labor Report Declares That Low Wages Havs Wiped Out Savings and Reduced Living Standards.

Washington, May 3.—The terrible conditions imposed on railway employes and their families by long-continued low wages since 1929 was poignantly revealed by the report, representing a joint study by the United States department of labor and eighteen standard railway unions of the effect of the depression on the families of railway employes.

As the basis for the report a representative group of 1,000 railway employes and their families were visited. Field work was carried on from May to October, and since then the replies to questionnaires have been analyzed.

No Milk for Three Years.

The depression deprived many families of their homes, wiped out their savings, compelled them to borrow on life insurance policies, caused cancellation of accident insurance policies, resulted in large debts and lowered living standards.

Some families have had no milk for three or four years, while simple recreational activities such as Sunday car rides to public parks or occasional attendance at a motion picture theater have long since been abandoned.

Deprived of sufficient food, compelled to share meager earnings with relatives or friends, the families were further handicapped by curtailment of social services such as free medical clinics, hospitals, libraries, schools and recreational centers.

Limited to Employed Workers.

The report was concerned not with the temporarily idle, but with a body of employed men and, as it states, "with one that has been by no means the least favored." Having the advantage of membership in some of the strongest unions in the country, these workers are said to have fared better in the depression than most workers.

The report looked into the lives of every occupational class of railroad workers in the twenty-one standard unions except locomotive engineers.

Deprived of Hospital Care.

Dealing with the "social income" of the railway employes, the report pointed out that thinned purses had to be stretched to accommodate unemployed friends and relatives. Pressure of more patients at clinics and hospitals had necessitated refusal to some families. It was even impossible in some cases to obtain proper emergency care. One father waited from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. with a child with a broken arm, and finally left without receiving attention.

Thirty-eight per cent of the families reported that in 1932 they had contributed cash or groceries to relatives and friends. More than one-fifth reported that they had relatives, and occasionally friends, living with them at the time of the study.

LABOR ASSAILS RUNAWAY PRICES UNDER NRA CODES

Wage Increases Since Year Ago Cancelled by Rising Costs of Living, A. F. of L. Declares, Charging Use of Code Mechanisms for Price Profiteering.

Washington, May 3.—Code mechanisms have been used for price profiteering, the American Federation of Labor declares in its current monthly survey of business.

"There is no justification for the large price increases which have been made in many products," the survey says.

"Price control is one of the chief problems before us," it continues. "It is of prime interest to labr, for wage increases have been completely canceled by rising costs of living. The individual worker's real wage today is no higher than it was a year ago, in spite of all efforts to raise it."

Heavy Industries Gain.

The survey says that business advances, which began to appear in February, increased in March. It adds:

"Gains in the heavy industries are beginning to appear; plants are ordering new machinery and equipment, as increased production brings idle capacity into use. . . Although heavy industries have gained especially this spring, they are still 55 per cent below 1929, while consumer industries are within 15 per cent of that level. It has been estimated that consumer industries are already employing 3,730,000 persons, and that even in 1929, there were only 700,000 more jobs in these industries. Clearly then, the 11,000,000 still without industrial work must count either on jobs in heavy industries or on new jobs created by shortening hours."

U. S. Steel Still Vital.

The survey emphasizes that industry is still depending on government credit. In this connection it says:

"It is significant that these gains in heavy industries are due in large part to government spending and the NRA program. Steel orders are for PWA building projects and for rails and equipment bought with government loans to railroads. Automobile orders have increased with the gains in buying power under NRA.

"Industry is still depending on government credit to finance the kind of projects which create orders for the heavy industries. Although excess reserves of banks reached a new high level of nearly $1,500,000,000 in the third week of March, bank credit to business in that week was still at the low level of the crisis period last year.

"Business gains this spring are thus due to buying power created by the NRA program and to government credit. Despite hopeful declarations by executives, there is no sure evidence as yet that business is ready to go ahead on its own power."

Sloan Opposes Employment For Idle Millions

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President of General Motors, Says Thirty-Hour Week Is a "Fallacy."

Boston, May 3.—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors corporation, belligerently opposed the mandatory 30-hour week as a job provider in an address here before the chamber of commerce.

Although millions of working men and women are living on various forms of charity while large corporations operating under NRA codes impose the 40-hour week on their employes, Mr. Sloan said that he was "entirely out of harmony with the thinking so prevalent that the hours of labor should be reduced to absorb our unemployed."

Inasmuch as practically all clear-thinking and progressive citizens know that wholesale reduction in the hours of labor is the only certain method to put the idle to work with wages to support themselves and their families, Mr. Sloan evidently believes that the only right the unemployed have is to live on the pauper rations furnished by charity and thank the Stars and Stripes that they are not thrown into the streets to starve.

Teachers' Union Recognized By Cleveland Board

Organization Is Approved by Unanimous Vote of Body.

Cleveland, O., May 3.—Local 279 of the American Federation of Teachers has won official recognition from the Cleveland school board. By unanimous vote, the board has recognized the right of the union to represent its members in dealings with the educational authorities.

The first act of the new union was to present to the board a statement of principles, wherein it was stated:

"The present salary schedule adopted in 1920 has worked well and has been unusually satisfactory and should be maintained."

This co-operative note was carried even further in another section of the statement, which asserted that the union agreed with some members of the school board that teachers should receive the same treatment as bondholders. This clause followed one pointing out that about a million dollars had been diverted from the city's operating fund for debt service.

The statement ended with a plea for federal aid for education.

"The failure of banks and railroads can only be described as a catastrophe," the clause said.

"There are no words to depict the hopelessness of our people were the schools to collapse."

The trouble with getting henpecked is that you have nothing to crow about.

taken by the petitioners, and concurred in the prayer of said petition, and directed me, as the mayor, to so advise you gentlemen and furnish you with a copy of the petition, and it is in compliance with that official duty that I address you and enclose you the copy as above stated.

Yours truly,
T. A. WRIGHT,
Mayor.

Whereas, at the instance of some dissatisfied and discharged men, the United Mine Workers organized a local in Rockwood, in October, 1903, for the purpose of getting into this local all the Rockwood miners, and thus compel the Roane Iron company to recognize the union and employ these discharged men; and,

Whereas, during this intervening six months, notwithstanding the union has employed every possible means, whether peaceful or not, to influence the miners at work to-wit: By holding frequent secret meetings; by declaring a strike; by having on hand constantly one or more walking delegates, uriging the union men to do more; by issuing rations to its members; by causing men to be made drunk, in order to pledge them; by threats against the company's property and the intimidation of men and their families, still the union has failed to gain but a small part of the Rockwood miners, many of whom have already abandoned the union and returned to work; and,

Whereas, the union attempted to organize the Rockwood miners three years ago and completely failed to do so, the miners driving the organizers from the town; and,

Whereas, the company has positively declared that it will not employ the union as an organization in its mines, and therefore the efforts of the union would be futile should it control all the miners, for it would result only in the stoppage of the coal mine; and,

Whereas, the stoppage of the coal mine would be a serious blow to the business of the town and a great loss to the men employed therein; and,

Whereas, the Rockwood miners have had almost constant employment for thirty-five years, more of them own their own homes than any like number of miners at any place in the state, have lived and labored contentedly, except when disturbed by outsiders; and,

Whereas, they are fully capable of taking care of their own affairs through their local organization, which is now under contract with the company, having a sliding scale of wages, based on the price of pig iron, by which their wages were advanced last year as high as 77 per cent; and,

Whereas, the union has evidently exhausted all peaceful means to gain its end and has been unsuccessful, and as the continuance of its efforts can subserve no good, but is likely to lead to violence—for this is the history and general outcome of these continued United Mine Workers' contests—and,

Whereas, the Roane Iron company now has watchmen guarding its property, for fear the organizers or officers of the union may incite someone to destroy property; and,

Whereas, the union is now supporting a large number of people who could and ought to be at work, but who are idle on our streets; and,

Whereas, this agitation by the union has seriously affected the business of the town and its continuance is a menace to the peace of the town; and,

Whereas, we deplore what occurred at the neighboring town of Dayton, and wish to avoid anything of the kind here; now,

Therefore, we, the undersigned citizens of Rockwood, declare,

First—That we are opposed to the actions of the union, believing they are injurious to the interests of everybody within the town.

Second—That we believe it to be our duty to the large number of miners now at work to see that they are not disturbed in their right to work, and do not lose their positions through the unlawful actions of outsiders and idle men.

Third—That we request the board of mayor and aldermen to see that the city's ordinances and the laws of the state are fully enforced with reference to these outsiders and idle men.

Fourth—That we request the board of mayor and aldermen to notify the organizers of the United Mine Workers that their business and presence in the town is against its interests, and that they leave to the miners and workmen of the town the management of their own affairs.

Constipation Symptoms Soon Go Away After Use of Black-Draught

Mrs. S. G. Ramey, of Henryetta, Okla., writes that she has taken Thedford's Black-Draught about twenty-five years, when needed, and has "found it very good." "When I have a sour stomach and my mouth tastes bitter, and I feel bilious, sluggish and tired, I will very soon have a severe headache if I don't take something. Visiting Labor Men Hear Miss Perkins

Address of Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, a feature of the Tennessee Valley Institute conducted by the University of Chattanooga last week, brought a number of prominent labor men from adjoining cities to Chattanooga last Saturday morning.

Among those who were guests of Dr. Alexander Guerry at his home at noon, at a luncheon honoring the secretary, were Sid Tiller, president of the Georgia State Federation of Labor; O. E. Petry, secretary of the Georgia state body; Steve Nance, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades; Stanley Rounds, president of the Knoxville Central Body; George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor; W. E. Cheek, secretary of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and others. A number of local labor officials also were guests of Dr. Guerry at the luncheon.

We learn from reliable sources that it was only recently that a greatly agitated woman, carrying an infant, dashed into a local drugstore and cried:

Woman—My baby has swallowed a bullet. What shall I do?

Druggist (calmly)—Give him some castor oil, but be sure you don't point him at any one.

Unemployment Insurance Topic of Spencer Miller

The people of the United States are paying a billion and a half dollars annually for relief of the unemployed, Spencer Miller, Jr., secretary of the workers' education bureau of America, with headquarters in New York City, told the Tennessee Valley institute conducted under auspices of the University of Chattanooga, in advocating unemployment insurance.

While admitting that unemployment insurance has worked more or less satisfactorily under the management of private companies, Mr. Miller asserted that it is distinctly a government function. Contending that unemployment is beyond the control of both individuals and nations, he added that "we are coming to realize that it is unfair to make men suffer for conditions over which they have no control."

He said he believed unemployment insurance enabling legislation would be passed in at least a dozen states within the next year. Such insurance, he said, could not prevent unemployment, but "it could prevent suffering from unemployment."

He voiced the opinion that if the nation's workers had held unemployment insurance when the depression began, "it would have done more good than the AAA, the CWA and other government agencies."

Victim of Gun Was Loyal Union Member

John Thomas, 35, who was shot and killed last Saturday night by an attache of a club on East Main street, was a charter member of the local Quillers' union, composed of employes of the Dixie Mercerizing company and the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher company at Ridgedale, and according to his fellow-workers was loyal to the cause, having evinced a keen interest in the affairs of the organization from the time of its formation until his tragic death.

Mr. Thomas, friends recalled, was universally liked, and a large number of his friends and fellow-workers attended funeral services Monday afternoon.

He is survived by a wife and one child.

Minister (filling out the marriage certificate)—Let me see, this is the fifth, isn't it?

Bride (indignantly)—No, sir! This is only my second.

Labor Backs Old Age Pension Bill

Washington, April 26.—Enactment of the Capper-Norton old-age pension bill for the District of Columbia was urged by William C. Hushing, legislative Committeeman of the American Federation of Labor, in appearing before a senate subcommittee which began hearings on proposed old age pension legislation.

Abraham Epstein, of the American Association for Social Security, told the committee that twenty-eight states now have enacted old-age pension laws. He said there are 135,000 beneficiaries of such legislation and that the average payment in 1933 amounted to $19, as compared with $44 monthly, which, he said, was required for institutional care for the indigent.

Epstein said the old-age pension problem is one that is becoming recognized as one of the nation's most serious, because, he explained, the number of aged is increasing while there is a corresponding lessening of their opportunities for employment.

Abolish All Wage Differentials, Plea Taken to Roosevelt

Fee-Grabbing Magistrate Roundly Denounced; Remedy Demanded.

POLL QUALIFICATION IS "UNDEMOCRATIC"

Many Constructive Resolutions in Federation Meet to Bring Increased Activity in Labor's Ranks.

The Tennessee Federation of Labor will take its appeal for abolition of the wage differentials being allowed in codes directly to the White House.

Secretary Cheek was instructed to forward telegrams to Washington in protest of the dastardly scheme big business men have invented to place the southern worker at a disadvantage under the recovery program.

The action came in form of a resolution, adopted unanimously by the convention, as follows:

Whereas, many manufacturers and business firms in the south are endeavoring to maintain and extend a system of differentials in payment of minimum wages under codes of the NRA, and base their attitude upon the so-called cheaper cost of living in the south; and,

Whereas, it is the opinion of this body, from common knowledge and statistics that the theory that the cost of living being lower in the south is erroneous in the extreme; that whatever difference exists is not a question of difference in cost of necessities, but a difference in standard of living; and,

Whereas, this body is firmly opposed to the theory that workers' conditions of employment rates of pay should be based exclusively or even primarily upon the so-called cost of living; holding rather that workers should be, and are, entitled to compensation sufficient to insure decency and comfort in all respects; therefore, be it

Resolved, by Central Labor Union of Knoxville, in regular session this date, That this body protest against any differential in payment of wages under the codes of the NRA as between any sections of the United States; and, be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this body be instructed to write Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator; President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in protest against any such differential payments under the codes; and that the delegates representing this body in the Tennessee Federation of Labor be instructed to lay this protest before that convention and urge its adoption.

The wage differential resolution was one of the barrage of resolutions which came to the convention on Monday afternoon.

J. J. (Brush) Smith, stormy petrel in the ranks of organized labor, was chairman of the important resolutions committee which was required to wade through the stupendous task.

"Fee - grabbing magistrates have come in for a trouncing at the convention. A resolution favoring the wiping out of the squires' courts was passed without a dissenting vote. This resolution, submitted to the committee by Secretary Cheek, declared:

"Be it resolved, That we favor the passage of an act that will eliminate the fee-grabbing magistrate from trying or holding court in petit cases and that courts be established presided over by emminent and reputable lawyers for the above purpose."

Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, who has been a champion supporter of the laboring man in pursuing his duties as an assistant NRA administrator, was commended by a resolution, which said, in part:

"Resolved, That the officers and delegates of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, now in session in Memphis, indorse the national recovery act in all its phases and its enforcement by the national recovery administration, and commend the work of Edward F. McGrady, and all others who have helped to give the working people a real, new deal."

The requirement of paying the poll tax to vote was opposed by the delegates. A resolution asking the next legislature to remove the necessity of a poll tax payment as a qualification to vote was approved.

"The financial barrier tends to make easier the building of strong and unscrupulous political machines," the resolution said.

Those who offered the resolution to the convention explained that they did not favor abolition of the $2 poll tax, which goes into funds for educational purposes.

The state factory department of the Tennessee department of labor will be asked to strengthen its force of deputy inspectors. Delegates offering the resolution explained that in certain counties, especially those outside Shelby in West Tennessee, it was very difficult for the West Tennessee inspector to come for inspections. It was further explained that the West Tennessee inspector is burdened down looking after the vast territory he has been assigned, especially because of the numerous factories in Memphis.

Establishment of an examining board for electrical workers was requested by the delegates in a convention offered by delegates representing this craft. It was pointed out that such action would necessitate legislative action by the general assembly and would be a "splendid safety measure."

The postoffice department at Washington will be asked to abolish the 90-

Fifty Cent Wage For Textile Workers Cited by Bolick

150,000 New Members Secured by U. T. W. of A. in Last Several Months.

"Can you believe that there exists today a plant that pays its workers 50 cents a week?"

Tennessee Federation of Labor delegates shook their heads as this question was put to them at Wednesday's session by C. W. Bolick, southern organizer for the Textile Workers of America.

"Well, it's the truth," shot Mr. Bolick. "I uncovered such a condition in a Columbus, Ga., plant. The workers toil anywhere from 50 to 55 hours a week for this pitiful 50 cents."

Citing other deplorable conditions, Mr. Bolick traced the progress made by textile workers in gaining 150,000 new members in the south during the past several months.

"These unfair, unheard of conditions have forced workers to organize," he explained.

"The textile workers want the Mason and Dixon line moved, in regard to wage differentials, somewhere between Key West, Fla., and Cuba."

A scheme allegedly being planned by mill owners was then bared by the organizer. He said that these money-mad bosses planned to close their factories this summer and then "bait" the workers into accepting a wage reduction.

"I say to these workers to meet this scheme with a demand for an increase in salary if they are thrown out of work for several months," he declared.

The ridiculous charge that southern workers are inferior to workers in the north and east was blasted by the speaker. He also said that it required just as much skill to work with cotton cloth as wool, silk or rayon. Workers in these wool, silk and rayon plants receive higher wages than cotton mill workers.

KILLEN SAYS 'YES' MAN LABOR'S GREATEST FOE

"No" Man Is Most Valuable to Management.

DESCRIBES IDEAL UNION LEADER

TVA Only Agency to Secure Relief From Excessive Power Rates.

CONVENTION CALLS T. V. A. A "GODSEND"

"A Godsend to this section" was the characterization of TVA, given in a resolution indorsing the government plan for lower electric power rates, which the Tennessee Federation of Labor passed at its thirty-seventh annual meeting.

"TVA is the only move we can look forward to for any relief from excessive charges for electrical energy," the resolution said.

It urged labor's support of only those state, county and municipal candidates for election to office who are pledged to take advantage of erecting either state, county or municipally-owned distribution plants.

Branding the "yes man" in the labor movement as the "greatest enemy" of unionism, Clair C. Killen, TVA official, advised Tennessee Federation of Labor delegates to select leaders who are not employed directly by the management.

A scorching denunciation of the "yes man" was made by Mr. Killen. He was the principal speaker at the convention gathering Tuesday morning.

"I suppose the greatest enemy of the honest administration in a union is the yes man," Mr. Killen declared. "It is very difficult to eliminate the yes men. Men inevitably tend to try to please those for whom they work. The administrator tends to take a proprietary interest in those who work for him. The result is the very opposite from the methods of science.

"Science wants to know disagreeable truths. Science is built upon the no-man. Every administrator should have, should want, no-men. It appears to me that the labor leader who is an integral part of the industry, yet who does not work for management directly, is the ideal no-man. He can force management to a realistic point of view. He can save management from making mistakes, that is, if the management will listen to him."

In a summary of his address, Mr. Killen said:

"Labor's rate of change has been somewhat slow, but in comparison it has not been abnormally so. It has seemed slower thrown against the kaleidoscopic background of a restless age. As in all other institutions, adaptation must come through men. Labor's problem is finding fit men and creating conditions which they can work. The hope for a creative contribution to management by labor rests in the beginning upon recognition that labor leadership and representation is an important form of management. An alliance once reached, real co-operation can develop.

"This does not mean that labor leadership has not great responsibilities. It has. First, to understand mass psychology better. Second, to modernize the structure of unions so that scientific methods of management may be applied.

"The real success of co-operative industrial relations rests upon voluntary services given. Labor unionism is a training in voluntary discipline. This being so, the union makes a real creative contribution to management. This realistic nature of unionism and union leadership enables the management to be really more socially and economically scientific.

"While efforts are being made in the Tennessee Valley to do a basic social and economic planning job and to develop yardsticks for the proper measurement of production and distribution of kilowatts it would seem even more necessary that all of us interested in the labor movement should also develop a yardstick to measure and develop a labor organization in keeping with the new era.

SPLENDID REPORT

All the details of the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor just held in Memphis, Tenn., were splendidly compiled for this week's Labor World by the Memphis Labor Review. Editor J. Cohen and Associate Editor Malcolm Adams showed their usual spirit of co-operation in presenting the whole proceedings in typewritten form, telling The Labor World Editor that Memphis did not intend to allow the visit to the convention to be marred by thoughts of getting out the paper. It seems that as hosts Memphis does not overlook the smallest detail, and their guests are well cared for.

Memphis Entertains Delegates, Visitors at Splendid Banquet

Tennessee Federation Calls "Spade a Spade," Birthwright Declares.

The real reason the Tennessee Federation of Labor is forging ahead was explained by W. C. Birthright, prominent unionist, at the convention's banquet at Hotel Gayoso Tuesday night. The Memphis Trades and Labor council was host to the visiting delegates.

"The federation has always been courageous, they call a spade a spade and let the chips fall where they may," Mr. Birthright declared. "This federation is free from filthy politics, religious prejudice and racial prejudice."

The banquet was a huge success. Horace Johnson, chairman of the Memphis council's ways and means committee, presided as toastmaster.

Brief talks were given by Dr. R. J. Bateman, pastor of First Baptist church; George Morris, assistant publisher of the Commercial Appeal; George Carmack, city editor of the Press-Scimitar; Hugh Humphreys, NRA compliance director for Tennessee, and others.

Mr. Humphreys requested trade unionists to report chiseling to his office and pledged a thorough and impartial investigation of each and every complaint.

It was a "union-made" banquet from start to finish.

First, the music by Nate Evans' orchestra, which is composed of union musicians, thrilled the gathering. And then came Miss Dorothy Wyckoff and her co-entertainers of the newly organized Entertainers' union.

At the end of the meal, union-made Memphis bridge cigars and union-made cigarettes were distributed.

Labor Man on Code Authority.

Washington.—The national recovery administration has announced the appointment of Louis Fuchs, manager of Local Union 11016, United Neckwear Makers union, to serve as the labor representative for the men's neckwear industry, to serve for an indefinite period.

"Let us not be like the people waiting at the railway station platform for the train that left two hours ago."

The entire session Tuesday morning was devoted to talks by Mr. Killen and other guests of the convention.

Other speakers were: Stanley Garrison, editor of the Mine Workers' Journal; A. S. Zoerk, state superintendent of trade and industrial education; H. V. Reid, chairman of the State Nonpartisan league; W. A. Chrisman, representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; C. H. Pate, 92-year-old member of the Stationary Engineers, and H. P. Hanson, one of the organizers of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and an active member of the Memphis Typographical union.

DALTON CRUSADERS

Local No. 1785 will go to Dalton Sunday, May 13, to visit the union there. All members wishing to go will meet at the hall in Ridgedale, corner Main and Dodds, at 7:30. All cars will leave at 2 o'clock. Other locals invited.

DALTON STRIKERS REJECT DONATION OF "HOME" STORE

"Tainted Money" Not Desired at Any Time.

ENCOURAGMENTS ARE POURING IN

Plasterers' Local Places a "Sales Tax" on Home Stores Groceries.

Dalton, Ga., a red-hot union town, doesn't believe in the propaganda being spread around in towns surrounding Chattanooga by Roy McDonald, owner of the Home Stores and publisher of the Chattanooga Free Press.

Mr. McDonald's employes in Dalton have been trying to convince members of organized labor there that he is not unfair to union people, and managed to prevail upon a committee of the Hosiery Workers' union which was soliciting aid for the locked out employes of the Real Silk mill to accept a cash donation of $4.00.

But the hosiery workers don't like the odor of "tainted" money, and promptly returned the contribution, informing Mr. McDonald's Dalton employes that, even though they (the Home Store employes) think Mr. McDonald is not against organized labor, he has been declared as unfair by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

In a letter to Manager Griggs, of the Dalton Home Store, Carson Beck, president of Branch 74 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, told the Home Store employes that, even though they might be close personal friends, the Hosiery Workers could not, under any circumstances, accept a donation from any of Mr. McDonald's employes.

The letter follows:

Dalton, Ga,
May 9, 1934.

Mr. Griggs,
Mgr. Dalton Home Store.
Dear Sir:

It has been brought to our attention that the Home Store contributed $4.00 to the relief committee for the relief of the strikers of the Real Silk mill. Please be assured that the committee did not know that the Home Stores were unfair to organized labor. Had they known this, we assure you that the contribution would not have been accepted.

We are informed by the committee that you claim that Mr. McDonald is not against organized labor. However, he has been so declared by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, therefore we are returning herewith your tainted contribution. However, should this be a personal contribution, made with a free will and a clear conscience, we regret that even under these conditions we cannot accept same from Home Store employes, even though they are close personal friends of ours, so under no circumstances or conditions will we accept a contribution from Mr. Roy McDonald or any of his employes.

Very respectfully,
CARSON BECK,
President American Federation of Hosiery Workers, Branch No. 74.

W. A. Baker, Typo member in charge of the Home Store fight for the printer group of unionists, expresses great satisfaction in the response to the renewed determination to go to every town and village in which McDonald operates. Mr. Baker's statement follows:

"We knew there was a great deal of resentment against the policies of Roy McDonald, but recently in talking with many persons from all walks of life, we have found it to be of greater extent than we realized," said W. A. Baker, of the printers' committee conducting the fight on McDonald and his 'Home Stores.'

"People object to his reactionary statement that President Hoover should have cut wages in 1928, to restore prosperity, and his actions in bringing in out-of-state printers to run his throw-sheet is a real sore spot.

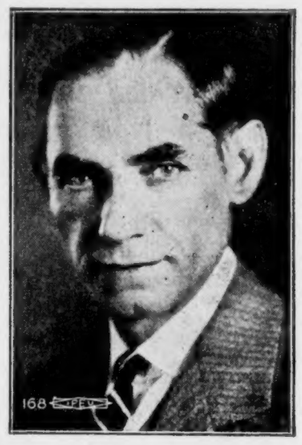
Strike for 30-Hour Week If All Other Efforts Fail---Googe

J. Cohen of Memphis Unanimously Chosen To Succeed Aymon

Cheek to Succeed Self and Aymon Elected to Legislative Chairmanship.



JAKE COHEN

At the election of officers for the ensuing year, the Memphis convention selected the following:

J. Cohen, editor of the Labor Review and president of the Memphis Trades and Labor council, president.

W. E. Cheek, Nashville, member of Carpenters' union, secretary-treasurer.

Paul J. Aymon, retiring president, of Chattanooga, legislative representative.

J. O. Nevil, Nashville; R. S. McCann, Memphis; Hughlon Akin, Jackson; A. C. Kamin, Chattanooga, and James F. Leahy, Knoxville, all members of the executive council. These men and the three other elective officers compose the council.

Installation of officers was held immediately after the election. President Cohen presided at a brief business session before declaring the meeting adjourned until the first Monday in May of 1935.

Knoxville will be the scene of the 1935 convention and representatives of the Smoky City expressed appreciation over the decision of the delegates to go to the East Tennessee city next year.

Election of Mr. Cohen by acclamation was paved when Mr. Aymon declined to be a candidate to succeed himself as president.

"You have bestowed all the honors on me that is possible and I appreciate it beyond words," Mr. Aymon said. "There is nothing more I can say for Jake Cohen than that he is my true friend and a man who has never had any 'sore spots' during his career in the labor movement."

T. R. Cuthbert, of Chattanooga, declined the nomination for secretary-treasurer and paved the way for the return of Mr. Cheek to office by acclamation.

J. O. Nevil, prominent trade unionist of Nashville, consented only after persistent requests by his delegation to make the race against Mr. Aymon for the legislative post, formerly held by Dave Hanly, beloved Nashville leader, whose position with the state department of labor necessitated his resignation.

Another example of the desire to further the cause and not promote the individuals was evidenced by Mr. Nevil after the vote had been taken and Mr. Aymon elected to the post.

In a talk that came straight from the heart of the Nashville unionist, he told the convention that their action would in no way interfere with his continued fight to better the trade union movement. Mr. Nevil's statement was significant. He expressed best wishes to Mr. Aymon and pledged his whole-hearted support to the new legislative representative in his every undertaking.

Before the election, delegates had voted down a proposal to change the by-laws and constitution of the organization to create the position of vice-president.

NRA Revision First, Legislative Action Next, "Shoot the Works" Last.

SPEAKERS CITE DAY'S GRAVE DUTIES

Pleas for Harmony Within Ranks Made by Aymon on First Day's Session of Convention.

Union labor will fight to the last ditch to curb the ripping of the "heart and teeth" out of the Wagner labor disputes bill, George L. Googe, chief of the American Federation of Labor's southern organizing campaign, declared in a stirring address before the Tennessee Federation of Labor's opening session.

"Organized labor won't stop its fight until this important legislation, now pending in congress, is passed," Mr. Googe said. "Every senator and congressman in the nation will be forced to support this measure.

"And we won't permit the Wagner bill to have its teeth and heart cut out by the financial gentry. We have enough legislation that proposes to protect labor but fails in its purpose because it is lacking in teeth."

Pointing out that the 30-hour work-week is the American Federation of Labor's objective, Mr. Googe, who has headquarters in Atlanta, said the shorter work-week is necessary to re-employ the millions of able-bodied men and women who are out of work.

"The 30-hour week must come," he said. "We won't stop until we establish it. First, we will seek it by revision of the national industrial recovery act.

"Then we will seek it by legislative action. As a third and final defense, we will use organized labor's last resort—the strike.

"We cannot continue to exist with 11,000,000 citizens totally unemployed. Of course organized labor despises a strike. But, remember, when there is nothing else left to do, the strike is a weapon that can be brought into use."

In leading the organization work in the south, Mr. Googe said he was "confronted with the fact that employers refuse to recognize the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively."

"Organized labor has been bitterly disappointed because these rights, set out in the NRA, have not been enjoyed," he said.

"We are a long way from being over the top. We must carry on the battle with new vigor. The battle must not cease."

Tracing the progress of the growth of trade unions below the Mason and Dixon line, Mr. Googe said the membership of bona fide trade unions had been doubled since last July.

"Today we have 1,200 new local unions with a total membership of 1,200,000. This is remarkable but the field for the work is still wide open. We must carry on."

Mr. Googe's address was the highlight of the session Monday morning.

Mayor Watkins Overton greeted the delegates. Mayor Overton left his home, where he had been confined for a week, to talk to the gathering at the Labor Temple. Despite his illness, the chief executive of the Bluff City made a vigorous speech.

"Organized labor never met with a greater opportunity and a graver responsibility," Mayor Overton said. "You are fortunate in having in the White House a president who realizes that labor must be recognized.

"In my opinion, it is the solemn duty to see that the Roosevelt program is carried out.

"The eyes of the world are on Tennessee because our state has a wonderful opportunity. There is no reason why there should not be an industrial development from the Mississippi river to the mountains."

UNION MEN GET PREFERENCE.

Editor The Labor World:

I understand the railroad union boys were the only ones entitled to the increase in pay just recently allotted them. Why shouldn't they get preference? They were the ones who fought for it and were responsible for its action and ready settlement. Naturally that is going to bring about an increase in membership among the different classes of railroad trainmen. Of course their interest will largely be on account of the increase. Nevertheless, it will help them and the organizations, too, providing they realize what it means to be a union man from now on and don't pull out the first time some little opposition comes up.

We, the members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, are putting forth a special effort to organize this section and give the fellows a chance to get jobs and pay they wouldn't get otherwise, because the time is coming when the leading firms of any nature will require card men only to do their respective work, especially in the building trades.

Let's get together and see just how strong we can make this section in the way of organizing them. If the government has offered its support, why shouldn't we appreciate it enough to do all we can toward making this a better world to live in for the working men and women. There are a couple of young ladies not so far from here who say they don't intend to marry a man unless he is a union man. There's a tip for some of you young sprouts.

Let us look around and see if there is something we can do to help, but don't buy any groceries at the Home Stores because that would make you go backwards.

Together we stand, divided we fail. Thanks.

Principle That Needs Emphasis

When the new basic wage rates were fixed by the NRA for the bituminous coal industry, Alabama operators protested heatedly that they could not pay the wages provided by the order. Their protests won them a modification of the order and they kept the pay differentials which they claimed were necessary to enable them to stay in business. However, the NRA set forth a principle that is significant as expressing NRA policy on southern differentials. The following paragraph from the president's statement supplementing Gen. Johnson's ruling gives the principle:

"On the question of southern wage differentials the recovery act (Section 7-C) recognizes differentials according to locality. It is not the purpose of the administration, by sudden or explosive change, to impair southern industry by refusing to recognize traditional differentials. On the other hand no region has any right, by depressing its labor, wages and hours, to invade with its cheaper product an area of higher wages and hours and thus to impose its lower standards on an area of higher standards."

The principle that no region has a right to force lower standards on regions of higher standards is one that needs constant emphasis. The president and the national recovery administration have done well to again bring it prominently to the attention of the nation.

Railroad Pay Victory

In the face of strong opposition inspired by Wall Street, railroad labor stuck steadfastly to its guns in the wage negotiations with the managements and won a victory. Instead of the further wage reduction insisted on by the managements and their Wall Street allies, the railroad workers are to get a gradual restoration of the 10 per cent pay reduction they took in 1932, until they are back to the old levels next year. They will get a 2½ per cent return on July 1, another 2½ per cent on Jan. 1 and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1.

The railroad workers are to be heartily congratulated on their success. It is a victory for restoration of purchasing power and should be a strong stmulus to recovery.

The railroad workers have been hard hit by unemployment and part-time employment, but thanks to their solidarity and powerful organization, they have suffered less during the depression than many other classes of workers.

Good in Theory, But—

Whether minorities of workers shall be represented on code industrial relations boards is a red hot issue. It may easily turn out to be the back-to-the-wall issue of the whole labor relations picture under NRA.

The president has been for minority representation. The unions say it's like proportional representation—fine in theory, impossible in practice. One union president says he will call his men o" any boards on which company union men are seated. "Either we do all representing if we are in a majority, or else we do none," he said. "If we get a minority vote we shall claim no representation; we will not join in any split delegation."

RATIFICATION OF CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT ASKED

Albany, N. Y., May 10.—The New York State Federation of Labor, the New York Women's Trade Union league, the Young Women's Christian association, New York League of Women Voters and a number of other organizations filed a brief with the senate judiciary committee strongly advocating approval by the state legislature of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution.

Citing objections to the amendment raised recently by Elihu Root, Nicholas Murray Butler and others, the brief ridiculed comparisons between the proposed new amendment and the Eighteenth amendment.

"The Eighteenth amendment attempted absolutely to prohibit the use of beverages which a substantial portion of the population felt to be desirable and harmless," the brief declares. "Of necessity there would spring up a huge underworld business whose business would be to supply this desire.

"With this situation must be contrasted the proposed child labor amendment. There is no widespread and insistent demand for the products of child labor. Even the opponents of this amendment concede child employment to be undesirable. No criminal enterprise could fill this demand, even were it present."

The brief included a list of more than 200 persons who pledged support to ratification of the amendment. They included government officials, business men, bankers, college presidents, ministers, welfare workers and spokesmen for organized labor.

Labor and Consumers Are Given Code Authority Representation

Washington, May 10.—Labor and the consumers will at least get a screened view of the administration of the codes of fair competition, according to the announcement of Recovery Administrator Johnson that he would name "advisers" from these two groups to the government members of the code authorities. The advisers will be selected from lists of names submitted by the NRA labor and consumers' advisory boards.

This decision represented a compromise reached by the general to the demand of labor and consumer advisory boards that he appoint at least one labor and one consumer representative to each code authority. There are labor members now on the coal code authority, the men's and women's garment authorities and several others.

Washington Bakers Win Higher Wages

Washington, May 10.—Washington union bakers won nearly everything they asked for after a 36-hour strike for higher wages.

An agreement for pay of bakers, apprentices and helpers reached at a conference of union officials and representatives of the employers provides that bakers shall receive $1.02 an hour for day work and $1.22 for night work. The union has asked for $1.05 and $1.25. The old scale was 90 cents and $1.08.

Helpers, who were getting 45 and 55 cents for day and night work, respectively, won their battle for a 10-cent increase in each class. Bakers' apprentitces also received increases averaging about $3 weekly.

The victory of the Washington bakers came as word was received that the 36-hour week had been won by bakers in Terre Haute, Ind., the entire Pacific coast and other sections. Gaining of the 36-hour week is significant in relation to the bakers' code, not yet signed. Employers are asking for a 40 and 48-hour week under the code. The union bakers ask 36 hours. In view of the shorter week won by the union bakers in many places, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union sees an additional reason why the code should set the week at 36 hours.

PHILADELPHIA JUDGE JAILS 18 JOBLESS AS "VAGRANTS"

Philadelphia, Pa.—Charged with being chronic vagrants and panhandlers, twenty men who were rounded up overnight by police of the Twelfth and Pine Streets station were sentenced to three months each in the house of correction by Magistrate Medway. Two of the defendants were later released when they promised to leave the city.

All of the defendants were drifters from other sections of the country, according to detectives, who had repeatedly arrested many of the men.

All were arrested as the result of a drive made along Market, Chestnut and Walnut streets.

SOUTHERN WEAVERS STRIKE.

Spartanburg, S. C.—Pending the settlement of a strike of weavers, the mill of the Highland Park Manufacturing company at Rock Hill, which employs 300 workers, is shut down.

The strike was brought about by a number of weavers and loom fixers who complained against a change in the type of cloth manufactured which, they claim, brought about an increased loom load. While operations other than weaving were not affected by the initial walkout, the remainder of the mill was forced to shut down while negotiations for settlement are pending.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

In NRA circles they still talk about company unions. And about the funny right of minority representation, which seems designed to let the company unions come in and park at the conference table.

Somebody ought to take the White House this message: In all the code hearings not a single company union has appeared to fight for a single solitary right for any worker. That ought to help some in understanding company unions. Carry it further. They talk about the rights of the unorganized and about the views of the unorganized. Nobody has ever appeared at any code hearing to talk for the unorganized.

A lot of folks never think how funny it is to talk about speaking for the unorganized. The unorganized cannot express any views, because they are unorganized.

The company union cannot speak for workers because it is dominated by the employers.

Otherwise learned men go on prattling about company unions and the unorganized, just as if these somehow had a right to be counted in the labor picture. Of course big business is spending a ton of money to keep the company union in the picture and make it look like something respectable, instead of the rat outfit that it is. They want a company union that will have the look of freedom, but that will answer to the same old wire-pulling, that will take orders as always. That's a hard job.

What employers fail to see, or else do see and are preparing for, is the fact that their tactics may force the biggest labor dispute the nation ever saw.

It's far from idle talk that the nation may be compelled to go through a tremendous conflict before the company union issue is settled.

The Alabama coal owner who threatened secession wasn't the only one of his kind. There are plenty of employers who are willing at this hour to stake everything on a gigantic conflict, hoping as they hoped in 1920, to win and destroy unions for a decade or more.

In those days strikebreakers were paid handsomely—sometimes $2 a day over the rate demanded by strikers—plus expenses. Bosses have always been willing to pay high to keep men in bondage. Bosses have done mighty little for freedom.

Today organized labor is sweeping ahead like a prairie fire. Many unions are growing faster than discipline can be built. Unions have to have discipline. Plenty of folks don't think so, but a union has a lot in common with an army. It has to stand under fire and it has to hold its lines. It is no novelty to see 20,000 men sweep into the union movement almost overnight. Usually they expect miracles and they want action quick. They don't see the long road back, they don't know the tactics of an industrial struggle, they don't know the tricks and the resources of the boss.

But America is going to have unionism, just the same. That or employer-made anarchy, and no halfway business.

Unionism is the only agency through which there can be industrial democracy, or democratic practice in industry. Company union bunk is just that much dirt in clear water.

Newspapers which took Dr. Wirt seriously and aided in ballyhooing his foolish charges of "revolution," were handed a wallop they richly deserved by labor's economic conference held recently in Chicago. The conference, representative of 635 local unions and councils, said of the newspapers and their performance in connection with Dr. Wirt:

"What people have ever witnessed a more astounding spectacle than that of reputable newspapers, in great numbers, political groups, led by men of national standing, and great commercial and business leaders, whose names have become familiar to all, hiding behind the figure of a public school superintendent in a steel town whose tenure of office depends upon the good will of the steel trust, and through his frightened lips uttering ridiculous charges of 'revolution' and 'dictatorship,' for which not a single individual amongst them has as yet ventured to take personal responsibility.

"A national sensation, heralded by streamers across the front pages of practically every newspaper in the country, was nothing more than the tale of a cad who betrayed the home of a friend by misrepresenting the casual after-dinner talk engaged in by a few obscure persons who happen to be government employes and whose utterances would have been of no consequences, even if everything that Dr. Wirt had said about their statements had been true."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—In what city did the brewery workers win their first big victory?

A.—In New York, in 1886, when all the breweries were organized and covered by an agreement which recognized the union.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

BIG LABOR CONFERENCE URGES UNITED BACKING OF NEW DEAL

Chicago Meeting Flays Opponents of Recovery Program as Insincere and Selfish and Calls on Workers of Nation to Take Immediate Action to Support the President.

Chicago, May 10.—A stirring call to the American people to rally to the support of the Roosevelt recovery program and to rebuke enemies of the new deal was issued by labor's economic conference, held here at a call of the American-Illinois-Chicago Federation of Labor following action at a regular meeting of the Chicago federation.

The conference, held in the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, was attended by 2,500 officially accredited delegates representing 635 local unions and councils affiliated with American Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods. Oscar F. Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, presided in the absence of President John Fitzpatrick, who was confined to his home by illness.

President R. G. Soderstrom, of the Illinois Federation of Labor, was an outstanding figure among the speakers who addressed the conference.

Trust Press Assailed.

In opening the conference Chairman Nelson announced that Secretary-Treasurer Victor A. Olander, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, who was in Washington, D. C., had assisted the Chicago labor officials in the preparation of material for action by the meeting.

A general statement adopted by the conference charged that un-American and unpatriotic "kept trust press and magazines" are using every device at their command to destroy President Roosevelt, the new deal and all who advocate a permanent new deal, and declared that the time is "now at hand for organized and unorganized labor to take immediate action in the exposing of the nefarious schemes of the traitors to our country and to our beloved president, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Business, the statement charges, has taken a selfish attitude in the development of the codes. The statement goes on to say that business elements in the industrial and commercial world accepted the codes for themselves, "clearly actuated by the single motive of self-interest, and having thus attained a greater degree of organization, and therefore more power to co-operate with each other than they had ever had before, they now seek to prevent the president and the national recovery administration from extending the principles of self-organization and co-operative effort for mutual aid and protection to the working people. Instead of favoring the application of the recovery act in a manner designated to accomplish 'the greatest good of the greatest number' as proclaimed by the president, they seek to restrict its benefits to a favored few. They would deny to others what they have attained for themselves."

The statement declares that the business interests are attempting to undermine the confidence of the people in the recovery program by a nation-wide propaganda against the so-called "Brain Trust." It is charged that having used the recovery program to enhance their own interests, the business interests now seek to prevent its extension to others.

"They are particularly vehement in their efforts to prevent the working people of the United States from obtaining the same degree of organization which the business interests have achieved. In the name of liberty, constitutionalism and fundamental Americanism, they are deliberately and consciously, indeed, it may be said maliciously, seeking to maintain, for what they conceive to be their own benefit, a condition of inequality as between the legal rights and economic opportunities of those who own and manage commerce and industry, as against the great masses of the people who perform the labor, without out which owners and managers are helpless.

"Under such circumstances, the people of America would be disloyal to themselves and to the finest traditions of their race if they failed to rise in indignation against the campaign of misrepresentation and its promoters, and if they neglected to marshal themselves in support of the leader whom they have commissioned to find the way out of the economic morass into which the nation had floundered. We are certain that the organized working people of America will not be found wanting in this respect, and we believe they can and will inspire the unorganized to join their ranks in support of the new deal in its true and full sense."

The conference went on record as heartily supporting the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill, the Connery 30-hour week bill, a state NRA bill and a number of bills of interest to railroad labor. The conference asked for re-establishment of the civil works administration and extension of the public works administration. Launching of a big housing program in Chicago and financial relief for the public schools was also asked.

PHOENIX MEAT CO. BECOMES 100 PER CENT UNION SHOP

Phoenix, Ariz.—The City Meat company here signed a union shop agreement with George Hobart, international representative of Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and thus became the first 100 per cent wholesale meat company in this city. Several other dealers have union members working in their plants, but the City Meat company enjoys the record of being the only one to date where every employe carries a union card.

BIG WAGE INCREASE SECURED.

Washington.—Five hundred union bakers here won a big wage increase as the result of a 36-hour strike. A conference of union officials and representatives of the Employing Bakers' association reached an agreement by which bakers receive $1.02 an hour for day work and $1.22 for night work. The union had demanded $1.05 and $1.25, previously rejecting offers of $1 and $1.20 from the employers. The old rate was 90 cents for day work and $1.08 for night work.

HOME STORES

tion we are receiving from other unions, a number of them have adopted resolutions automatically fining any of their members who enter any of the Home Stores. We realize, of course, that a fine is not necessary to keep a union member from entering a place which is unfair.

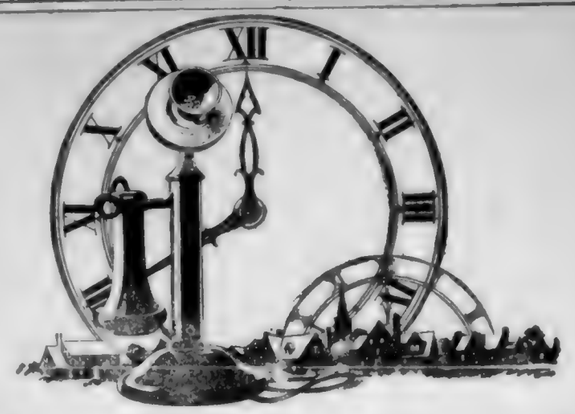
"We have also received expressions of co-operation from many individuals not connected with any union who say they don't want their yards cluttered up with his throw-sheet.

"The committee wishes to thank all who are aiding in our fight against McDonald's medievalistic policies."

Report from Joe Seibold, Plasterer secretary indicates that prices of groceries have taken a sharp upturn in the Home Stores. His local union has decided to place a "sales tax" on any of its members who wish to trade with McDonald. The tax will amount to $10.00 for each offense. Mr. Seibold stated that although the plasterers were in one accord with the printers in their fight, and that he did not believe plasterer members would ever be seen in a Home Store, the $10.00 fine was ordered in case some forgetful member had a lapse of memory.

RADIATOR WORKERS LAND 10 PER CENT PAY BOOST

Waterbury, Conn.—Union employes of the American Radiator company here won a 10 per cent wage increase. The plant, which had been shut down since last September, reopened with one shift instead of two.



Mothers Look Forward to this Hour...

"It's the hour when sons or daughters or old friends call them from some distant place by telephone. How happily they look forward to this time.

Thousands of families are doing this, not only on special occasions like Mothers' Day, but regularly each week . . . enjoying a short, inexpensive voice visit by telephone with members of the family in other cities. Because your voice is you over the telephone, such visits are as satisfactory as though you were together in the same room.

Visiting loved ones at regular intervals by long distance telephone is a delightful way to keep family ties alive at small cost.

Thirty-Hour Week Is Held Essential For Recovery and Profit System

President Fremming, of Oil Field Workers, Declares Hours Cut by Law Necessary to Provide Jobs and Purchasing Power for All Workers.

Washington.—Vigorous condemnation of our prominent industrial leaders for their continued belligerent opposition to shorter hours for the workers and a well fortified argument that shorter hours are necessary for business recovery and permanent prosperity featured a statement in favor of the federal 30-hour week law by Harvey C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America.

He charged that our captains of industry fail to hear the clarion voice which demands economic justice and security for the workers by the medium of adequate purchasing power, and declared that the 30-hour week is absolutely necessary to provide this purchasing power for our millions of jobless.

Pointing out that the industrial overlords organized in the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the American Petroleum institute carry on extensive publicity regarding the necessity of maintaining intact our present system of private initiative for private profit, Mr. Fremming said that in their opposition to the 30-hour week these people are "completely pushing back the one factor which has kept and will continue to keep the profit system alive in the United States, and that one factor is purchasing power."

The purposes of the 30-hour week law, Mr. Fremming said, are:

"1. To decrease the man-day productivity.

"2. To reabsorb millions in gainful employment.

"3. To resuscitate a lost purchasing power.

"4. To take from the charity rolls many who throughout their lives have been producers.

"5. To save this nation from the despotic rule of 'dictatorship.'

"6. To permit the continuance of the profit system.

"7. To place our entire industrial society on an equal competitive basis.

"8. To decentralize wealth through the painless instrumentality of sustained purchasing power rather than the creation of a new economic order.

"9. To reassure working Americans that there is a job for every willing hand.

"10. To maintain and continue our present modern civilization.

"11. To practice in fact the doctrine laid down by holy writ—that 'labor is worthy of its hire.'

"12. To know and understand the doctrine of technological development and its relationship to increased productivity.

"13. To keep in step with natural and normal economic laws.

"Finally, to build in this nation an economic tranquillity in proportion to normal transition, leaving behind unnatural industrial traditions.

"All of which are in the interest of the maintenance of our present profit or capitalistic system, none of which can be accomplished unless jobs are made available with a commensurate purchasing power.

"The 30-hour week means in effect that a well-paid worker steadily employed is the nation's greatest asset."

Glass Workers Get Pay Increase

Toledo, O.—General wage increases averaging 9½ per cent for all unskilled and semi-skilled employes of the Libbey Glass Manufacturing company were unanimously approved by nearly 400 workers on two shifts.

The raises range from 5 to 15 per cent, are effective immediately and run for a year. They apply to about 750 workers. The larger increases will go mainly to those in the lower pay brackets.

Educational Program Is Inaugurated by Unions

Albany, N. Y.—The history, traditions and aims of organized labor are vividly and effectively presented to workers of Troy and Albany, New York's great twin industrial centers, in an educational program inaugurated by the trade unions and conducted by the Affiliated School for Workers.

Backed by the Central Labor unions and state offices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the classes are reaching increasing numbers of members of the Amalgamated, shirtworkers, collar workers, longshoremen, paper makers, molders, machinists and other American Federation of Labor affiliates.

Most popular of the classes in both Troy and Albany are those on "History and Present Problems of the Labor Movement" and "Parliamentary Law and Spoken English." Requirements of the younger members of the movement have been met with classes in tap-dancing and organization of a dramatic group.

Teachers, all of them volunteers, have been drawn from a variety of occupations but all are experienced in working with labor groups and sympathetic with the aims of the labor movement.

WAGE CHISELERS PENALIZED.

Sacramento, Cal.—The determination of certain California employers to refuse to pay workers the wages due them, despite the plain mandate of the state labor laws, was indicated by the fact that during December, 1934, the division of labor statistics and law enforcement of the department of industrial relations received 1,914 complaints of violations of the wage laws of the state. During the month the division collected $47,557.29 in wage claims which the employers had refused to pay but which the state officials declared were legally due the employes concerned. The amount of withheld wages collected during the month was $43.04.

The persistence of pay chiseling employers to defraud workers of the pay due them is shown by the fact that in December, 1933, the division collected $47,445.54 in illegally withheld wages. The total collected for December, 1934, shows an increase of $111.75 over the December, 1933, record.

Says one father: "We were very proud when our daughter's school grades were announced and we learned that she had made 'A' in tap-dancing at college." But let the young excel in whatever they have the ability for.

Volunteer State Life Makes Marked Progress

In this issue of The Labor World appears the 32nd annual statement of the Volunteer State Life Insurance company.

Since organization of this company in 1903 it has shown steady growth, being recognized today as one of the largest insurance companies in this section of the country, and is conservatively managed, yet the management is alert and aggressive. The primary thought in the minds of the officers of this institution at all times is to thoroughly safeguard the funds which have been entrusted to it by the insuring public and this has been done in a commendable manner, as an examination of the financial statement will clearly reveal.

The assets of the Volunteer State Life, as shown by its 1934 statement, amount to $21,931,921.74. In addition to its regular policy reserve of $19,290,188.00, which figure is the legal reserve requirement, the company has set aside additional funds for the protection of policy owners in an amount of $1,491,775.74. Local policy owners are the recipients of thousands of dollars annually. In 1934 the total sum paid to all policy owners and beneficiaries amounted to $2,716,506.00. Since organization of the company in 1903 the total amount paid to policy owners and beneficiaries is in excess of $38,000,000.00.

The Volunteer State Life maintains on its payroll a large group of employes, thousands of dollars being paid to them annually, which money finds its way into all local trade channels. Taxes on its Class A home office building brings to the city and county treasury a substantial sum annually.

At the annual meeting of stockholders on Feb. 21 President Richard H. Kimball reported that during the past year marked progress had been made in every department of the company. The company's agency organization paid for 23 per cent more business in 1934 than during the preceding year. The home office agency showed a paid increase of 33 per cent over 1933. Jake Bishop is manager of the agency, having served in this capacity for almost twenty-nine years. His outstanding success in the life insurance business is known throughout the country.

The Volunteer State Life is operating in thirteen states, therefore carries the name of Chattanooga to the attention of housands of people each year.

CHILD LABOR BILL DEFEATED.

Carson City, Nev.—By refusing to reconsider its former vote refusing to ratify the child labor amendment to the federal constitution the Nevada senate killed the resolution, approved by the house of representatives, for the remainder of this legislative session. The legislature is not scheduled to meet again until 1937.

"Everybody is crazy over me," said the inmate of the first floor of the Lions View insane asylum.

FOLKS:

Many evidences are constantly being reported of the most remarkable determination and solidarity being shown by my friends. I want you to know I am doing everything humanly possible to show my appreciation of this fine spirit, and am making every effort to see and talk to friends of ours about the race.

I ask you to be patient if I have so far failed to follow many suggestions as to contact, and to carry on in my behalf until the last vote is counted.

Indications now unquestionably point to a splendid victory and we can make this certain by constant, ceaseless solicitation among all groups of our citizenship.

School Teachers Denounce McDonald 'Home Store' Sheet

Pledge Full Co-operation. Bakery Workers Reported to Have Struck.

M'DONALD'S BAKERS HAVE SHORT STRIKE

A short-lived strike of employes of Roy McDonald's Home Store bakery was reported this week, which is said to have been ended when the grocer, baker, printer, publisher, druggist, laundryman, dairyman, tire dealer, etc., agreed to improve his treatment of employes in that department of the institution.

The story, vouched for by an unquestionable authority, recites that one night last week employes of the so-called "Home Store" bakery, having become desperate because of conditions imposed upon them by the great business executive, McDonald, rebelled, and refused to continue their work until some assurance was given them that they would be treated differently.

It is said that McDonald was then called from his bed into the picture, and after "soft-soaping" the protesting employes, the latter agreed to give the management another chance, and returned to their jobs.

Although bitter resentment has been aired from time to time by McDonald's employes, as individuals, this is the first time so far as reported when an actual stoppage of operations has occurred, and working men this week expressed the hope that the management of the various branches of the business may be compelled to live up to promises made by McDonald to employes in the baking department of the chain.

Many members of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, have openly denounced Roy McDonald's "Home-Store" throwsheet, according to a letter written by an officer of the local to the chairman of the Typos' committee in charge of publicity, and it is the desire of the entire membership to co-operate in every way possible.

"Lest any of our members have forgotten or become careless about the matter," the letter states, "we shall again notify them that the Home Stores are still unfair."

Latest development in the so-called Home Store situation is a report that the concern has entered the laundry business. It is said that although the new institution has started out in a modest way, attending to the needs only of "Home Store" employes, it is probable that the business will be extended later to a general solicitation of public work.

The laundry business is an addition to the various lines taken on by the grocery chain, including printing, a dairy, bakery, tire company, drugs, etc. It was not stated whether the "executive" in charge of the laundry will "own" it outright, or will be paid the code salary for such position and the title remain with the central management.

The letter from the School Teachers' official to the Typos' committee follows:

In reply to a letter from you concerning the Home Stores, let me state that we are anxious to co-operate in this matter. Many of our members have openly denounced the throw-sheet. Lest some of our members have forgotten or become careless about the matter, we shall again notify our membership that the stores are still unfair.

We thank you for calling this matter to our attention as we wish to co-operate in every way possible.

WIRT OPERATED TO UNDERMINE PUBLIC SCHOOL

Active in Foisting Gary System on People.

TEACHERS HIT PLAN OF STEEL TOWN HEAD

Insidious Campaign "High-Pressured" During Depression Period.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, May 24.—The international notoriety recently sought and obtained by Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools of Gary, Ind., should serve to direct attention to the insidious, successful manner in which he has helped to undermine the public school system of the United States during the last four depression years.

Dr. Wirt is a high pressure salesman for his "work-study-play" or platoon system for public schools. It is significant that he puts "work" first, for his system is patterned after the chain system of production so familiar in big industrial enterprises, disregarding the human element.

Dr. Wirt maintains a publicity department in behalf of his platoon system, and some very nice appearing and plausible tracts and pamphlets are turned out.

Many Cities Adopt Plan.

One of Dr. Wirt's subordinates showed me a typewritten list of cities which are said to have adopted the Gary system either wholly or in a modified form since 1930. I did not count the number of cities listed, but there appeared to be about 200 or more.

It works this way. A school board in an industrial center will get into financial difficulties. Heeding the universal cry for economy, the board, in desperation, gets in touch with the celebrated U. S. Steel corporation educator, Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind., or else he has heard and gets in touch with the board.

Visits are made back and forth, profound conferences are held, and finally the victimized city is "sold" on the idea, and the new-fangled educational contraption is installed in the name of economy, for "cheapness" is the big selling point. It takes some time for the board to learn that it was hornswoggled in the trade.

Teachers Condemned Scheme.

Fierce battles were waged against installation of the platoon system at Chicago and Milwaukee a decade ago. Teachers' commissions from the two cities visited Detroit, Akron, Pittsburgh and New York, where platoon schools had been installed, and came back with reports bristling with condemnation of the system. These voluminous reports have been placed at my disposal by Miss Margaret Haley, president of the Chicago Teachers' Federation, who took a conspicuous part in the fight.

The superintendent of schools of Milwaukee appointed a committee to investigate the platoon system in the spring of 1924. On May 6, 1924, following a detailed 23-page report of their investigations at Pittsburgh, Akron and Detroit, Ethel M. Gardner and Clara T. Manthey, teacher members of the committee, summarized their conclusions in the following striking language:

The Platoon School.

1. Is unsound educationally, because
   a. It emphasizes the teaching of subject matter rather than the teaching of children;
   b. It overstimulates the children;
   c. It breaks down the personal and motherly contact between children and teachers;
   d. It tends to cultivate bad mental habits.
2. Is unsound from the standpoint of health and hygiene, because
   a. It overstimulates children to the point of nervous exhaustion;
   b. It offers greater opportunities for the spread of contagious and infectious diseases.
3. Is unsound from an economic and financial standpoint, because
   a. It costs more to construct platoon schools than it does to construct regular schools;
   b. It costs more to equip platoon schools than it does to equip regular schools;
   c. Instruction costs are higher in platoon schools than in regular schools;
   d. Supervision costs are higher in platoon schools than in regular schools.
4. Experience has shown that it does not do away with the use of barracks nor with part-time instruction.

President's Order Protects Workers Against Chiselers

Employers Who Victimize Employes for Charging Code Violation Are Made Subject to Fine and Imprisonment.

Washington, May 24.—Subversive employers who dismiss and otherwise victimize their employes for making complaints charging violation of NRA codes or giving evidence in code violation cases were strongly reminded of their unpatriotic position in an executive order issued by President Roosevelt making such action subject to fine and imprisonment.

The official statement by the national recovery administration announcing the issuance of the order stated:

"President Roosevelt has issued an executive order giving complete protection in their jobs to employes who make complaints or give information concerning alleged code violations on the part of their employers.

"The order decrees that no employer subject to a code shall dismiss or demote any employe for making a complaint or giving evidence with respect to code violations under penalty of a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment, or both.

"In numerous cases before the national labor board, employes have charged that their employers have demoted or otherwise penalized them for making complaints or giving testimony regarding alleged code violations."

The president's order said:

"By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me under title I of the national industrial recovery act of June 16, 1933 (ch. 90, 48 Stat. 195), and in order to effectuate the purposes of said title, I hereby prescribe the following rule and regulation:

"No employer subject to a code of fair competition approved under said title shall dismiss or demote any employe for making a complaint or giving evidence with respect to an alleged violation of the provisions of any code of fair competition approved under said title.

"All persons are hereby informed that section 10 (a) of the national industrial recovery act prescribes a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500) or imprisonment not to exceed six (6) months, or both, for the violation of any rule or regulation prescribed under the authority of said section 10 (a)."

Bakers to Hold Meeting at Night

Regular meeting of Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, scheduled for Saturday afternoon at 2:30, has been postponed until 7:30 in the evening of the same day, it was announced Thursday.

The session will be one of the most important ever held by the local, officers said, and they urged all members to be present, promising "an announcement that will interest every one."

General Executive Board Member Herman Schad will be present at the meeting, and will bring a message of importance to all bakers, it was said.

WOULD OUTLAW FAKE UNIONS ON RAILROADS

Hearings Begin on Amendment to Act.

PRESIDENT SAID TO APPROVE BILL

Would Do for Rail Workers What Section 7-A Has Done for Others.

Washington, May 24.—Hearings began this week before the house committee on interstate commerce on an amendment to the railway labor act designed to effectively and absolutely outlaw company unions on railroads and to provide machinery for settlement of labor disputes. The bill, believed to have administration support and to be scheduled for passage in this session, will do for railroads what NRA with its Section 7-A has not done for other workers. It carries teeth enough to bite the heads off company unions and leave them dead forever. It should result in unionization of all roads and in the creation of a series of tribunals for settlement of industrial relations on a basis that just about removes the strike from the picture.

With railroads spending about a billion dollars a year to maintain company unions, the measure has a real importance for users of transportation, as well as for railroad workers.

The bill, introduced by Congressman Rayburn, aims to translate into terms of statute law the details of collective bargaining, somewhat as these have been worked out in the better NRA codes, as an amendment to the railway labor act. Railroad Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman explained the measure and its probable application to the practical situations which exist and will arise in the railway labor field.

The most interesting part of Eastman's testimony was in his quiet replies to the sometimes hectoring questions of certain congressmen. Congressman Wolverton, of New Jersey, was much concerned about the definition of the "common carrier," and whether it should include those engaged in the truck driving and handling business in interstate commerce, so that these men should not be shut out of the benefits of the bill, rather than be under the "temporary" protection of the codes.

Mr. Wolverton's question as to the meaning of "influence," as applied to the choice of representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining, went into the matter of welfare activities and sick benefits, and whether the goodwill generated by these among the employes would be considered as coming under this definition. After stating briefly that any benefits open to all employes alike, without reference to their connection with any company or other union, would not in his opinion be so regarded, Mr. Eastman rather surprised the congressman by reading from a decision of the supreme court, in which that very matter was dealt with, showing that the problem was not a new one at all. He also showed that while the practice was not widespread, exactly such conditions had existed in the case of the New Haven railroad, where the benefits of a sick relief organization were confined to members of the company union.

Mr. Eastman gave as his definition of a company union one which is confined to employes of the particular company, rather than one which is organized and controlled by the company. He stated that there are such unions in the railway field, as on the Union Pacific railroad; but that they are usually limited to the shop, office and maintenance-of-way employes.

Being asked whether the "layoffs" had been used to penalize members of the independent unions, Mr. Eastman stated that such cases had come to his knowledge; that he had in many instances referred them back to the officers of the company concerned, and that in some of these cases the men had been reinstated, the company officials stating that the man had been victimized by subordinates for reasons of personal prejudice or opinion, and that the company did not support such a policy.

Hearings already have been held before the senate committee.

Butler Again Named Head of Electricians

Former President Local 175 Returned to Post at Special Election.

A. E. Butler, formerly head of Local 175, Electrical Workers, was gain named to that post last week at a special election called to replace of- the city. It was explained that Presificials who are temporarily out of dent Ed Carroll, Vice-President Perry Howard and Recording Secretary Robert Duncan are all employed on T. V. A. work at Norris dam, and due to the fact that these gentlemen will go so engaged indefinitely, a special election was necessary to replace them.

J. G. Stansell was named vice-president to succeed Mr. Howard, and Robert M. McKenzie was selected as successor to Mr. Duncan. Other officers of the local, who were not replaced, are: C. A. Frost, financial secretary; W. W. Williams, treasurer, and E. E. McDaniels, business agent.

Mr. McDaniels Saturday offered a list of local firms which have signed agreements with the local, and asked that this list be preserved by friends of labor for future reference. Additions or alterations, he said, will be published through The Labor World:

"DARROW VS. JOHNSON."

These two men are persons of exceptional prominence, especially in the last few days, in regards to the conditions and effect of the NRA, and their controversy seems to be causing a good many individuals to weaken their support in the NRA, when to my mind it should strengthen it, for the simple reason Clarence Darrow has never accomplished any great movement for the good of the country, but devotes his time to defending criminals and working people believe he is a master mind on the origin of man! What is he gaining by making such attacks on the NRA? Nothing, and he is going to be the worst defeated man ever before Johnson gets through with him. Johnson and the administration has the backing and support of at least 80 per cent of the American people. And should any of you be among those who stagger at Darrow's knocks just laugh and forget he is even living.

I have had the privilege of talking with several leading men, who are owners of large industries and maintain a higher degree of knowledge concerning the working conditions of today, and they all contend the NRA has helped their business and go so far as to say should the NRA quit altogether they will continue to carry it out in the future. Certainly it has helped us all and could do more if the people would back it up rather than try to find fault. Of course, it has its bad features, but what is there that doesn't.

Therefore my suggestion is to look on the bright side of the matter and see if its merits won't overcome the demerits, or rather outweight them.

DOCK WORKERS STRIKE.

San Francisco.—Dock workers on the Pacific coast, from 10,000 to 12,000 strong, went on strike for higher wages and shorter working day. An armored car cruised the waterfront here carrying strikebreakers in an effort to clear ships tied up in the harbor. Police on foot, in automobiles, on motorcycles and horses patrolled the waterfront.

SAYS CONGRESS SURRENDERS TO LABOR ENEMIES

Green Holds Union-Haters Blocking Measures.

FAILURE TO ACT ON WAGNER BILL CITED

Industrialists Determine What Shall or Shall Not Become Law.

Washington, May 24.—The definite charge that those responsible for the legislative program in congress have succumbed to the opposition of anti-union manufacturers' associations to the enactment of the Wagner disputes act and the other labor measures during this session of congress and will make no effort to bring them before either the house of representatives or the senate, characterized a statement by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the status of federal labor legislation.

"Apparently those who are in charge of the legislative program in congress have determined that the measures sponsored by labor and in which labor is deeply interested shall not pass," Mr. Green said.

"These measures indorsed by labor," he added, "include the Wagner disputes act, the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance measure, the Connery six-hour day and thirty-hour workweek bill, the La Follette ten billion dollar appropriation for public works, and the amendment to the railway labor act.

"None of these measures have been passed by either branch of congress.

"They seem to be held up by those who determine what measures shall or hsall not be acted upon by congress.

"There is no doubt in the minds of labor that these labor bills would be enacted into law if the members of congress were given an opportunity to vote upon them.

OPPOSITION SENTERED ON WAGNER BILL.

"The representatives of big business, manufacturers' associations, employers of labor, who are uncompromising in their attitude toward organized labor, centered their opposition upon the Wagner disputes act.

"Through their strong opposition to this measure they are fighting for the maintenance and protection of their own organized, financed and fostered company unions.

"It seems inconceivable that congress would yield to such opposition.

"It is a purely selfish opposition.

"It is based upon the determination of employing corporations and manufacturers' associations to control and dominate the economic life of the workers.

"It is quite obvious that congress will adjourn within the near future.

"Unless action is taken soon, the record will show that congress failed labor, in that it refused to enact a single measure sponsored by labor into law.

"Labor will study the record made and will interpret the failure of congress to pass the Wagner disputes act and the other measures sponsored by labor as a surrender on the part of congress to the enemies of labor and to the representatives of big business and vested interests."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Where copies of legal decisions affecting organized labor be obtained?

A.—From the legal information bureau, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Does organized labor regard "tipping" with favor?

A.—No. Organized labor is opposed to the tipping system and believes workers should be paid basic wages sufficiently to make it unnecessary for them to take tips as part of their pay.

Q.—Who said: "We believe the proper function of courts is to expound and administer law but not to make it?"

A.—This is an extract from a declaration of the American Federation of Labor 1896 convention. The convention demanded amendments to the constitution depriving judges of the power to set aside laws enacted by congress.

What Next!

A new "air train" consisting of three gliders towed by an airplane has just been successfully tested at Moscow. The pilot took off in a high-powered plane with three gliders attached by cables 130 meters long. After soaring over Moscow, the last glider pilot disconnected his cable and volplaned to earth. The other gliders followed in succession and all landed at previously determined points. Aviation experts said the tests proved the practicability of the air train for regular mail and express.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, run-down condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

An Unfortunate Situation

Sensational publicity which has accompanied the crisis in relations of the Richmond Hosiery mills and the United States government, through the National Recovery Administration, is deplorable from several angles. Federal indictments returned against very prominent and highly respected citizens in connection with alleged code violations have been the subject of comment by citizens of all walks of life for the past several days, and nation-wide publicity has attended the incident.

Mr. Justice A. W. Chamblis, of the State Supreme Court, and Mr. T. R. Preston, local banker and business leader, indicted with others as directors in the Richmond company, have both denied responsibility for the alleged code violations. However, it is common knowledge that the active management of the concern has publicly and privately defied the authorities, and a court clash to determine the government's power in the premises, it appears, was inevitable.

In the particular issue involved Labor has no interest other than that of every other citizen who endeavors to uphold the hands of his Government, particularly in its time of greatest need, but working people will join all other patriotic individuals and groups in deploring the fact that a Chattanooga business institution is in the unenviable position of defying the law of the land as expressed in the National Recovery Act, with the attendant unfavorable nation-wide publicity.

Is Depression Over?

One significant sentence in General Hugh Johnson's speech at Columbus got into the press dispatches which was not included in the releases. Quoting speakers at the Washington convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce as saying that "the emergency is over," Johnson replied: "These will be welcome tidings to * * * the hardly concealed despair that stalks everywhere throughout the nation."

When A. A. Berle, Jr., City Chamberlain of New York, said that the depression is over, Mrs. Roosevelt took occasion to disagree with him. A. F. of L. points an accusing finger at the army of the unemployed, declaring it is 10 million, in face of the declaration of the Durable Goods Committee which seemed to think it only 4.5 millions. These are hardly references to "traces left by the depression." The NRA has not reached the goal set for it by Gen. Johnson last fall, when he said he would aim to "make purchasing power equal capacity production."

Business activity is around 78; steel production at about 60; payrolls are still running proportionately much under employment indexes.

This is spring and the hopeful time of year, but no wise person lets his enthusiasm get into the habit of kidding his judgment about such a matter.

Are They Afraid to Tell the Truth?

Light begins to gleam through the dust of battle surrounding the fight over the Securities Act and the control of the stock exchanges. It has been vociferously announced that the "heavy industries" were greatly in need of money; that if they could get the money, they would be employing millions of men. No elucidation of the question of who or what industry needed this money so badly, or what it would be used for, was to be had; and nothing seems to have been said about that in all of the hearings held on the bills.

There was something about the situation that made a lot of fellows nervous about having to "go to jail" for doing something which they have been in the habit of doing. Now we begin to hear of where a part of the pressure is—in a general way.

It appears that there are some bond issues—industrials—which are coming due, and must be met somehow. There are some $800,000,000 coming due this year; and about $900,000,000 next year, according to one source of information. If these are "steel" bonds, or railway bonds, one can begin to have a basis for surmises as to what is the matter. These things were capitalized—bonded—for an earning capacity that was largely moonshine, and water, mixed with some champagne that flowed when the flotation committee met to organize the distribution of the original issue. That was "business," in those days. Perhaps it is yet.

Anyhow, in the present sober-minded state of the public who may have something to invest, to have to tell the exact truth about the probable earning capacity of the property on which these bonds or other securities are based—well, it would be just too bad for the project of refunding those securities! Perhaps some insurance companies are involved. It would not sound very good to the policyholders to tell the truth about the actual financial base of some of the securities which make up their reserves. Clearly, there is something in the wind which "must be put over."

"Kick Back" Racket Investigation

There is some delay in the adoption by the Senate of the resolution introduced by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, providing for a nation-wide investigation of the "kick back" racket imposed by contractors on Federal construction projects. But the unanimous report of the committee favoring the resolution insures action before Congress adjourns.

The "kick back" racket is the practice of evading statutory or other wage provisions by forcing the worker to pay for his job, that is, to "kick back" part of his wages to his employer.

Sometimes the employer makes the deduction direct from the pay envelope. Sometimes the worker is paid by check, which he is required to cash at the company office, where a portion of the wages is deducted.

In testimony before the Senate committee it was stated that in the capital of the nation employes on Federal building projects were compelled to pay contractors $2 every morning to go to work. One affidavit charged that a worker on the Chicago postoffice "kicked back" $472.50 in order to hold his job.

This reprehensible form of graft by low-wage contractors has been imposed on workers regardless of the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage rate law, which in many instances contractors have technically observed by paying the legal wage rate and then compelled the workers to "kick back" a portion of it.

Confronted with indisputable testimony regarding the prevalence of this abuse, the Senate Committee on Labor and Education requested authority to conduct an investigation of wages and wage-payment practices on all Federal projects. The probe will undoubtedly reveal that Government contractors all over the country have unlawfully taken hundreds of thousands of dollars from the workers as the price of the jobs which they had to have in order to provide a living for themselves and their families.

The investigation should be promptly made, and the necessary agencies of the Government mobilized to compel these grafters on the workers' wages to restore to the persons whose rights have been outraged every dollar taken by the "kick back." In addition, suitable penalties should be imposed on employers who have so atrociously violated the fundamental equities which should prevail throughout the realm of industrial relations.

Stopping Code Violations

New York State NRA authorities set a good example by making an aggressive drive against code violators recently. Investigators swept through the New York City garment district and found a number of manufacturers violating code working hour provisions. Punishment of all offenders was promised. This was a start in the direction of code compliance that might well be followed everywhere.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Frank C. Walker, executive director of the National Emergency council, says that the real estate mortgage debt of the country is nearly as large as the combined national, state, county and municipal debts. It has been a profitable field, until extra straws broke the camel's back, and foreclosures at the rate of 25,000 a month began to uncover the situation. Foreclosures have now been reduced to 20,000 a month, and the Home Owners Loan corporation has received about 1,250,000 applications, totaling $4,000,000,000.

It is proposed in the new housing bill to bring new factors of security into this field of finance, with a view to stimulating activity in residential construction. This has been reduced from a former total of approximately $3,000,000,000 annually to about 10% of that figure, or $300,000. Former aggregate of building construction was about $11,000,000,000 per annum, which has now been reduced to about $3,000,000,000.

The building industry is one of the larger industries of the nation, employing directly, in process of construction and of making and handling materials for construction approximately 5,000,000 persons. Many of these, with their families, have been on relief rolls and until there is a change for the better in building they will continue to be on relief.

This fact, together with the hardships of those whose homes are being taken from them on foreclosures, constitute a large part of the dark picture of depression. The situation has been aggravated by unsound practices connected with making loans, in use of second mortgage, charging of excessive fees and high rates in making mortgages, and use of the fictitious short-term mortgage for purpose of securing more fees for handling them.

To remedy this whole situation, striking at the root, it is proposed to inaugurate a four-fold program, including (1) modernization (with $2.00 limitation, applicable to all types of building); (2) insurance of mortgages by a mutual association for the purpose; (3) mortgage associations for the purpose of attracting investors and making capital available in the mortgage field; and (4) insurance shares and certificates of building and loan associations, so as to remove the handicap carried by these as against banks having insurance of deposits.

The German labor front, which has usurped the position of the former free trade unions, is only concerned with personal problems, according to statements made by its leaders. Its publications prove it, too, for "Arbeitertum" ("The Working World"), the official organ of the front, never breathes a word about trade union questions, social policy or anything of that kind. Pen and pencil tell only of hikes and holiday excursions, pictures of German workers in the Middle Ages, conditions in soviet Russia, pariah meetings, extravagant homage to Hitler and his men and, last but not least, war reminiscences.

The first number of April has a particularly illusinating contribution, consisting of the war pictures which appear in the anti-war literature of all countries, men hanging on the barbed wire, dirt and blood in the trenches, etc. But these pictures have not been printed in "Arbeitertum" to fill the reader with horror of the war, for underneath is the charming caption: "War is always war; those who don't believe it will die of it!" (Krieg ist nun einmal Krieg, wer's nicht glaubt, der stirbt daran!").

PUBLIC WORKS URGED FOR JOBLESS RELIEF

Unemployment Crisis Makes Imperative Large Construction Programs for All Governments.

Geneva, Switzerland. — The International Labor Office has issued an appeal to governments to institute construction of public works in order to alleviate the unemployment crisis.

In a resolution recently adopted by its governing body, the text of which has been mailed to all member governments, the labor office stated: "The persistence of the unemployment crisis is increasingly affecting the workers throughout the world."

The resolution also appeals "to all governments to institute schemes without delay or to continue without interruption the execution on their own territory, national or colonial, of schemes of public works calculated to give a fresh impetus to economic activity and to reduce the number of unemployed."

At the same time the governing body expressed the hope that the committee created by the London Economic and Monetary conference to study the question of public works and other means of alleviating unemployment "may be convened as early as possible."

In its communication to the different governments the labor office further stated that it is at the present time preparing for submission to the next session of the International Labor conference in June a report on public works which are in progress or are contemplated in the various countries.

Ickes Makes Oil Field Wage Rates Retroactive

Washington.—Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, ordered, retroactive to Sept. 2, 1933, minimum wage rates recently established for drillers and helpers by oil companies and oil operators.

Employes of drilling contractors who were not formally brought within the terms of the oil code until Dec. 21 will share in the retroactive benefits. A substantial payment to employes affected by the order was expected.

The minimum established March 20 by the secretary for drilling employes were: Rotary tools drillers, $1.25 an hour; helpers, 75 cents; cable tools drillers, $1; helpers, 97½ cents. Rates prior to the March order ranged as low as 67½ cents.

Textile Union Asks President's Help in Securing Shorter Hours

"Stretch-out" System Applied Under NRA Codes Throws Thousands Into Jobless Army—Cut Length of Work Week Only Means to Check Unemployment.

New York, May 24.—The intensive application of the "stretch-out" system and other speed-up practices by textile manufacturers have thrown thousands of workers into the jobless army, without hope for re-employment, declared Thomas F. McMahon, president, and James Starr, secretary-treasurer of the United Textile Workers of America, in a letter to President Roosevelt requesting his support in securing shorter hours for the textile industry.

Unemployment Increases.

"Unemployment in the textile industry is increasing by leaps and bounds," the letter said. "Code authorities are instituting forced curtailment programs and prospects for the industry during the next few months are indicative that conditions of employment will become worse. Production is outstepping consumer demand to such an extent that we feel the administration should recognige the grave danger of further delay in applying the remedy."

Workers Displaced by Thousands.

"Since the advent of the 'stretch-out system' or 'excessive machine load,' there is no such thing as permanent employment, and in all our arguments and briefs submitted to the administration, we have contended that eighty (80) machine hours were entirely too much and would not provide the necessary employment and the equivalent purchasing power.

"That is exactly what has happened. Workers are being displaced by the thousands. Many employers are trying to even up their costs by increasing the unit of production. Markets are flooded and the mills are compelled to announce curtailment periods, thereby depriving the workers of their meagre wages and throwing them back once more on the mercy of charity.

Shorter Hours Only Remedy.

"Your statement on March 5 last and Gen. Johnson's later announcement relative to shorter hours appealed to us as being a proper and sound approach to this problem.

"Although the blight of unemployment has not, to any great extent, reached into all textile communities, we would ask you to order a survey of the entire industry in order that you might learn just how serious this problem is.

"We would refer you especially to the New England states, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Reports received in our office from the south lead us to believe that it will only be a short time before hundreds of thousands of southern workers will likewise be affected.

Labor Under Code Is Jeopardized.

"There are over 1,000,000 workers in the textile industry. The cotton code was the first code approved by the administration. We recognized its advantages, appreciated its benefits, and on several occasions have tried to point out its defects, and the need for amendment.

"Our emergency committee, after serious consideration of this problem, authorized the officials to make an appeal to you, in order that we might not return to the deplorable conditions existing before the code, when unemployment threatened the very structure of our constitutional government.

"We are convinced that shorter hours will aid materially in the solution of this problem. We would ask your support in this direction."

WISCONSIN FINDS JOBS FOR 37,277 UNEMPLOYED

Madison, Wis.—During the period Jan. 2 to April 28 Wisconsin's nine state employment offices found jobs for 37,277 out of 53,617 applicants, the state industrial commission announced.

Employes were requested by fifty-four employers who previously had not used the state offices.

Applicants for jobs are classified as to their regular occupations so as to furnish employers with lists of persons best qualified for any particular work on short notice. A complete list of work opportunities in various lines provides similar service for persons who are "hunting" jobs in order that they may buy a living for themselves and their families.

In Wisconsin, as in other states, the workers are confronted with a situation described by a Chinaman who said it is a case of "no jobee, no liveo"—except on the semi-starvation rations of charity relief.

AIRCRAFT STRIKE ENDED BY BOARD

Washington.—The national labor board ruled that a strike for higher wages in the Consolidated Aircraft corporation and Curtiss Airplane Motor company, at Buffalo, N. Y., be called off because the workers' union did not comply with an arbitration agreement.

Following a hearing at which employes did not appear the board ruled to uphold a decision of the Buffalo regional labor board which provided that management and labor should submit the question of readjustment of the basic wage scale to an arbitration board.

The union, the board ruled, must indicate its acceptance of these terms not later than June 1.

Court Fines New Jersey NRA Wage Chisler $500

Clothing Concern Paid 34 Cents an Hour Less Code Scale and Added Four Hours to Maximum Work Week.

Camden, N. J.—Federal Judge John Boyd Avis found the Perfect Coat and Suit company of Camden guilty of persistent violation of wages and hours provisions of the National Coat and Suit code, fined the company $500, and ordered restitution of the amounts due the concern's employes to make up the underpayments.

The code prescribes 35 hours as the maximum work week and 81 cents an hour minimum wage. The information filed against the company by the National Coat and Suit authority cited four counts of violation of the maximum weekly hours and six counts of minimum wage violation. It was charged that the company's employes, during a certain period, worked between 39 and 40 hours a week, and that six employes were paid at the rate of 47 cents an hour. Herman Saluk, president of the company, pleaded guilty on all ten counts.

Leniency Asked for Code Violator.

The dispute was taken into court after investigation by the Coat and Suit Authority revealed violations of the code and the company refused to conform. George W. Alger, director of the authority, referred the matter to the national compliance board at Washington, which turned it over to the United States attorney, Harlan Besson, who asked the court to be lenient in view of the fact that Mr. Saluk had already paid $1,093.09 to F. Nathan Wolf, secretary of the National Coat and Suit Authority, and that the money would be distributed to the workers who were underpaid.

Boy—Wouldn't your mother be awfully angry if she saw you in that scant bathing suit?

Lass—I should say so. It's hers.

RAIL UNIONS JUSTIFIED IN FORCING PAY BOOST

Washington.—The volumes of hot air regarding the poverty of the railroads which the railway executives shot forth recently in their frantic opposition to restoring the 10 per cent pay reduction which they imposed on their employes a couple of years ago are completely exploded by the report of the bureau of railway economics, an organization maintained by the carriers themselves, showing that the operating income of Class I roads for the first three months of this year was more than three times that of the same period last year.

The figures for the first quarter of 1934 were $112,276,896, compared with $34,551,646 for the first three months of 1933.

When these figures became known here it was seen that all the talk of the railway executives about their financial inability to restore only one-quarter of the original 10 per cent on July 1 was sheer rubbish.

Book Publisher Forced Into Lawsuit By Work of 'Scabs

Author Claims Winston Company Damaged Him $50,051 by Misspelled Words, Omitted Illustrations and Similar Stunts.

Philadelphia, May 24.—The John C. Winston company, of this city, whose officials turned the concern into a non-union shop a number of months ago and since then have resisted all efforts of the union printing trades to recognise union labor and pay the union scale, relying on the usual anti-union ballyhoo to put over inferior work on their customers.

But D. McD. Bruner, of Ventnor, N. J., "called" the non-union printing outfit with a suit in the U. S. district court here for $56,051 damages for all around poor work in connection with the publication of his book "Short Selling the U. S. A.," which he claims would have sold 100,000 copies had it been properly printed and promoted by the Winston outfit.

Mr. Bruner claims $25,000 of the $56,051 as damages to his reputation as an author. He estimates he lost $30,260 in royalties and he also wants to recover $838 which he advanced for the preparation of his book for publication. From this he deducts $47 royalties on the 108 copies sold. He stated that the printed copies contained many misspelled words, that the printing was badly done and that illustrations were omitted.

4,000 Viscoe Workers Win 9 Per Cent Wage Increase

Parkersburg, W. Va.—The Viscose company, textile concern, granted a wage increase of 9 per cent to its 4,000 employes.

The increase ended threats of a strike. The agreement was reached between officers of the company and of the United Textile Workers of America.

ATTACHMENT NOTICE
No. 13535
A. L. Emerson et al. vs. Joseph Copps
Before Luther Hamby, Justice of the Peace for Hamilton County, Tennessee

In this cause it appeared by affidavit that the defendant is justly indebted to the plaintiff, and is a nonresident of the state of Tennessee, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him, and an original attachment having been levied on one Packard touring car, Motor No. 211819, and leaving with the Chattanooga garage as my agent, it is therefore ordered that publication be made in The Labor World, a newspaper published in the city of Chattanooga, Tennessee, for four consecutive weeks, commanding the said defendant to appear before me at my office, No. 619 Cherry St., Chattanooga, Tennessee, on June 11, 1934, at 10 o'clock a.m., and make defense to said suit or it will be taken for confessed and be proceeded with ex parte.

This May 17, 1934.

LUTHER HAMBY,
6-8 Justice of the Peace.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me, the undersigned trustee, by deed of trust executed September 18, 1928, by W. S. Cambron and wife, Annie Jim Gray Cambron, to secure a certain indebtedness, which said deed of trust is recorded in the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee, in Book K, Vol. 23, page 179 et seq., conveying the property hereinafter described, to which deed of trust reference is hereby made for the powers and provisions therein contained; and default having been made in the payment of said indebtedness, which remains past due and unpaid, at the request of the holder of said indebtedness, I, C. W. K. Meacham, Trustee, will sell, within the legal hours of sale, at the west door of the Court House in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, in bar of all equities of redemption, dower, homestead, and all other exemptions of every kind, the following described real estate, in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, to-wit:

Lot 18, in Block No. 29, Montague's Highland Park Addition No. 2, in the old Fifth District of Hamilton county, Tennessee, now the Ninth Ward of the City of Chattanooga, as shown by plat now found of record in Plat Book No. 1, page 35, of the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee. Said lot fronts 50 feet on the north side of Duncan avenue and runs back northwardly, of uniform width, 134 feet to an alley.

Said deed of trust recites that the title to said property is clear, free and unencumbered, and title to the same is believed to be good, but the sale will be made as Trustee only.

This May 18, 1934.

Maxwell House Coffee Is Placed On Unfair List

Houston, Tex., May 24.—Maxwell House coffee, nationally sold and advertised product of the General Food Products company, has been placed on the "We Don't Patronize" list of the Houston Labor and Trades council after a committee which had been appointed to adjust grievances between the Sheet Metal Workers' union and the management of the local plant reported that it was unable to reach an agreement with the company.

The Sheet Metal Workers placed the Maxwell House coffee on its unfair list following unsuccessful efforts to get the company to agree to place its sheet metal work with concerns paying decent wages.

The firm which has been doing the sheet metal work for the Maxwell House concern is reported to be paying its skilled workers barely above the minimum for common labor under the NRA. The rate is far below the scale for union sheet metal workers. It was also reported that the Maxwell House company is employing non-union workers on some of its construction work.

Deserve better working conditions by aiding other workers to secure them. Demand the UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD.

CWA's End Throws 546,955 Families Into Destitution

Number of Families Found Back on Direct Relief Averages 38 Per Cent., Relief Administrator's Report Shows.

Washington, May 24.—The tragedy which the abolition of civil works projects by the federal government caused millions of persons in the United States is revealed in the report on the sharp increase in relief needs since the termination of the CWA program made public by Henry L. Hopkins, relief administrator.

Summarizing figures received from 140 cities and urban counties, representing 64 per cent of the urban population, the report showed that between March and April the number of families "on relief" rose from 1,428,818 to 1,975,273, an increase of 546,955 or 38 per cent.

The additions for the month were made up of families who would have applied for relief previously but for the employment of one or more of their number in CWA work during the winter.

During April 103 cities showed an increase in both families and obligations incurred. Eighteen showed a decrease in both items. Thirteen cities showed an increase in cases and a decrease in obligations, six showed a decrease in cases and an increase in obligations.

The most recent month with which April can be compared without having the relief figures distorted by the effect of the civil works program is November, 1933, according to Mr. Hopkins.

Between November, 1933, and April, 1934, the number of cases receiving relief in leading cities increased 11 per cent. During the previous two years, the number of cases receiving relief in large urban areas increased by more than 50 per cent in the same months.

Those who desire better living and working conditions must do their share to secure them. Demand union made goods and service.

Texas Lady Tells How Black-Draught Laxative Helps All Her Family

Here's how Black-Draught met the needs of a family laxative in the home of Mrs. J. S. Stoker, Fort Worth, Texas: "The grown-ups in my family," she writes, "have always taken powdered Thedford's Black-Draught for biliousness, headaches and other ailments (due to constipation) and found it a reliable remedy. I was very pleased when I saw Syrup of Black-Draught advertised. I bought it and gave it to my little daughters, ages 6 and 4. They needed something to cleanse their systems and Syrup of Black-Draught acted well." . . . Your druggist sells this reliable laxative in both forms. "Children like the Syrup."

Bender Urges Co-Operation Of All Groups

New Manager Local Compliance Office Explains Method of Procedure.

The state NRA compliance director, Hugh Humphreys, has established a branch office in Chattanooga. It is located in Room 357 of Federal (new postoffice) building, with Z. B. Bender, field adjuster, in charge.

"Any employe or employer who has just grounds to believe that a code is being violated as to hours and wages or trade practices should promptly report the facts to this office," Mr. Bender said Thursday. "Even a public-spirited citizen who has no connection directly with any employer or employe, but who has knowledge of a violation may make such a report, which will be given due consideration.

"Employes are requested not to make unjustified or trivial complaints but are urged to promptly report the failure of their employer to prominently post, in his place of business, the hours and wages provisions of the code or codes that he is operating under. Also report any violations of those provisions that may be occuring," Mr. Bender continued.

"All complaints must be in writing (either hand writing or typewriter), preferably on the regular prepared blank complaint forms, which can be obtained from the local branch of the state director's office or any postoffice except fourth class. If you so desire the members of the branch office staff will assist you in filling out your complaint. They may also be in position to give you other valuable information concerning the object of the code and the necessity of enforcing same. All complaints must be treated confidentially by the compliance officials and name of the person making the complaint will not be used except on his or her special permission.

"The employer's part in compliance is a very important one. It is not that he should conduct his business in accordance with the code only, but that he should help to see to it that his competitor does also by reporting any violations of trade practices that come to his attention to his code authority or to this office.

"Business gains under code operation have been too pronounced to take a chance of endangering a continuance of those gains by laxity at this time. Strict compliance to the provisions of the various codes is absolutely essential if the national industrial recovery act is to accomplish its purpose.

"It is a common saying that nine-tenths of any law consists of its administration. Violations must be reported by those affected if we are to have an opportunity to fairly administer NIRA, which is the law."

CHAIN CORPORATION'S LOCAL EMPLOYES ARE FORCED TO QUIT JOBS

Wonderful Spirit of Cooperation Shown by General Public—Importation of Strikebreakers Apparently Resented by Chattanoogans—Regional Labor Board to Hear Case in Atlanta Saturday Morning—Workers Thank People for Hearty Support.

Not in recent years, perhaps, has a labor disturbance so agitated the minds of Chattanooga's citizenship as the walkout of salesmen and bakers at the American Bakeries company, an Atlanta chain corporation operating a local plant on Eleventh street; nor has a more genuine and spontaneous expression of sympathy been displayed than is being shown the employes of the corporation by merchants and citizens generally.

Bakers and salesmen employed by the local branch of the chain to the number of some seventy-five left their jobs Sunday morning following repeated and constant attempts to induce the management to recognize their right to organize and to enter into an agreement which the workers considered was fair and equitable for both sides. The bakeries company, however, is said to have been always bitterly opposed to organized labor in all their plants, and little progress was made toward an agreement with their employes.

Local managers, the employes claim, pleaded lack of authority to deal collectively with the workers, and high officials, who were in other cities, refused, it is claimed, to take the claims of their employes seriously until after the walkout occurred. Since that time, however, some of the principal officials of the corporation have been on the ground constantly.

The local plant on Eleventh street has been practically closed since the walkout, although "loyal" employes from plants of the chain in other cities were imported to take the places of the local workers, and some bread has since been made here.

Members of the two organizations involved, however, Bakers' union No. 25 and Bakery Salesmen's union No. 549, have cooperated in constituting themselves boosters for local bakeries, and have covered their routes constantly urging grocers, restaurants and other bread dealers to purchase products of the Chattanooga concerns.

This campaign, it is reported, has been remarkably successful, local merchants and others apparently being in thorough sympathy with the Chattanooga workers, and purchasing bread made in local plants and by local men.

Officials of the Atlanta corporation went before the federal court at Knoxville Thursday and applied for a sweeping injunction, employing Joe V. Williams, local corporation attorney, but the workers secured the services of James H. Anderson, who appeared in their behalf, and Judge Taylor, after hearing the evidence and argument for both sides, reserved his decision until Sunday.

LABOR BOARD TO HEAR CASE SATURDAY.

The regional labor board at Atlanta will hold a hearing on the case Saturday morning, appeal having been made by the workers for a review of the case by the federal board.

Under date of May 30 Mr. Frank E. Coffee, secretary of the regional board, wrote the American Bakeries as follows:

"We are advised that the employes of your Chattanooga plant are on strike, and that there is a strong probability that the disturbance will extend to Atlanta and possibly other points. My purpose in writing you this morning is to offer the services of this board in an effort to have the workers return to work immediately pending a final disposition of questions that caused the disturbance."

This letter, so far as the workers' information goes, was ignored, but later the strikers' representatives received the following copy of a letter subsequently mailed to the corporation heads:

"Confirming my conversation with you of yesterday, we are settling a hearing on the matter of the strike at your Chattanooga plant. This hearing will be held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, June 2, in Room 324 of the old postoffice building, Atlanta.

"In accordance with our usual custom, this hearing will be held and a decision rendered, regardless of whether or not one of the parties to the controversy should fail to appear."

Officials of the local unions received official notification of the hearing above mentioned on Friday morning, and representatives of the Chattanooga workers will be present at the sessions of the board.

Although workers from other cities were imported early this week, it was said that nothing was produced Thursday, the plant being again practically closed.

Members of the two unions involved expressed regret at the forcing of the walkout, calling attention to a statement made by Williams as attorney for the corporation before the federal court Thursday wherein the attorney claimed the Atlanta concern had already suffered a loss of some $25,000. It was pointed out that even this sum, admittedly lost in a matter of three or four days' time, might have forestalled the disturbance for some time if placed in the pay envelopes of the protesting workers.

A circular issued early in the week was brought before the court Thursday, Attorney Williams taking exceptions to statements made and contending they were inaccurate, it was said.

The circular, signed by former employes of the chain bakery, and complained of by the corporation officials, through their attorney, was as follows:

This arrogant concern has no interest in Chattanooga, except to gouge profits to send to their headquarters in Atlanta.

Intoxicated with imaginary power, they deny their bakers and salesmen the right of collective bargaining and refuse to deal with organized labor, thereby defying the NRA and President Roosevelt's program of recovery.

They flash the Blue Eagle in public and refuse to deal with their organized employes.

They have $100,000 to spend for advertising, but not one hundred cents for their employes.

They feed their employes "loyalty," but nothing much in wages.

They can't get strikebreakers in Chattanooga, so they are trying to import some of their "loyal" employes from their other plants.

Patronize the union bakeries. Buy union labeled bread and other union-made bakery goods and help us put more bakers and salesmen to work.

Will you eat bread made by imported scabs?

Officials of the local unions Friday morning asked The Labor World to express their heartfelt appreciation to the grocers, restaurant owners and the general public of Chattanooga for their fine support in the controversy with the corporation, and to ask that any unsubstantiated rumor be traced down and the workers be given an opportunity to spike any false reports which may gain circulation.

He is a member of Carpenters' Local 74, and is by no means new on the job, having served in the same capacity in other years, as well as having filled with credit almost every office within the gift of the labor movement over a period of years which he possibly does not like to contemplate.

Cohen Confers With State and Federal Officials

New State President Talks With Governor, Col. Simpson, Maj. Allen.

Nashville, May 31.—Jake Cohen, president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, was a visitor in Nashville on Monday and Tuesday of this week, his visit being occasioned by official business for the state body to which he was elevated to the presidency early this month.

While in Nashville, President Cohen secured conferences with Gov. Hill McAlister, Col. Walter Simpson, state administrator of the FERA, and Maj. Thomas H. Allen, state engineer of the PWA.

Mr. Cohen expressed gratification over his conferences, stating that in his opinion Col. Simpson would endeavor to be uniformly fair in his decisions regarding labor; Maj. Allen, an acquaintance of long standing of the federation's president, was indorsed for the position of state engineer by the Memphis Trades and Labor council, says Mr. Cohen.

Regarding the policies of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, Mr. Cohen says he expectes to carry out the mandates of the recent convention of this body to the letter, adding that in his opinion the six-hour day and the five-day week is the paramount issue of the workers at this time. Mr. Cohen says that he finds evidences of some employers evading the spirit and letter of the NRA, and while they are technically within the law, yet they are retarding the progress of this legislation to the detriment of their employes. The result, of course, will finally be hurtful to them and business conditions in general.

Mr. Cohen expressed himself as optimistic regarding the affairs of the federation of labor and predicts one of the most successful years for this body.

President Cohen returned to Memphis Tuesday afternoon.

PUBLICITY IN HOME STORE CASE IS EFFECTIVE

Typos Find General Approval of Protest.

McDONALD METHODS WIDELY RESENTED

Committee Chairman Declares All Groups Agree With Workers.

"On every side we are meeting with whole-hearted support in our campaign against the unfair business policies of Roy McDonald, manager of the so-called 'Home Stores,'" said W. A. Baker, chairman of the Typos' Home Stores committee, to a representative of The Labor World.

"All the local unions are with us," Mr. Baker continued. "Recently we wrote the various locals reminding them of our grievance, and many of them have responded, with more letters coming in every week.

"The co-operation local business firms are giving us is indeed gratifying. Occasionally McDonald is able to persuade a small firm to advertise in his throw-sheet, but after we explain how McDonald's business policies conflict with the workers' conception of a fair deal, the advertiser is quick to agree with us, and promises to register his protest.

"During the past month we have been conducting an investigation of the advertising of nationally known products which has been appearing in McDonald's weekly circular, and have proved to our own satisfaction that such 'advertising' is gratis, and does not have the approval of the manufacturer. A little later we will be able to make public our investigation of this angle.

"It is quite amusing to note that McDonald claims to have distributed more than 2,000,000 copies of his throw-sheet during the past year, when at the same time it is so hard to find a copy of the paper. At first we were able to get as many copies as we wanted from our neighbors, but now we find that these neighbors have grown tired of having their front yards cluttered up with trash and dispose of all such stuff via the furnace or garbage can.

"In Dalton we have many staunch supporters. Our good friend there, Tom Crow, keeps his fellow union men and women reminded of the situation, and the co-operation they are giving us is very pleasing.

"When it is explained to local citizens that McDonald advocated slashing of wages in half as a cure for the depression, and declared that any man who worked for him would begin his day's duties at whatever hour the 'boss' chose, and quit by the same sign, and when other of the grocer, baker, dairyman, laundryman, printer, publisher, individualist's business policies are pointed out, we have invariably found that our protest is approved and a sympathetic interest is aroused.

"Every union man and woman in Chattanooga, as well as their many thousands of friends and relatives, should and we believe do appreciate the friendly interest and evidences of co-operation shown us by the public in general in opposing the policies of the Home Stores corporation, as enunciated and carried out by Manager McDonald."

Turner Bakery Signs Union Label Contract

Turner Bakery, 3811 Rossville boulevard, is the latest to sign an agreement with the local Bakers' union, and hereafter the Union Label will be placed on all products of the firm, which distributes pies, cakes and potato chips.

The Turner firm is the third local institution to enter into a contract with the union recently organized, others being the Dixie bakery, 340 East Ninth street, and McMillan bakery, 311 Dodds avenue.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What NRA code led in the elimination of child labor?

A.—The cotton textile code, first to be approved, which provides that "no employer in the cotton textile industry shall employ any minor under the age of 16 years."

Q.—When did the American Federation of Labor first advocate the five-day week?

A.—In 1913, when the convention held that year said: "We heartily commend the five-day week to the thoughtful and favorable consideration of all organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L., to the end that the shortening of the week will be conducive to the physical, material, intellectual and moral welfare of the toilers."

Q.—Was the International Typographical union the first national union to admit women on equal terms with men?

A.—Yes. The I. T. U. admitted women in 1869 and the next year Augusta Lewis was a delegate to its convention.

What Next!

Mechanisms utilizing the photo-electric cell and electric sound control to aid patients who have lost the use of their limbs from paralysis or other causes were recently demonstrated at the Reconstruction hospital, New York City. The instruments were devised to help a 14-year-old boy, paralyzed from the neck down. An arrangement of two light beams and a photo-electric cell above his bed gave him the power, by interrupting one or other of the beams with his head, to turn pages of a book, switch a radio on or off or ring for a nurse.

Labor Militancy Growing

The Virginia Federation of Labor has served notice that unless employers who violate the codes and the recovery act are promptly punished, it will no longer strive to prevent strikes against such employers. Coming from the conservative state of Virginia, this is a significant declaration of labor feeling.

Labor throughout the nation is becoming "fed up" on employer evasion and violation of the codes and the recovery act. Big strikes at Toledo, Minneapolis and other points, as well as the action of Virginia labor, inldicate the workers' resentment. Strikes are now at new high and unless employers change their attitude, they will increase even more, in all probability.

The workers are justifiably angry. They have been patient for many months, and are becoming convinced that their patience has not been appreciated. Apparently some employers will not do the right thing until they are compelled to.

Labor's resentment is not confined to chiseling employers. Hostility to some of the administrative methods of the NRA and the code authorities is increasing fast and is close to the explosion point.

There is a growing feeling of baffiement and a feeling of being double-crossed. There is a growing feeling that labor is being given the "run-around" and that the point of NRA as to increased purchasing power and new employment has been too widely missed. The leaders looked for no miracles, but they did look for more labor representation than has been given and for more employment than has been created.

Wagner Points Out Danger

Senator Robert F. Wagner points out the danger from the unwillingness of business, though benefiting from present improved conditions, to further reduce hours and increase wages. "If the return to prosperity, as measured by increased industrial output and higher profits, is going to be accompanied by a desire to return to the wage philosophy of the 1920's, additional and more serious depressions are only a matter of a few years," he told the senate.

Company Union Photographed

Organized labor's claim that the company union is nothing more nor less than a scheme devised by certain employers to impose their dictatorial decrees on employes and prevent their organization in bona fide independent trade unions is reflected in cogent language in an editorial in "America," a Catholic review published in New York City.

Discussing the declaration by Senator Wagner, chairman of the national labor board, that the company union is an association controlled by the employer, with its expenses paid by the employer and its decisions usually subject to the employer's veto, and that it is not an instrument to enable the worker to bargain with his employer on the basis of equality, the editorial says:

> "Isolated from other labor groups, unable to profit by their knowledge, and forbidden to employ 'outside' counsel, the company union is but a Quaker gun used against an enemy equipped with the most powerful munitions that science can devise and money buy. Certainly, it cannot give its members the weight and authority which they need to bargain collectively with the employer. Indeed, unless the two parties can meet on an approximately equal footing, collective bargaining is a sham. In dealing with the company union, the employer usually has the agreeable task of driving a bargain with himself. That is why some of our largest, and most ruthless employers anathematize the union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and foster the company union."

The editorial concludes that the company union imperils "the rights of workers in general, and thus makes the problems of every wage-earner more difficult of solution. In any crisis, it necessarily ranks the claims of the employer above those of the worker."

The conclusion reached by the editorial in "America" is, of course, reflected by all progressive and reasoning citizens. Nevertheless, officials of some of our largest corporations, notably those in the automobile and iron and steel industries, continue to impose this monstrosity on their employes in violation of both the letter and spirit of the labor section of the national industrial recovery act. Indeed, they seek to protect their subversive position with the cloak of patriotism. All of which reminds us that Samuel Johnson, the eminent English writer and lexicographer, once said that "patriotism is the last resort of a scoundrel."

The Mooney Case

The decision of Federal District Judge A. F. St. Sure, of San Francisco, refusing to grant Tom Mooney a writ of habeas corpus freeing him from San Quentin prison promises to place this case of fundamental injustice before the supreme court of the United States, which it should have reached years ago.

Mooney's counsel, Frank P. Walsh, of New York, and John F. Finnerty, of Washington, assisted by George T. Davis, a San Francisco lawyer, asked for the writ in a petition charging that Charles Fickert, district attorney in San Francisco at the time of the trial, suppressed evidence and used perjured testimony to secure the conviction of Mooney for complicity in connection with the bomb outrage during the preparedness parade in San Francisco in 1916, which killed several persons. Fickert's action, the petition alleged, constituted misuse of and abuse of the state of California of the recognized procedure in a trial court and violated the Fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, which declares that a state shall not "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

The shameless character of the trial was condemned by the 1917 convention of the American Federation of Labor, which declared that the majority of our citizens believed the conviction was brought about "through testimony which branded some of the witnesses as perjurers and those who endeavored to procure subornation of perjury for the purpose of securing such reward as might be given to them for their testimony." On the basis of this belief, the A. F. of L. demanded a new trial for Mooney.

The same position was later taken by Judge Griffin, the trial judge, who said that if the truth had been told to the jury and the jury had nevertheless convicted Mooney, he would have set the conviction aside as a miscarriage of justice. A similar conclusion must be drawn from the report of the Wickersham commission, which clearly showed that what the trial court accepted as evidence warranting conviction was nothing but absolute perjury.

Despite the accumulation of indisputable data during sixteen long years that Mooney was convicted by processes which are aptly described as "legal violence," the California courts have refused to give a new trial and Mooney still languishes in San Quentin prison.

The Mooney case is no longer a case limited to Mooney himself. The larger question is, Can an innocent man, sent to prison for life on what is generally admitted to be perjured testimony, be deprived of his freedom permanently by the technicalities of a state law which makes no provision for a new trial even though the injustice of the original trial is beyond question?

If Federal Judge St. Sure had granted the writ of habeas corpus the state of California would have been put on the defensive by compelling it to show cause why Mooney should not be given his freedom immediately. This would have meant a new trial before a federal court.

When the case reaches the supreme court of the United States, it will be confronted with its own decision in the Scottsboro case that mob intimidation destroys the due process of law prescribed by the Fourteenth amendment. The court will have to answer this question: Are not perjury and mob action equally destructive of due process of law? Students of the facts predict that the supreme judicial body of the nation will answer in the affirmative and order the state of California to remove the striped suit from Tom Mooney and restore him to the liberty of which he has been unjustly deprived for many years.

WHAT PRICE PURITY?

(Nashville Tennessean)
The South—Southern labor particularly—is greatly beholden to Mr. John E. Edgerton. The validity of its debt must be seen rather obliquely, it is true, to be appreciated. Nevertheless, the defense of the Southern laborer is very close to Mr. Edgerton's heart.

Take the matter of differentials, now. Wage differentials. Mr. Edgerton is deeply stirred over this matter. He believes in the differential. But his concern has the cast of shining altruism. In the differential he sees a bulwark to protect Southern labor. He wants to protect racial purity of Southern labor. It is a very high-minded desire.

Mr. Edgerton is president of the Tennessee Manufacturers association, president of the Southern Industrial council . . . and philosopher extraordinary of economics and sociology. In his address before the Southern States Industrial council in Atlanta Tuesday he voiced alarm over the wage scales provided by the new codes. Unless wages are kept relatively low in the South workers from the North, he fears, will come here looking for jobs.

"We will have to learn to speak in seven or eight languages," he fears, "and accustom ourselves to alien standards, customs and philosophies."

It is true, of course, that most of the white labor of the South is of the good old Nordic strain. Waves of immigration from the overcrowded countries of central and southern Europe have never reached us. It is something, possibly, to be proud of. Mr. Edgerton is proud of it, and no doubt our native labor is highly flattered by Mr. Edgerton's ambition to preserve its racial purity.

Mr. Edgerton's formula for keeping our labor Anglo-Saxon, however, may not sit so well; it is simply, hold wage-levels in the South down to such a point that Northern laborers would rather hit the bread line where they are than come here to work.

Seen in this light, and requiring this protection, it would not be amazing if the Southern laborer should ask himself whether or not he is fortunate in possessing blue eyes. He may ask himself what being Nordic has got him. He may even question the theory that he'd rather work for half-pay with another Anglo-Saxon by his side than for a standard wage at the same bench with a Polack. As far as the point of view of labor goes, it is our opinion Mr. Edgerton is far wrong in believing this theory would hold water.

Southern industry wants a handicap in the commercial race. It already has a differential wage scale under the rest of the country. It would be against the spirit of the times and the claims of human justice to press for a further advantage, that would have to be paid out of the pockets of southern workingmen.

We all look forward to the industrial development of the South and are eager to work to that end. But on what basis is this development to be made? On "cheap" labor? The once proud South should feel a natural nausea at the thought. We are not at a disadvantage from other points of view; we have available raw materials, water power; coal and coke, and excellent facilities for transportation. Industry can flourish in the South on the materials at hand and the initiative of its leaders; it would be a shameful success founded on a wage scale of starvation.

SOCIAL SECURITY BILLS FLOOD LEGISLATURES

More Than 125 Measures Before State and National Legislators, Survey Reveals.

New York City, May 31.—The intensified demand for social insurance safeguards has led to the introduction of 127 measures to provide security against unemployment, old age and distress during illness in congress and in the legislatures of fifteen states, according to the findings of a nation-wide survey of the status of legislation published in the April issue of Social Security, issued by the American Association for Social Security.

While legislators everywhere are studying means of providing insurance against these risks, Iowa passed an old-age pension law, the twenty-eighth state to pass such an act, and a congressional committee reported out favorably a bill which would grant federal aid to states paying pensions to their aged.

In signing the Iowa law for pensions of $25 a month to aged citizens of 65 and over, Gov. Clyde L. Herring declared it to be the most important piece of social legislation of the state.

The Dill-Connery bill, which provides for federal aid to states paying pensions to the aged, was advanced in congress through a favorable unanimous report by the house labor committee. To be eligible for aid under this measure, the state laws must be state-wide and mandatory. After Jan. 1, 1939, all state laws would be required to pay pensions at the age of 65. The federal government would contribute one-third of pensions up to $1 a day.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the Wagner-Lewis bill for unemployment insurance, and his statement urging congress to enact this bill in the present session, "places the administration squarely behind the efforts for a sane and prompt solution of this problem," Social Security declared. The bill levies an excise tax of 5 per cent on payrolls which is remitted to employers contributing to state unemployment insurance funds.

OUTLAW CO. UNIONS EASTMAN FAVORS

Asks Permanent Law to Compel Railroad Managers to "Keep Their Hands Off" Labor.

Washington, May 31.—Joseph B. Eastman, transportation co-ordinator, does not mince his words when it comes to demanding the abolition by law of the notorious company union, which has been and is being used by road employes into bona fide trade unions.

In his proposed bill for the creation of a national board of adjustment for the compulsory settlement of railroad labor disputes, Mr. Eastman took the position that the company union provisions of the emergency railroad transportation act should be placed on a permanent basis. He said the provisions made it unlawful for any railroad to—

"1. Deny or in any way question the right of its employes to join the labor organization of their choice.

"2. Interfere in any way with the organization of its employes.

"3. Use its funds in maintaining so-called company unions.

"4. Influence or coerce its employes in an effort to induce them to join or to remain members of such company unions.

"5. Require any person seeking employment to sign a contract or agreement promising to join or not to join a labor organization. And if such a contract has been enforced, the railroad is required to notify its employes by an appropriate order that said contract has been discarded and is no longer binding on them in any way."

"That the principle underlying these provisions is sound is, I believe, hardly open to question," said Mr. Eastman. "It means only that railroad managements must keep their hands off, so far as labor organizations are concerned. Whatever may have been the attitude of employes in the past, it is plain that they are now prepared to insist upon their right as American citizens to bargain and deal collectively with their employers upon equal terms."

A government employe under the "new deal" left home for a trip, and on arriving at his destination discovered he had forgotten to bring extra underclothing. Whereupon he wired his wife: "S. O. S., B. V. D., C. O. D., P. D. Q."

No goods nor service are "just as good" except they are guaranteed by a UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD.

UNION LABELED GAVELS.

Washington.—In a communication to the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, Vice-President George H. Lakey, of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, advises that he can furnish union-labeled gavels made of American walnut and Mexican mahogany. They are beautifully turned and highly finished and are in two sizes. The price is $1.25.

Trade unions desiring a gavel should write to George H. Lakey, Carpenters' building, Indianapolis, Ind.

Purchasing union-labeled gavels will give employment to union carpenters.

Green Supports La Follette Bill For Great Public Works Program

Declaring Industry Can't Absorb Unemployed, He Urges Passage of $10,000,000 Measure—Says Government Has Responsibility of Putting Millions to Work.

Washington, May 24.—Warning that "hungry men are dangerous men," President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, strongly urged passage of the La Follette $10,000,000 public works bill to give work to the unemployed.

Appearing before members of the senate committee on education and labor, President Green said that the hope that industry will be able, within the near future, to carry the entire burden of recovery, had broken down.

Green pictured the NRA and AAA as having failed to "put back to work in industry the vast number of unemployed." He added that purchasing power had not been raised to the level hoped for last June.

"The estimate of unemployment for April shows well over 10,000,000 men and women still out of work," the labor head said. "Yet we are in a period of peak employment in many of the major industries, and most estimates show there will be substantial declines during the next few months."

Urging appropriation of the $10,000,000 authorized in the La Follette bill, Green said:

"The government has a practical as well as a moral responsibility to continue provision for these millions of unemployed through a program of public works."

While Green indicated the NRA had brought about some re-employment, he said it was "all too obvious that the codes have failed to do what was expected of them, in putting people back to work, nor can we hope for any considerable amount of increased employment in that portion of industry for which codes are still to be adopted."

"Industry," he pointed out, "has been unwilling to shorten the hours of labor sufficiently to absorb a really significant number of unemployed."

He said that from October, 1933, to the end of April, 1934, production had increased by about 11.7 per cent, but that the total employment gain had been only 1.5 per cent.

"We cannot, therefore," he said, "look to private industry for a solution of our problem." He said it was "primarily in the heavy or capital goods industry that the NRA has failed to stimulate production." He expressed the opinion that expenditures would stimulate demand for heavy goods.

President Green predicted a long period when there would be large unemployment "unless further and drastic reductions in the hours of work are made."

"We must look forward for some time at least," he said, "to government provision for this vast supply of surplus labor."

Green pointed out that despite the fact there were over 4,000,000 on the CWA payrolls in January, with 300,000 under PWA, 3,000,000 families, representing 12,000,000 people, were "on the government relief rolls."

"With this record of the past year," he said, "do we dare to say that public works shall not be continued and shall not be increased?"

troduced in the house.

"Evidence is available that wage rates prevailing in Washington have been ignored in violation of the law (Bacon-Davis act), that wages due have not been paid, and that workers who have asked for their money have been threatened with discharge," he said.

The resolution would authorize the speaker to appoint a committee of five members, with authorization "to investigate the activities of general contractors engaged in federal construction work in the district." The committee would report its findings to the house with such recommendations for legislation as it deems advisable.

STRICT CODE ENFORCEMENT IS DECLARED NECESSARY TO RESTORE PURCHASING POWER

New York City.—If purchasing power is to be restored under NRA, every code must be strictly enforced, Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews declared in opening a discussion held by the National League of American Citizenship here.

"Enforcement of the code in every industry and throughout the United States without distinction, exception, evasion or excuse," Commissioner Andrews said, "will bring with it increased purchasing power because the codes are designed to eliminate unfair and suicidal competition which in the past has been based on low wages and the consequent lower purchasing power.

"The way to control the employer who deliverately cheats is to prosecute him rigorously and publicly expose him for what he is. It is true that a great deal can be done by patriotic appeal and agreements upon voluntary compliance within an industry but, in the final push, business men cannot be expected to take the same firm stand against fellow-industrialists that a public department can with its machinery for investigation and prosecution.

"We have all been brought up with the idea that tattling is not fair play and I think we can never expect many employers to make it their business, day in and day out, and month after month, to tell on their competitors. The state must be the umpire, referee, the final judge to enforce the popular will."

GIRL WORKERS' LOW PAY IS SHOCK TO CANADIANS

Montreal.—Girl workers in factories, even where minimum wage rates of $10 to $12.50 a week prevail, hardly receive on the average $496 a year or at the rate of $9.50 per week for the whole year, Miss Marion Low, secretary of the employment bureau of the local branch of the Young Women's Christian association, told the national council of that body in a special report.

Girls in offices and larger stores might get the minimum wage rates for fifty-two weeks in the year, but in factory work the girls were not paid for lost time, sickness or holidays, and were subject to fines.

For factory girls yearly earnings of $496 is the ideal, said Miss Low. By that she meant $496 a year was a standard not attained by the majority.

Within walking distance of work the factory girl had to pay at least $2.50 a week for a room. Her food budget was at least $3.50, and that did not allow for adequate nourishment or variety.

After paying for food and lodging, the girl had a balance of $182 a year for clothing and all other necessaries of life.

The publication of such studies, along with the revelations of huge salaries and bonuses paid executives for maintaining dividends on oceans of watered stocks, has greatly disturbed Canadian complacency .

Episcopalians Ask Unemployment Insurance and Ban on Child Labor

New York City, May 24.—Permanent end of child labor and establishment of some form of Unemployment insurance was demanded by the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York at its 151st convention here.

Bishop William T. Manning, who presided, called for the abolition of child labor and protection of unemployed workers in his annual address. The convention adopted a resolution unanimously expressing agreement "with that part of the bishop's address dealing with social questions."

"Two of these needs I wish especially to commend to your attention at this time: first, the permanent and nation-wide elimination of child labor, and second, the protection of our workers by some form of unemployment insurance," Bishop Manning said in his address, in commending the work of the diocesan social service commission. "I am not discussing here the measure by which this is to be accomplished, but the way can be found to end the wrong and shame of child labor and to relieve the workers of our land from the uncertainty and insecurity which now hang over them and their families through fear of unemployment."

Bishop Manning said it was not the function of the church to prescribe economic systems or forms of government.

"But," he added, "it is the function of the church to bring in the reign of Christ in this world, and Christ's reign is not reconcilable with war, or sweatshops, or slums, or racial prejudices and persecution, or with a blind and selfish nationalism."

Urges Workers To Pay Polltax By Saturday

Receipt Must Be Dated Sixty Days Before Election, McKenna Points Out.

W. T. McKenna, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council's special "get-out-the-vote" committee, Friday urged trades unionists and their friends to obtain polltax receipts by Saturday in order to insure qualification for voting in the August election.

"The polltax receipt must be dated sixty days before the election, if the citizen is qualified to vote," Mr. McKenna pointed out, "and our committee hopes to have all members of organized labor and their friends prepared to vote in the coming elections."

Mr. McKenna has addressed the following letter to local secretaries:

As election time is drawing near labor must be on the alert and must have a voice in the government of our people.

The Chattanooga Trades and Labor council has formed a committee for the purpose of upholding the interest of labor in the coming election. It is necessary, therefore, to have your local union appoint or elect one of your members, who is already a delegate to the council, to serve on this election committee. Please forward immediately the name and address of the person appointed to T. R. Cuthbert.

Remember that June 4 is the last day that you can pay your polltax and be eligible to vote in the August election.

The committee has been working for many weeks, and considerable progress is reported. Joe Dobbs is chairman.

Union-Made Sandals On Local Market

Lee A. Pollard, recording secretary of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, Local 620, calls the attention of every union man and woman of Chattanooga to the fact that they can now buy a union-made sandal, made at home at Kenton's Shoe hospital.

"The making of these sandals is giving four union men work now and will more than double that when an advertising campaign is begun," Mr. Pollard said.

"They may be had in any color or cobmbination of colors, also in various designs or patterns. You may design your own sandal and have it made as you want it.

"They are only 'tailor-made.' Your foot is first measured before the making of a sandal is begun. In doing this, absolute comfort and satisfaction is insured.

"The quality and workmanship of these sandals by far excel the cheaper and poorly constructed ones you see. Each and every one has a steel arch running the entire length of the arch to the heel. The arches will not break down, being constructed of all leather and no paper."

Darrow Report Unfair, Labor Board Charges

Review Declared Dis-service to Nation in Time of Great Economic Stress.

Washington, May 31.—The NRA labor advisory board issued the following statement which, it was emphasized by John L. Lewis, a member and president of the United Mine Workers of America, was unanimously approved by the board:

"The labor advisory board of the national industrial recovery administration deems it especially unfortunate that the national recovery review board, of which Mr. Clarence Darrow is chairman, completed its investigations and arrived at the conclusions set forth in its recent report, without any consultation with the representatives of the organized workers of the country.

"Accredited representatives of labor were not invited to testify before the national recovery review board on any of the subjects upon which the board rendered judgment.

"Obviously, the Darrow board has secured its information regarding specific codes from the rag-tag and bobtail elements of industry. Irresponsible malcontents, sweatshop employers and business interests which had lost special privileges found the latch string out and a warm welcome awaiting them before the national review board.

"Representatives of the organized workers were not invited to the Darrow feast and approved codes of fair competition were savagely attacked without any member of the Darrow board stopping to inquire from any member of the Darrow board stopping to inquire from any authoritative source the effect of such attacks upon the economic well-being of the nation's wage-earners.

"The Darrow report sought to idealize and glorify the interest of the small business man and the consumer. Obviously, the small business man profits more under a condition of a high price return for his merchandise. It is equally obvious that the consumer of such merchandise is better pleased and feels better protected under a condition of low prices. The Darrow board should decide which of these groups it elects to serve. Certainly, it cannot ride horses going in opposite directions.

"The Darrow report has rendered a dis-service to the nation and its citizens in a time of great economic stress. It has pandered to the worst elements in our political and economic life. If its members are not conscious of these facts, they are victims of arch stupidity and have forfeited their right to continue to function as a government agency.

"The members of the labor advisory board, conscious of the obligations of their position, unhesitatingly state that the national recovery review board should have its unhappy existence promptly terminated by executive order of the president.

Minimum Wage P. O. Bill Draws Roosevelt's Veto

Washington, May 17. — President Roosevelt vetoed as "discriminatory" the bill which would have guaranteed minimum incomes for postoffice substitute employes and perpetuated their positions.

He emphasized through a statement following the veto that he was not guided so much by a desire for economy as "the broad consideration of public policy and the management of the postal service."

He was more emphatic in his veto message to the House, in which he said:

"The bill is contrary to public policy in that it provides compensation to a certain class of employes regardless of the need for their services. It is discriminatory and establishes a precedent which, if followed, would undoubtedly lead to many abuses."

He informed the house further that the bill "prohibits the postmaster-general from determining the needs of the postal service as to personnel."

If you have done an injury to a fellfailing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

Shoe Repairers Name Officers

Local 620, Shoe Repairers, has named the following officers:

President—C. A. Lee.
Vice-President—L. E. Pollard.

Black-Draught For Dizziness, Headache Due To Constipation

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught several years and find it splendid," writes Mr. G. W. Bailey, of St. Paul, Va. "I take it for dizziness or headache (due to constipation). I have never found anything better. A short while ago, we began giving our children Syrup of Black-Draught as a laxative for colds and little stomach ailments, and have found it very satisfactory." ... Millions of packages of Thedford's Black-Draught are required to satisfy the demand for this popular, old reliable, purely vegetable laxative. 25¢ a package. "Children like the Syrup."

LOCAL CENTRAL BODY TO PROBE REPORTS

Bakeries Company "Generously" Offers to Take Strikers Back, on Company Terms — Workers Get Widespread Support.

NOTICE, BAKERS!

A special called meeting for all local bakers, union and non-union, will be held Saturday evening, at 6 o'clock, at Roosevelt Hall.
C. R. SIMS, President,
Local 25.

Conference Thursday afternoon between representatives of the American Bakeries company and their organized employes failed to make headway toward a settlement of the strike at the local plant of the chain concern, and the walkout which occurred nearly two weeks ago, and which has practically suspended operations on the part of the bakery, is at a standstill. The conference developed only an "offer" by the company to take the strikers back, on the company's own terms, it was reported. The proposal was unanimously rejected by the strikers in meeting Thursday night.

Efforts to reach an agreement were the result of a suggestion by the regional labor board at Atlanta, which heard the story of the strike at a meeting in the Georgia capital last Saturday morning, when both sides to the "argument," with their attorneys, were represented. It was announced that if no agreement was reached, the board would report its findings in the case.

The company, through Joe V. Williams, attorney, this week secured an injunction by Federal Judge George Taylor, which restrains the members of the two organizations involved from "acts of intimidation," or "circulating false literature." It is understood, however, the court's order does not interfere with orderly conduct of the strike, and no mention is made of picketing.

The baking company is said to have made a small amount of bread and cakes since the strike began, practically all of which has been donated to local charities. On one evening this week, a large number of loaves of "Merita" bread were stacked up in the courthouse for free distribution to the members of the unemployed council, which met that night. Representatives of organized labor attended the meeting and explained the situation to the council's members. They were given a splendid reception.

Another incident of the week which was considered rather amusing by some was the publication of a display ad in the morning paper, in which the company offered "free bread and cake" to the families of their striking employes. A representative of the union observed that employes had heretofore been compelled to pay cash for bread and cakes bought from their employers, and similar space was used Friday morning in the advertising columns of the morning paper, respectfully declining the "generous" offer of assistance made by the bakeries.

Seldom if ever has a walkout of workers had more genuine, hearty or widespread support from the general public, union officials pointed out. Chattanoogans are loud in their praises of the splendid manner in which the difficulty has been conducted from the strikers' standpoint.

Offers of assistance have been coming in from surrounding communities, it was said, citizens of Dalton, Chickamauga, South Pittsburg, Jasper and other points expressing sympathy with the strikers.

It is reported that the strike may spread into other towns where the bakeries company operates, and representatives of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will visit Knoxville, Rome, Atlanta and Gadsden to investigate these reports.

Local Central Body meets Monday night, and officers are urging that all delegates be present.

National Officers To Address Miners At Whitwell Meet

Kelley and Duncan Will Discuss Problems of Coal Diggers Saturday.

Harmon Kelley and Dave Duncan, national board members for the United Mine Workers of America, will address a mass meeting for coal diggers at Whitwell Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, it is announced by President William Turnblazer, of District 19.

Mr. Turnblazer said President John L. Lewis had personally delegated the two officials to represent him in a discussion of the welfare of the mine workers. In talking of the meeting Wednesday, the union official said:

"It is necessary that those who believe in collective bargaining, joint contracts, joint relationships and joint wage agreements attend this meeting to hear the discussions by the representatives of President Lewis, and we are hopeful that everybody in and around the mines will be present."

WORKERS WIN LARGER VOICE IN CODE MAKING

Textile Union Officials Hail New Pact.

INVESTIGATION TO COVER MANY POINTS

President McMahon Predicts Evils of Industry Will Be Exposed.

As the result of an agreement between National Recovery Administrator Johnson and Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, labor is to have a larger voice in the administration of the cotton textile industry code.

The agreement also provides for an investigation of hours, wages and other matters under the code. The research and planning division of the NRA will make the investigation, reporting within fourteen days on what wage increase, if any, is possible.

In return, the United Textile Workers called off the nation-wide strike scheduled for June 4 in protest against the 25 per cent curtailment of production in the cotton textile industry, without compensating increase in wages.

President McMahon hailed the agreement as marking the beginning of a "new day" in the textile industry and declared the investigation will result in the exposure of evils in the industry.

Labor's larger voice in code operation and administration is to be given by appointment of a representative of employes on the labor advisory board. The appointment will be made by the secretary of labor. One representatives of the employes is also to be appointed labor advisor to government members on the cotton textile code authority. In addition, the membership of the cotton textile national industrial relations board is to be increased by one representative of employers and one representative of employes.

The investigation of labor conditions will be made on the following questions:

(a) What productive machine hours are necessary to meet normal demand (within ten days)?

(b) What increase, if any, in wage rate is possible (within fourteen days)?

(c) Have wage differentials above the minimum been maintained (within thirty days)?

(d) What changes have taken place in man-hour productivity?

(e) The division of planning and research to co-operate with the industrial relations board in completing its studies of the workload for the use of the board in dealing with all controversies over the stretch-out or specialization system.

A statement signed by President McMahon, Francis Gorman and William F. Kelly, first and second vice-presidents of the union, and Horace Riviere, John Peel, Abraham Binns and Miss Elizabeth Nord commented as follows on the agreement:

"We are confident that the agreement made with Gen. Johnson will mark the beginning of a new day for cotton textile workers.

"It will similarly result in the exposure of the evils in the industry and creates the machinery for an unbiased investigation of conditions, including wages, hours, machine load and code violations.

"We appreciate the sympathetic attitude shown by Gen. Johnson. He discussed with us every phase of the problem, and, while we disagreed in some things, his constructive suggestions were helpful in reaching a settlement. The textile workers can now feel satisfied that the proper agencies will be set up for their protection."

Thank You, Sir

Chickamauga Textile Local In Mass Meeting

Local 1833, United Textile Workers of America, will sponsor a big mass meeting Sunday afternoon at 2:30, at the Liberty theater, Chickamauga. A number of local trades unionists will go down to visit with the organization, and addresses will be delivered by T. R. Cuthbert and others.

Local 1833 has had a remarkable growth during the past few months, and it is said that the union boasts a 98 per cent membership strength in the north Georgia town.

Officers are: President, H. A. Rogers; vice-president, Day McNelly; secretary-treasurer, Tom Compton; recording secretary, M. S, Carter; warden, Dewey King; trustees, P. W. McCallie, Zeke Foster and John McDonald.

Appendicitis Hits Members Local 1785

Two members of Local 1785, United Textile Workers of America, are at Erlanger hospital recovering from operations for appendicitis. Miss Ina Greene, secretary of the local, and John Chapin are the two stricken unionists. Both are said to be doing as well as could be expected.

Chrisman Renamed Engineers' Head

W. A. Chrisman, of Memphis, was re-elected chairman of the legislative board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for the state of Tennessee at a meeting of the board in Nashville last week. Mr. Chrisman has served in the same capacity for several years, and has made many friends throughout the state by his intelligent handling of the Brotherhood's legislative problems. He is also by virtue of his office a member of the Nonpartisan Political committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods.

Meetings of the Engineers' board are held once every three years for the purpose of considering legislation for the benefit of the members and of the labor movement. A strong resolution was passed protesting against consolidation of the railroads. Other officers elected were E. P. Fisher, of Etowah, vice-chairman, and W. W. Fidler, of Nashville, secretary and treasurer.

J. Cohen, president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, addressed the meeting, as did W. E. Jacobs, commissioner of labor, and David Hanly, commissioner of workmen's compensation.

EDUCATOR HAS KIND WORD FOR LABOR WORLD

J. D. Bales Offers Interesting Comments.

LEAVES FOR SUMMER WORK AT COLUMBIA

Soddy Principal's Studies Will Cover Wide Range of School Subjects.

J. D. Bales, principal of Soddy High school, takes occasion, this week, on the eve of his departure for summer studies at Columbia university, to congratulate The Labor World on its "consistent and able support" given the public schools of Chattanooga and Hamilton county.

Mr. Bales is an active member of Local 246, Teachers, and as chairman of the legislative committee of that body has rendered yeoman service to the teachers and the schools. His letter, addressed personally to the editor of The Labor World, is so cheering as to warrant (we hope) the liberty of publishing it in full. In any event, the professor being now well on his way to a distant state, not to return for many weeks, here it is:

1505 Bailey Avenue,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
June 4, 1934.

Mr. R. M. Cooke,
Editor of The Labor World,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
My Dear Mr. Cooke:

Since I am leaving Chattanooga for the summer months for Columbia university, where I expect to complete a course of study leading to the degree of Master of Arts, I am taking this opportunity to give you my change of address so that you may mail The Labor World to me there. Please mail your paper to me at Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York City, N. Y.

You will please permit me to congratulate you and your associates upon the splendid work which you have done and are doing through the pages of The Labor World. The annual Supplement to The Labor World which you issued a short time ago, to my mind, was an excellent piece of work. I feel sure that you have the praise of all the people who are in sympathy with the work you are doing, and particularly for this supplement.

As a member of the teaching staff of the public schools of Hamilton county, I wish to thank you for your consistent and able support which you have given to the interests of the public schools of Hamilton county and of Chattanooga. The public is vitally interested in the welfare of the public schools of our city and county, and I feel sure that the people will be in hearty accord with the efforts that labor constantly puts forth in behalf of the schools.

My work during this summer will be and during past summers has been along the line of the best educational policies and practices concerning both small and large school systems. Such questions as county, city and state organizations and administration of schools, supervisory corps, business administration of schools, public school accounting, budget making, school buildings and equipment, building programs, financing capital outlays, classification and progress of children, health education, elementary and secondary education, curriculum making, salary schedules, economics underlying the operation of public schools, taxation, school revenue, adult education, and the relation of local, state and national responsibility for public education are some of the problems included in my work. Every taxpayer, no doubt, should be vitally interested in many of these questions, and I enumerate them to you inasmuch as I am sure that you are interested in such current issues.

You have my best wishes for a pleasant and successful summer.

Yours very truly,
J. D. BALES.

Cherry Apologizes For His Picture in McDonald's Sheet

Unionist Did Not Know It Was to Appear in Home-Store Advertiser.

Most folks like to see their picture in the paper; but some, at least, are particular about what kind of a sheet prints their likeness.

So E. G. Cherry, veteran street car man, takes his pen in hand this week to "apologize" to all members of organized labor and their friends for the fact that his photo, together with a brother worker, was printed a week or so ago in the throw-sheet operated by Roy McDonald to "advertise" the so-called Home Stores and their various affiliated businesses, which includes a printshop, bakery, dairy, retail grocery stores, tire store and possibly a line of drugs and a laundry.

Mr. Cherry indicates that a person with a camera sort of "slipped up on him," and the old-timer thought he was going to have his picture in a real paper.

"McDonald's throw-sheet got E. G. Cherry's picture," the letter concludes, "but his stores don't get any of his money."

The "opology" follows:

June 5, 1934.

Editor The Labor World:

I take this means through The Labor World to apologize to all organized labor and its friends for my picture being on the front page of the McDonald throw-sheet last week. I am very sorry that it happened.

First I will say that I do not know Roy McDonald and do not trade at any of his stores. As a member of organized labor myself, I do not like his way of doing business and I stay out of his stores. As to the way the picture got there, one of our passengers who lives on Signal mountain and rides with us regularly, said to Mr. Kimbrell, my conductor, and the other man in the picture, that the Signal mountain street cars were coming off the first of July and that he would like to write a story for the paper and would like to have our pictures.

We thought the pictures were for one of the daily papers until we saw it in the throw-sheet.

I will say again that I am very sorry; that it was a "bone" that I pulled for not finding out who this man worked for. I will say in conclusion that McDonald's throw-sheet got E. G. Cherry's picture, but his stores don't get any of his money.

E. G. CHERRY,

Company Threatens to "Leave Chattanooga Flat."

MIGHT "STARVE LOCAL STRIKERS TO DEATH"

Gray Company Admits Justice of Employes' Claims and Signs Agreement. DeLuxe Refuses to Deal With Union.

Forced by what they described as "starvation" wages to organize for collective action, local taxicab drivers employed by the Jolly Cab company, a concern with headquarters in Knoxville, were Friday morning awaiting the next step of the company with regard to a complete walkout which began Wednesday night.

The Jolly company declined positively, it was said, to deal with the union, the local manager taking a firm stand against entering into agreement with the company's employes.

However, after a few hours' operation with strikebreakers imported from Knoxville, the latter are said to have become disgusted and returned to their homes. The cabs were then left in the garages, and it was announced through Friday morning's Times that the company might "leave Chattanooga flat." No further attempt to operate with strikebreakers will be made, Knoxville officials of the concern are said to have stated.

One of the owners of the company is said to have made the cold-blooded statement to union representatives that "We might decide to take our local cars to Knoxville and Nashville, and starve these men here to death."

Local taxi drivers several weeks ago organized a union and formulated proposals which were submitted to each of the companies operating in Chattanooga. The Gray Cab company immediately signed, President Gray freely acacknowledging the justice of the workers' claims. Local manager of the Jolly company is said to have bitterly opposed the move. The Deluxe concern, it was said, refused to deal with the union. It was reported the Watson company would sign the agreement.

Spokesmen for the new union Friday told The Labor World conditions had become unbearable for the drivers, $25 to $27 per month being considered a "good season" for most of them. Spokesmen for the cab company management used up considerable space in the daily papers this week explaining that the taxi drivers were supposed to be given "bonuses" for a certain amount of business turned in. A union representative, however, explained to The Labor World

Q.—What well-known newspaper said: "No workers of their own initiative have organized a company union—it is a boss-inspired union?"

A.—The Christian Science Monitor, in an editorial which also said: "No truly equal-sided collective bargaining is possible in company unions."

Q.—When did American labor first declare for arbitration of disputes between nations?

A.—At the convention of 1887, when a declaration for international arbitration was adopted.

Q.—What was the first American trade union to extend its jurisdiction to Canadian workers?

A.—The International Molders' Union of North America, which in 1863 extended its jurisdiction to Canada, though Canadian unions had been represented at the convention of the organization two years earlier.

What Next!

Chemists of the United States department of agriculture have developed a method of aging leather in three to six months. Thus they can speed up tests of leather's durability and permanence without waiting many years. From this process, the department says, will come new light on the deterioration of book bindings from sulphur acids in the air and other causes.

Fulfilling a Promise

Passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill would be only making good on a promise to the wage-earners of America, Elmer F. Andrews, New York state industrial commissioner, points out in a statement reiterating support of the measure.

"The nub of the whole matter is that American workers have been promised the right to genuine collective bargaining and are now determined, in greater numbers than ever before, to win that right," Mr. Andrews says, adding: "If they are not given it by orderly government legislation and action, it is to be expected that they will struggle for it in the costly fashion employed in Minneapolis, Toledo and threatened in the steel centers of the country. In my view, enactment of the Wagner bill would not be a surrender to labor, as some employers have said. Rather, it will be a fulfillment of a promise made to the workers of this country and agreed to by every employer signing an NRA code of any description.

"American industry cannot go backward to autocratic methods. The San Francisco Commonwealth club speech of President Roosevelt, in 1932, in which he laid down the principle that industry and business must be conducted with regard to the welfare of the workers and the public, marked a turning point in American history. The Wagner labor disputes bill is an implement for the fulfillment of that principle."

Picture Is Overdrawn

America has often been pictured as a land of golden opportunity for its women in business and the professions, but a report of the United States Women's bureau indicates that the picture has been colored too brightly.

Mentioning the 20,000 business and professional women whose incomes and difficulties were studied by the bureau in cooperation with the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Mary Anderson, director of the bureau, said: "When we look into the question of what they earned, the story takes on a rather depressing aspect."

A check-up of the earnings of 16,000 women, who lived in forty-seven states and the District of Columbia, showed that the average amounted to only $1,625. One-fourth earned less than $1,210, one-fourth more than $2,075, but only one-eighth earned $2,500 or more.

Jobless Generation a Menace

Reports from Europe in the last few years have told of a generation of young people who have never been employed. They have come to maturity during the time of widespread unemployment following the war and have been unable to find work. Now America seems to be developing the same kind of generation.

In Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, a study of the state employment office discloses that 10 per cent of the county's jobless are persons who have never been employed. They are between the ages of 16 and 26.

The Pennsylvania study reveals a serious situation, which undoubtedly obtains in other parts of the United States. Crime, bitter discontent, maladjustments of many kinds are certain to exist to a greater degree among young people who can't get work than among those employed. The nation must remedy the situation or reap a harvest of evil.

Sound NRA Exemption Ruling

A Cleveland worsted mill recently asked exemption from the machinery hours limitation of the code for the wool textile industry on the ground that a strike in March had decreased production and it wished to make up for lost ground. The NRA denied the application.

The code authority and the advisory boards took the sound position that the granting of the application would tend to establish a dangerous precedent. It pointed out that if employers knew they could secure exemptions to make up for time lost by strikes, they would be less apt to make an earnest endeavor to get along in peace with their employes.

If the ruling is an indication of NRA policy in the future, it is of great importance and significance. Labor believes that the application of the Cleveland mill was very properly denied and hopes that similar applications will be rejected.

Quality Goods and Wages

Robert H. Montgomery, New York business man, told the United States Chamber of Commerce in annual convention that extensive exploitation of cheap merchandise has been a big evil of the depression. He went on to say some things of interest to labor.

"Instead of glorifying cheap and inferior products with specious claims of excellence, producers and distributors should explain to the public the economies and advantages in service and in satisfaction of merchandise of good quality," Mr. Montgomery said. "They should inform their customers that not only are quality products of intrinsic value and economy in the long run, but their purchase is a potent aid toward the recovery of general prosperity. By raising the standards of quality in merchandise today, we will also be raising the standards of living, by increasing employment and advancing the general levels of wages. It is the most logical and immediate method available today of putting more people to work at higher wages and in further increasing consumption of raw and manufactured products."

A Pernicious Practice

The unpatriotic filibuster recently used by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, to prevent a vote in the Federal House of Representatives on the Capper-Norton old-age pension bill for the District of Columbia is a well-defined illustration of a parliamentary practice that should receive little toleration.

The bill had been favorably reported by the House Committee on the District of Columbia, whose chairman is Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Representative Norton sponsored the measure.

Representative Norton called up the bill on the one day in three weeks devoted by the House of Representatives to measures concerning the District of Columbia.

Representative Blanton declared his opposition to the measure, which was his parliamentary right. But he carried his opposition to the extent of using that most objectionable form of parliamentary obstruction, a one-man filibuster, to prevent a vote. He made a one-hour speech which he admitted was merely a device to kill time. When objection was raised to this procedure he retorted that "under the rules of the House I can use my time in discussing any subject that suits me." He blocked a unanimous consent agreement to limit general debate. He insisted on having the bill read at length. He raised colorless points of order to consume time. He resorted to a number of other devices to block action on a meritorious bill to give the dependent aged of the nation's capital that security from want which is the underlying principle in old-age pensions.

Opposition to any bill which he opposes, regardless of the merit of his position, is the parliamentary right of a Member of Congress. But that opposition should not be carried to the extent of a one-man filibuster to prevent action on a measure on which all the other members are ready to vote. Such a practice is pernicious. It is especially pernicious toward the end of a session of Congress when forced delay may cause a measure to be lost in the volume of parliamentary business incident to such a period.

One man should not be permitted to run the House of Representatives.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The strike front is hot. It probably will be hotter. Trucks, bakeries, water fronts, factory workers—read your daily papers and treble the strike news to get a fair picture.

Today's strikes may be ended tomorrow, but tomorrow there will be new ones. Men who prefer peace are forced to fight. Industries, urged by NRA to be fair and standing with backs to the wall trying not to be fair. Wages have been hit by a "leveling-off" process, cutting down the higher rates, perhaps here and there raising the lower ones.

In the mass, purchasing power hasn't budged much—ten million still look for jobs where there are no jobs.

Not so good. But better than a year ago. A year ago nobody had the courage to strike—no hope of getting anything out of a strike. Today plenty have the courage. Some have too much.

Bad spot in the situation is the emergence of the reds. Too many of them. Numerically they don't run so big, but they are in some key positions and they flock to strike scenes. "Hard-headed" (which so often means merely bone-headed) business leaders can fight real unionism to a point where they may have to deal with red revolutionists instead of democratic American trade union leaders. Too many employers are too short-sighted. They talk about "running their own business," not knowing what it means in its proper sense, but using the term to cloak a determination to wring the last cent out of workers.

The man who sits on the bank of a babbling brook today trying to see things without bias or prejudice is up against a tough job. The biggest shots among employers have been and continue to be utterly stupid. New York banks pile up big profits and still try to block recovery. Among workers resentment piles up—high up. It gets higher.

Of course, when pressure gets high enough there has to be a let-loose somewhere. Toledo has had one. San Francisco, Minneapolis and so on.

Queer thing about Toledo—many of the business leaders interested in struck plants also were leaders in banks that went bust.

One of the results came when the general Toledo public sided with the strikers. Nobody liked those banker-business men.

GARY SCHOOL SYSTEM AIMS TO MAKE EFFICIENT "HANDS"

Dr. Wirt's Chain Scheme of Education Ignores Character Building, Takes No Account of Child's Personality and Characteristics—Labor Emphatically Condemned Plan at Atlantic City Convention.

Chicago, June 7.—A series of newspaper stories in reference to Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools of Gary, Ind., who created such a national uproad by his charge that communists were running the government at Washington, would not be complete without an explanation of the Gary platoon public school school system.

Briefly, the platoon system as in vogue at Gary means to keep the children in school eight hours a day and march them from classroom to classroom for instruction by specialists in the various subjects. The teachers and pupils have no chance to become intimately acquainted. The teacher cannot study the personalities, characteristics and aptitudes of the pupil, which is so essential to character building. No intimacy, no chance for maternal care. No child goes home to its parents and says: "I love teacher."

Aims at Good Factory Hands.

There is manual training, and the whole system is predicated upon the idea of turning out good factory hands. Henry Ford makes automobiles in the same manner—the chain system of production. He has a similar school at his factories at Dearborn, Mich., I as told by W. T. Rawleigh, of Freeport, Ill., when I interviewed that would-be statesman more than three years ago, at a time when Rawleigh was installing an alleged school in his non-union factory and had borrowed a Ford employe to install it. Work with a scoop shovel at 15 cents an hour was a part of the Rawleigh curriculum for boys of 13 and 14 years of age.

> Wirt, Ford, Rawleigh, the United States Steel corporation, it is all the same; train the boys and girls so that they will be cheap and obedient servants of the modern industrial system.

Chicago fought this out a decade ago, and Chicago school teachers have been in hot water ever since because they fought for public control of public schools and against their conversion into something that the big vested interests thought would best suit their purposes.

"Intelligence Tests" a Feature.

So-called intelligence tests are a feature of the platoon system. A story is told of a Detroit boy who said to his mother one evening after school:

"Say, ma, they examined me for an idiot today and I didn't pass."

The convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Atlantic City in October, 1925, dealt at great length with the subject of platoon schools and intelligence tests and condemned them. Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, who had been in the thick of the fight at Chicago, occupied the floor of the convention for nearly two hours in explaining the viciousness of the system.

Dr. Wirt has sold the platoon idea to New York City and had been hired at $10,000 a year, one week's services out of each month, to install the system here. He had told the New York school authorities that he could close one-half of their school buildings following inauguration of his plan. Failing to make good, Dr. Wirt was fired.

NAMED TO NEWSPAPER BOARD.

Washington.—National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson has announced the appointment, recommended by the labor advisory board, of Jonathan Eddy, executive secretary of the American Newspaper Guild, to be an additional member of the Newspaper Publishing Business Industrial Relations board. Eddy will represent labor on the board.

ROOSEVELT BACKS WAGNER LABOR DISPUTES MEASURE

Washington, May 31.—Following word from President Roosevelt urging the enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill at this session of congress, Senator Wagner started a series of conferences with senate leaders to win their co-operation for the prompt approval of the measure.

Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the labor and education committee, will report it to the senate shortly, it was said, in a revised form.

Senator Wagner and the friends of the legislation are convinced that the measure should be made a part of the senate's "must" program to be acted on before adjournment. Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson declined to commit himself on the bill. After conferring with the president, Mr. Robinson said the question of what bills must be passed before adjournment will not be determined until the tariff and silver measures are disposed of.

But Senator Wagner, who is chairman of the national labor board, takes the view that enactment of the bill is a major essential to preserve industrial peace. In stressing the need for the measures he pointed out that the strike of the auto workers in Toledo, the truckmen's strike in Minneapolis and the threatened strike of the iron and steel workers demonstrated the helplessness of the national labor board as now constituted and the necessity for a federal agency which had the power to determine conflicts between labor and industry.

Senator Wagner contended that 90 per cent of the labor troubles in recent months have not been over wage rates or working conditions but over the question of recognition of a labor union. The quickest way to settle such disputes, he said, is to hold an election under auspices of an impartial authority so that the employes can make known their preference of the union they want to represent them.

BAKERY CODE APPROVED; LABOR RULES SUBJECT TO CHANGE AFTER STUDY

Washington, June 7.—Twenty-five thousand bakeries, representing almost every community in the country, will come under the code Blue Eagle on June 18, according to terms of the code for the billion-dollar bakery industry, just signed by President Roosevelt.

The code contains a provision that an investigation of the operation and effect of the labor provisions shall be made by the code authority within ninety days, after which the provisions will be subject to such modifications as the president may find necessary.

Official announcement by the NRA said the 90-day provision was inserted at the insistence of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America because of dissatisfaction with the labor provisions, especially the 48-hour week provisions for the hand-craft division of the industry. The weekly hours for the mechanized plants were reduced to forty. Dissatisfaction with exemptions to the hour provisions was registered also, especially the clause which reads "that on any shift or processing department there shall be not more than one (1) executive for every eight employes or fraction thereof." The "fraction" is held by the union to be nullification of re-employment possibilities in a large group, especially of unionized men.

48-Hour Maximum Set.

Maximum hours of employes permitted under the code are 40 per week in mechanized bakeries and 48 in handcraft shops. Commission salesmen, including house-to-house and route delivery salesmen, are exempt from any limitation on work hours, as are "executives, solicitors and professional persons" who receive $35 or more per week in cities over 100,000 population and $30 elsewhere.

Minimum wages are graded according to population of city and occupation. For clerical employes the lowest wage permissible is $14 a week in cities under 250,000, $15 in cities between 250,000 and 500,000 and $16 in larger places. Salesmen are guaranteed $18, $20, or $22 a week, depending on population; other employes will receive at least 40 cents per hour, except that icers, wrappers and cleaners will receive not less than 32 cents an hour. In the south minimum wages may be $1 a week or 5 cents an hour lower.

Wages above the minimum are protected against reduction and hourly rates must be increased. The code provides: "No employe whose normal full-time weekly hours averaged over the four weeks ending June 10, 1933, are as a result of the adoption of this code reduced by 16 2/3 per cent or less shall have his or her fulll-time earnings reduced; and any employe whose said normal full-time weekly hours are so reduced by more than 16 2/3 per cent shall have his or her hourly rate of pay increased by at least 20 per cent." This provision does not apply to those making $35 a week or more; for such workers the code demands an "equitable adjustment" of rates.

Cannot Praise Code, Union Says.

Following signing of the code, representatives of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union issued a statement which said:

"The union tried desperately to induce the industry to accept a code more in harmony with NRA aims. It presented an enormous mass of evidence and contends that this evidence has not been met by counter-proof. But finally the union withdrew objection to approval of the code, on condition that provision be written into it for review at the end of ninety days. The code contains such a provision and the union expects to lend all possible assistance to the end that the industry may prosper under the code, and real re-employment may be established, which the union contends cannot be accomplished with the long hours fixed in the code.

"The union cannot join in praise of the code, because no code containing provision for a 48-hour work week can be called good from any progressive point of view. But the union has taken the position that since the industry contends it cannot operate on a shorter week and since there is to be review in ninety days, the union can well afford to wait through this brief period, thereupon to join in determination of hours on the basis of what the union hopes will be ample and authoritative statistical evidence.

Thus the union enters upon the code experience without prejudice, looking forward now to co-operation in establishment of working hours based upon jointly established evidence, prepared to give its best efforts toward the stability and prosperity of the industry. Code standards are, of course, far behind union standards, which shows the progressive nature of union relations, but the union regards it as a real measure of progress to have reached the stage where statistics may have their full and proper weight in the fixing of the work-week. The union enters this period with good will and with every desire to co-operate to the fullest extent."

The position of the union as thus set forth bears the approval of A. A. Myrup, secretary-treasurer, and his executive officers.

Wagner Labor Bill Reported To the Senate

Revised Text Affirms Workers' Right to Organize, Prohibits Employers from Using "Unfair Practices" to Nullify This Right.

Washington, May 31.—The revised Wagner labor disputes bill, reported favorably to the senate by the committee on education and labor, is a complete rewrite of the original bill. While the revised text contains much of the substance of the old bill, the language in many instances is sharply modified by making definitions more specific and limited.

As reported by the committee the measure provides for the establishment of a national industrial adjustment board of five members appointed by the president, and legislates out of existence the present national labor board.

Freedom of Association.

The principal work of the adjustment board will be to make effective the rights of labor as set forth in the declaration of policy, which says:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to remove unnecessary obstructions to the free flow of commerce, to encourage the establishment of uniform labor standards and to provide for the general welfare by establishing agencies for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes, and by protecting the exercise by the workers of complete freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of his own choosing for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of his employment or other mutual aid or protection."

Unfair Labor Practices.

The rights of labor set forth in the declaration of policy have been and are largely destroyed by certain schemes of anti-union employers which are described as "unfair labor practices." On these schemes the bill declares:

"It shall be an unfair labor practice:

Coercion of Employes Banned.

"(1) For an employer to attempt, by interference or coersion, to impair the exercise of employes of the right to form or join labor organizations, to designate representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

Protects Employers.

"(2) For employes to attempt, by interference or coercion, to impair the exercise by employers of the right to join or form employer organizations and to designate representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Interference with Unions Prohibited.

"(3) For an employer to interfere with or dominate the administration of any labor organization or contribute financial support to it; Provided, That, subject to rules and regulations prescribed by the secretary of labor, an employer shall not be prohibited from permitting an employe, individually, or local representatives of employes, from conferring among themselves or with management during working hours loss of time while engaged in the business of a labor organization.

Union Shop Legalized.

"(4) For an employer by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment, or by contract or agreement, to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization: Provided, That nothing in this act, or in the national industrial recovery act, or in any code or agreement approved thereunder, or in any other statute of the United States, shall preclude an employer from making an agreement with a labor organization (not established, maintained, or controlled by unfair labor practice) to the effect that a person seeking employment shall be required, as a condition of employment, to join such labor organization, if the agreement is sought by a majority of employes in the unit covered by it when made. Nothing in this proviso shall be construed by the board to indicate that an employer is bound to enter into an agreement conditioning employment upon membership in any labor organization."

Collective Bargaining Representatives

On the disputed question as to whom shall represent employes in collective bargaining negotiations with employers, and the method to be followed in choosing such representatives, the bill says:

"Sec. 10 (a). In any dispute as to who are the representatives of employes, the board, if the dispute might burden or affect commerce or obstruct the free flow of commerce, may investigate such dispute and certify to the parties, in writing, the name or names of the individuals or labor organization that have been designated and authorized to represent employes. In any such investigation, the board shall hold an appropriate hearing, and the board shall be authorized to take a secret ballot of employes, or to utilize any other suitable method to ascertain by whom or by what labor organization they desire to be represented.

"The board shall decide whether eligibility to participate in a choice of representatives shall be determined on the basis of employer unit, craft unit, plant unit, or other appropriate unit. Each unit may be given representation in proportion to its membership. The board may determine that representatives agreed upon by the majority of employes in an appropriate unit shall represent the entire unit for the purpose of negotiating agreements concerning terms and conditions of employment. Provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit an employer from discussing grievances with an employe or group of employes at any time.

"(b) In any dispute not of the character described in subsection (a), as to who are the representatives of employes, the board may offer its services to aid in determining who are such representatives."

HOUSE LEADERS BLOCK RAILROAD 6-HOUR BILL

Washington, May 31.—The move of organized labor for the six-hour day for railroad employes received what is feared is its death blow for this session of congress when the house commerce committee reported out the Crosser bill without recommendation.

Proponents of the measure had secured the signatures of 145 members of the house to a petition taking the bill out of the hands of the committee and compelling a vote on it at an early date. Now the only chance for the bill is through a rule from the rules committee making its consideration a special order of business. The opposition of the house leaders precludes this action.

TOLEDO PAPERS SIGN WITH DRIVERS' UNION

Toledo, O.—Publishers of the Toledo Blade and Toledo Times have signed a contract with the truck drivers, who recently organized under the Teamsters', Chauffeurs' and Helpers' union, Local No. 20, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, following an 11-day negotiation.

The agreement, which is for one year from May 23, 1934, provides for a 48-hour week at a full time wage of $21.60. The scale under the new contract is the same as formerly in force.

MORE ABOUT TAXI STRIKE

that any driver who made the grade for this bonus was watched for infractions of the rules, such as taking a few puffs on a cigarette, and was fined approximately the amount of the "bonus."

On Thursday the Jolly concern employed Gus A. Wood and Williams & Williams and went into chancery court seeking an injunction. The bill of complaint, as reported in the dailies, followed the usual lines, charging the strikers with almost every crime in the calendar and praying for an order which would have prohibited the men from pursuing the lawful course of the strike. Chancellor Foust issued a temporary writ restraining acts of violence, which the strikers contend they had not committed and did not intend to commit.

"We intend to obey the law," they told The Labor World. "The general public has indicated a fine spirit toward us, and we appreciate their support and ask their continued co-operation in our efforts to make something like a living wage."

Hosiery Workers Open Meet With Bright Outlook

Gains Under NRA Make Picture More Hopeful. South Sends Delegates.

Reading, Pa., June 7.—Representatives of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers from all over the nation met in Reading June 4 for their twenty-third annual convention to celebrate gains under the NRA and to plan for pushing organization still further, especially in seamless branches.

At the last convention, conditions in the industry were in chaos, and NRA gains both to manufacturers and workers were in doubt.

This convention, the picture is brighter, more hopeful. The story of the union's tremendous strikes and its efforts to stabilize the industry in which its workers earn their livelihood was enlarged upon by a large group of speakers.

Gov. Pinchot, Frances Perkins, Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and J. H. Maurer, grand old man of the labor and socialist movements, were scheduled to make addresses.

From all over the nation came not only delegates from the older and now more strongly organized branches, but more important from newly tapped territories where unionization in the last year has been progressing with leaps and bounds.

Probably the most significant of these newly tapped territories are through the south—Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, etc., which sent a group of workers for the first time to a convention. Out of the west came other delegates from newly organized branches such as Des Moines, Iowa, and widely scattered hosiery centers where the workers have awakened to the need for organization.

And especially from Pennsylvania towns came a group of delegates from areas where before last year the very word "union" was shunned. New Jersey also sent a group of new delegates from recently organized branches.

Mrs. Althea Terrell, secretary of Branch 58, is representing that local union as a delegate in the convention.

Toledo Walkout Ended; General Strike Averted

Settlement Gives Electric Auto-Lite Workers More Pay, Union Recognition — Edison Employes Win Wage Restoration.

Toledo, O., June 7.—A general sympathy strike of Toledo labor, voted by more than 100 local unions, was averted by ratification of a settlement ending the long and bitter strike at the Electric Auto-Lite company plant here.

Following approval of the agreement by the United Automotive Workers' union and by the Auto-Lite council, which did not join the strike, the agreement was approved by company officials. The agreement provides for a 5 per cent wage increase and recognition of a union committee for collective bargaining. It also provides for arbitration of disputes and for a classified system of re-employment beginning with the workers who stayed on the job and the strikers and ending with the employes engaged after the strike began.

The agreement was worked out at meetings presided over by Ralph Lind, representing the national labor board; Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, agent of Secretary Perkins; E. H. Dunnigan, labor department conciliator, and Thomas Taylor, representing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Those who addressed the union meeting hailed the compact as a union victory. The speakers included Thomas J. Ramsey, business agent of the union at the Auto-Lite plant, and Floyd Bossler, president of the union.

While the company officials were considering the agreement a settlement between the Toledo Edison company and union electrical workers was formally signed. The union's acceptance of a 20 per cent wage restoration averted a strike that threatened to shut off power and lighting current in the entire Toledo district.

All of the 900 national guardsmen, sent here to guard the Auto-Lite plant, have left the city.

St. Paul, Minn.—Representatives of newspaper writers and editors, organized in guilds in sixty-five cities in all parts of the country, attended the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild here. The guild has 8,000 members.

The principal business of the convention was the perfection of organization work and the formulation of a national program.

COMPANY UNION BOSSES BLAMED FOR BLOODSHED IN TOLEDO AUTO STRIKE

Washington, May 31.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, placed responsibility for the two persons killed and many injured in the strike of the employes of the Electric Auto-Lite company at Toledo, O., directly on the management of the company, which, he said, is carrying out the anti-union policy of those who dominate the automobile industry.

"It is the outcome of the determination of the management in the automobile parts industry to maintain the company union at any cost and to resist the attempts of the men to organize and bargain collectively under Section 7-A of the law," Mr. Green said to the Associated Press.

"The loss of life is to be deplored. The responsibility for it must be placed where it belongs.

"The Toledo affair is bound to have a repercussion in all industrial centers and will serve to inflame the minds of the workers everywhere. I have been doing all I could to bring about a settlement, but have not succeeded owing to the unyielding, stubborn attitude of the employers."

"There is a widespread state of discontent all over the country," Green added, in backing up his assertion that the Toledo strikers had been "goaded to desperation," and "so much so that other laboring people have been aroused."

VIRGINIA LABOR WARNS STRIKES FACE BOSSES WHO VIOLATE NRA CODE

Roanoke, Va., May 31.—The moratorium on strikes in Virginia has ended, the Virginia Federation of Labor warned at its annual convention here.

The federation charged that many employers are ignoring the plain provisions of the recovery act and the codes and declared that "unless these violations of the codes, as well as the recovery act itself, are punished in a reasonable time after they happen, we hereby give warning to all concerned that we will cease restraining members of unions, as we have been doing for nearly a year, knowing that removal of this curb will cause strikes and other serious disturbances throughout the state."

The federation went on to declare that in taking "so drastic an action," labor was simply placing the blame where it belongs, upon employers who are guilty of code violations and that "it now behooves fair-minded and just employers to exert every effort to see that all wilful violators of the recovery act and codes are rapidly and effectively punished."

Among important matters before the convention was the case of the Norfolk Fire Fighters, whose union has been ordered disbanded by Norfolk officials, with the case now in the courts. Vernon Gornto, president of the Norfolk Central Labor union, was the first to take the floor in behalf of the firefighters, denouncing the city officials for threatening the jobs of the workers if they joined the union. J. Fred Cherry, past president of the state federation, said: "Political bosses are afraid of the political strength of these men."

President Charles J. Hughes announced that fifty new unions, with a membership of 20,000, had been organized during the year. He predicted that all workers in Virginia "worthwhile organizing" would be organized by the next convention.

J. D. Rapp, a railway carman of Clifton Forge, was elected president for the ensuing year. The next convention will be held at Portsmouth.

SETTLE CITATION CASES.

Washington.—The national labor board announced that the hearings in the cases of Kirchick-Beckerman, Inc., in New York, and of the Great Lakes Steel corporation, Ecorse, Mich., cited to be heard by the board, had been canceled on notification that settlements had been arrived at. Both companies had been cited to show cause why their cases should not be referred to enforcement agencies. The board was notified that satisfactory settlements had been carried out by both companies. The decision of the board in both cases turned on the statements ordered on the point that employes had been unjustly charged for union activity.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come letters like the following from Mr. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla.: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I use it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling. I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is suffering (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost immediately feel a lot better. It is worth its weight in gold to a family." . . . To the Public:

As previously stated, the cutting of the Memorial Trees on Rossville Boulevard was done in error. The instructions on our employees were to trim the trees—not to cut them, and they took it upon themselves to do the cutting.

The manager of the Packer Adv. Corporation is, comparatively speaking, a new-comer to Chattanooga and he had no way of knowing that the trees were Memorial trees, as they stood on private property. Had this fact been known to him, even orders for trimming the trees would not have been issued.

We honor and respect the memory of all of those who took up arms in our defense.

We deeply regret the destruction of these trees. Therefore, we announce to the public that trees equally as large as those cut will be replanted just as soon as seasonal conditions permit.

Constructive suggestions will be welcomed.

PROPAGANDA FAILS TO DRAW SUPPORT FROM BUSINESS MEN

Unionists Declare Public Will Be Informed When Walkout Settled.

Reported American Bakeries Canceled Advertising Contract With Local Paper Because Facts Were Printed---Unrest in Other Loalities Increases.

NOTICE, BAKERS!

A special called meeting for all local bakers, union and non-union, will be held Saturday evening, at 6 o'clock, at Roosevelt Hall.
C. R. SIMS, President,
Local 25.

Reports that strikebreakers employed as salesmen for the American Bakeries company are representing merchants and business men that the strike at the local plant of the chain concern is over featured the third week of the walkout of bakers and salesmen of the Chattanooga branch of the Atlanta company.

Representatives of the two unions involved in the dispute stated that these emissaries of the company "explain" to prospective customers that strikers had been offered increased pay but refused to accept, and therefore there is no longer any strike.

Union spokesmen pointed out that conferences last week developed only the "offer" by the company to get the strikers back, but on company terms, which were exactly the conditions which prevailed prior to the walkout.

Although the alleged propaganda had a slight temporary effect, the union men explained, merchants and business people soon were informed of the truth, and support for the strikers is being continued as it has been since the inception of the trouble.

Retail dealers were reminded that when the strike is settled the "old salesmen" will be on the job. Until the man who regularly delivered American Bakeries products again calls upon the trade, the strike is still on," a union official declared. "Further, when the dispute is ended the public will be notified through the daily press and The Labor World."

The regional labor board at Atlanta, before which the case was taken some two weeks ago, has not yet made its report.

Committees have continued their visits not only to merchants, explaining the situation, but to surrounding communities and other cities where the company bakeries operate.

Another interesting development recently in connection with the walkout is the report that the Atlanta concern canceled a large advertising contract with a Chattanooga paper because that paper insisted on publishing the facts about the strike. It was recalled by old-time trades unionists that arrogant employers in other labor disturbances had demanded suppression of strike news, but not always with success locally.

Unrest among employes of the chain in other cities increases each day, the unionists report, but spokesmen for the workers declared it was hoped the matter would be settled locally and that workers in other plants of the American bakeries might benefit from the result here, thereby preventing extension of the difficulty into other localities.

Officers of the two locals Friday expressed again their sincere appreciation for the splendid and almost unanimous support given them by the Chattanooga public, and asked The Labor World to urge a continuation of the co-operation until a fair and equitable settlement is agreed to by company officials.

Cuts in Textile Hours Are Urged Without Pay Cut

New Bedford Paper Says Production Letup Should Not Victimize Workers.

New Bedford, Mass., June 14.—The New Bedford Standard-Times editorially advocated a reduction in machine hours without a cut in pay throughout the cotton textile industry. The editorial said:

"Now is the time for New England cotton manufacturers, and especially for those in Massachusetts, to make common cause with labor, and to exert their influence to the end that machine hours are reduced without any reduction in pay, and that the textile code provisions relating to wage differential between the north and south are lived up to throughout the industry.

"A raising of wage rates in the industry should have the support of New Bedford mill, as long as it is made to apply uniformly and in accordance with the intent of the code. There has been too much of a tendency in the south and some other sections to make the minimum wage the maximum.

"That the eighty hours a week of machine operation, now fixed as the maximum under the code, is in excess of what is required to meet the normal demand for goods, has been proved since the code went into effect by the fact that on two occasions a general curtailment of 25 per cent has been ordered."

Sinclair Oil Company Signs Union Contract With Workers

Model Agreement Provides for Closed Shop, Checkoff and Other Features—President Sinclair Hails Pact as Move for Stability and in Line With NRA—Praises William Green and Other Labor Officials for Fairness.

Washington, June 12.—Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation, and Harvey C. Freming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America, signed an agreement running for one year, recognizing the union for all of the companies controlled by the oil corporation.

The pact was completed after several months of conferences between Mr. Sinclair; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and President Fremming and R. H. Stickel, of the International association. It covers some 15,000 men working in development, production, pipe line operation and refining carried on by the Consolidated Oil corporation, Sinclair Refining company, Sinclair Prairie Oil company, Sinclair Prairie Oil Marketing company, Sinclair Prairie Pipe Line company and Rio Grande company. Joint announcement of the agreement was made by Mr. Green and Mr. Sinclair.

First National Agreement.

The agreement for union recognition is said to be the first on a national scale signed by a large oil company with an independent union, the oil industry having been hitherto dominated by the monstrosity known as the company union, established, fostered, financed and controlled by anti-labor corporation officials for the purpose of preventing employes from enrolling in bona fide trade unions.

An outstanding feature of the agreement is the machinery established for the amicable settlement of labor disputes without strikes or lockouts, with final adjustment referred to the chief executive of the Consolidated Oil corporation and the chief executive of the American Federation of Labor, whose decision shall be binding upon both parties. Provision is also made for the check-off system of dues collecting when agreed to by the employe and the employer.

The wage schedule makes special provision for increasing the pay of workers doing so-called "common labor."

Strikes and Lockouts Banned.

An official summary of the provisions of the agreement providing for the adjustment of labor disputes follows:

"The agreement provides that there shall be no cessation of work through strikes or lockouts during the term of this agreement, which is for one year from June 1. All grievances and disputes are to be taken up in the first instance with the immediate superior of the employe. If settlement is not arrived at, workmen's committees have the right to take the matter up with the company superintendent locally in charge. In the event that satisfactory settlement is not reached by such conference, the chief executive officer of the association shall have the right to confer with the chairman of the executive committee of Consolidated Oil corporation. The above procedure applies to local disputes and grievances.

Arbitration Machinery.

"In the event any dispute or disagreement arises as to wages or of a general character affecting a large number of employes, such dispute is to be referred for settlement to the chief executive of the employer and the chief executive of the association. In the event that they are unable to arrive at a settlement, the dispute is to be referred to the chief executive officer of Consolidated Oil corporation and the chief executive of the American Federation of Labor. If they are unable to effect a settlement of such a dispute, 'they shall agree upon a method and procedure of arbitration for the settlement of such dispute or grievance,' the award to be binding upon both parties."

No Physical Examinations.

In regard to the rules governing employes the official summary says:

"Other provisions of the agreement provide that in filling vacancies the employer will exercise due regard for length of service, taking into account ability and efficiency.

"A minimum of three hours' pay is to be paid to employes who are called for duty outside of working hours.

"Employes are not required as a condition of employment, in other than exceptional cases, to submit to a physical examination by a physician in the pay of the employer but may furnish a certificate of current date from any reputable doctor.

Check-Off System.

"Upon receipt of written request by any employe, the employer agrees to co-operate with the association in the collection of dues by deducting from wages due the regular monthly dues as fixed by the local union.

"Employes shall not be discharged on account of accidents unless it appears that the accident was caused by negligence, carelessness or malicious intent.

"In cases where an employee reports to his regular place of employment and then is instructed to report elsewhere transportation shall be supplied by the employer or compensated for.

Vacations With Pay.

"Vacations of one week with pay after one year's service, and two weeks after four years' service are provided for.

"Where shift men are required to work overtime due to failure of relief men to appear such overtime is to be paid for on the regular hourly basis, but in other cases overtime is to be paid for on the basis of time and one-half.

"Daylight employes other than shift men are to be paid time and one-half for work on Sundays and holidays."

Strikes Are Unnecessary.

"In this agreement procedure is established for the settlement without strikes of any disputes that cannot be settled by direct negotiation. In this respect the agreement is unique. If arbitration becomes necessary the form it takes is to be finally determined by the president of the American Federation of Labor and employer.

"Should this procedure become a generally adopted formula for industrial relations, it will mean the elimination of industrial warfare with its heavy toll upon the workers and upon business.

Praises Union Officials.

"I want to acknowledge the co-operation and good understanding I have encountered in dealing with President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and the international officials.

Friendly Dealing Instead of Armed Truce.

"I am very happy to have had a part in laying the cornerstone of what I believe is a new foundation, the fundamental of which is that industrial relations can be put on a basis of friendly dealing instead of partaking of the nature of an armed truce."

Mr. Sinclair's statement follows:

Union Represents Employes.

"A new basis of labor relations is embodied in the agreement announced between the Sinclair companies and the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers. It embodies rules for the sane conduct of business between employer and employe. The association is to represent its members in collective bargaining in accordance with the provisions of the national recovery act. I believe that the agreement will work out to our benefit as employers as well as to the advantage of the employes.

Prejudice Eliminated.

"In arriving at this understanding, what are usually considered irreconcilable conflicts have presented no difficulties because there has been confidence on both sides in the fairness and good faith of the other party. We started out by eliminating prejudice and found the other side willing to give up the use of the deadly weapons of industrial warfare when the door was opened for dealing on a basis of mutual recognition of the rights and responsibilities of all concerned.

Oil Workers Contract Commended by Sinclair

Washington, June 12.—The union shop agreement between the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation and its affiliated companies and the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America was described as a forward step in the determination of labor relations by Harry F. Sinclair, president of the corporation.

Pointing out that officials of the oil workers' union will represent the members in collective bargaining negotiations with the management, Mr. Sinclair said this was in conformity with Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act. He praised the method set forth in the agreement for settling labor disputes without either strikes or lockouts, and said he believed the pact would place industrial relations on a basis of "friendly dealing" instead of an "armed truce."

Offer Sympathy To Ed Gollahon

Sympathy of the entire local trade union movement is offered to Ed Gollahon, veteran member of the Stage Employes and Brewery Workers unions, in the passing of his mother, Mrs. Mattie Gollahon, who died at the home, 2506 Vance avenue.

NEW CAB DRIVERS' UNION READY TO AID OTHER LOCALS

Officials and Workers Declare Week's Strike Left No "Sore Spots."

All Four Companies Now 100 Per Cent Union. Spokesmen for Local 594 Offer Thanks for Sympathetic Interest of Labor Movement.

"Local Union No. 594, Taxi Drivers, is now 100 per cent., and we are ready to take our place in the Chattanooga labor movement and render such assistance as is possible to those loyal brothers and sisters who so steadily stood by us with their support during the short dispute which ended Wednesday," said Charles Simmons, president of the new union, discussing the future of his local union.

"The public was with us, and we appreciate this fine evidence of sympathy. At the same time, we appeal to them to support us in rebuilding the business temporarily disrupted by the walkout."

Chattanooga's first taxi strike, which involved the Jolly Cab company and the DeLuxe company, the latter more or less indirectly, came to a sudden end on Wednesday following a walkout which had lasted one week, and every taxi company in Chattanooga is now 100 per cent. union. Contracts have been signed with each of the four companies, the Gray and Watson concerns having signed without any disruption of service; the DeLuxe and the union reaching an agreement Wednesday morning, and the Jolly company following soon after.

Union officials stressed that the occurrence had caused "no hard feelings," and they are confident that no further disagreements of any character will be had.

Apparently company officials were as pleased with the fact that the strike has ended as were the workers. A display advertisement in this issue of The Labor World announces that "We are operating 100 per cent. union, employing members of Taxi Drivers union, Local No. 594."

Building Trades Plumbing Board Body Is Formed

Ten Labor Officials and Ten Employers Complete the Organization.

Washington, June 12.—Sullivan W. Jones, former New York state architect, has been appointed by President Roosevelt as impartial chairman of the construction industry's planning and adjustment board.

The board, which consists of ten employer and ten employe representatives, will take up as its first task, at the request of President Roosevelt, a study of jurisdictional disputes in the building industry, their causes and origins and methods for their prevention and amicable solution.

"Its findings and recommendations are to be submitted to the president for consideration and appropriate action," General Johnson said.

The representatives of the employes selected by the labor advisory board of the NRA, and approved by the administrator, will be:

M. J. McDonough, Metal Trades Department, American Federation of Labor.

John J. Hynes, Sheet Metal Workers' International association.

W. L. Hutcheson, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

M. J. Colleran, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' International association.

John Coefield, United Association of Journeyman Plumbers and Steamfitters.

Harry C. Bates, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International union.

L. P. Lindelof, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers.

D. W. Tracy, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

P. J. Morrin, International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

J. V. Moreschi, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' union.

The employer representatives nominated by the construction code authority, selected by the industrial advisory board of the NRA and approved by Gen. Johnson, will be:

John F. Oasey, Pittsburgh.
E. M. Craig, Chicago.
C. H. Dabelstein, New York City.
Charles Gow, Boston.
Alfred J. Hixon, Boston.
John A. Holabird, Chicago.
L. J. Horowitz, New York City.
Arthur A. Johnson, Long Island City.
Redfield Proctor, Proctor, Vt.
O. W. Swenson, New York.

TEXTILE STRIKERS GIVEN RELIEF BY GOVERNMENT

Greenville, S. C., June 12.—Adequate emergency relief funds are being provided for striking operatives at the Victor-Monaghan plant at Walhalla, S. C., and for workers at the plant of the Lonsdale Manufacturing company at Seneca, S. C., which has been closed for the last three weeks due to lack of business.

John Peel, United Textile Workers' organizer for South Carolina, recently conferred with Senator James F. Byrnes (Dem., S. C.), and complained against the failure of relief agencies to provide funds to the mill people. The senator was notified by Director of Relief Hopkins that no discrimination is being shown against the strikers.

A.—Beginning Aug. 20, at Indianapolis, Ind.

What Next!

A $5,000,000 corporation has just been formed in Great Britain to erect and operate a chain of twenty distillation plants for the production of gasoline and coal. The scheme is the culmination of over three years' intensive experimental research work in the plant on the Cannock Chase coal field. Gasoline has been produced from coal at this plant and marketed since last September at the rate of 1,000 gallons a day.

QUANTITY SALES DROP.

Ottawa.—The Canadian business recovery has not yet helped the farmer to increase their quantity sales. In the first four months of 1933—the "trough" of the depression—agricultural marketing sales were 50 per cent greater than in the first four months of this year. Increase in prices has not by any means offset the decline in quantity marketing.

Labor Gains Through Conference

Organized workers in two great industries—oil and cotton textiles—have just made important gains by sitting down and talking things over with the employers, though in the case of the textile industry a strike was threatened.

In a series of conferences with National Recovery Administrator Johnson, in which the employers, as represented by the code authority, joined, the textile workers won more of a voice in code management and administration. They also won a NRA investigation of wages, hours and man-hour productivity in textiles, with particular reference to the question of wage increases. By the agreement, the workers get closer to the inside of the industry.

The oil workers won recognition from the important Sinclair companies. The agreement, President Green, of the A. F. of L., said, provides machinery for the settlement of disputes in such a manner as "to secure justice for the workers without compelling them to resort to a strike." The agreement, first of its kind on a national scale, is the entering wedge of trade unionism in the oil industry, hitherto largely dominated by the company union.

Gains of the oil and textile workers show the value of negotiation with the employer. "Revolutionary" critics of the labor movement are fond of advising the worker to strike on any and all excuse. The workers know from actual experience the hardships and suffering of strikes and do not take strike action except when necessary. They know that just as valuable gains are often won at the conference table as on the picket line.

Work Week Must Be Shortened

The gravity of the situation resulting from the continual mechanization of industry is emphasized by the following statement coming from no less an authority than Dr. Morris Viteles, of the University of Pennsylvania, in a radio address:

"During the next ten years, ten million white collar men will have to change to manual labor, and fifteen million manual workers of today will find it necessary to take up work different from that for which they have been trained."

Mechanization of industry has obviated the necessity of continuing a work week of more than thirty hours.

Organized labor has consistently advocated a reduction of hours in order that our scientific progress may benefit all of the people.

Otherwise, labor-saving devices will be a continual curse instead of a blessing for the bulk of the population.

Protect the Children

The food and drug administration of the federal department of agriculture deserves credit for its work in ferreting out the degenerate business men who for months have been surreptitiously selling bootleg intoxicants to children in the form of cheap liquor candy.

In December the authorities received complaints from cities as far west as Chicago and as far south as Baltimore that the candy was being sold in large quantities in the form of penny bonbons. Teachers reported that children who had eaten the stuff during school recesses returned to their classes in a semi-stupor. Most of the dope was sold by push cart vendors in crowded sections of the larger cities.

Chemical examination revealed that in each bonbon there was about a teaspoonful of liquid which contained more than 20 per cent of bootleg alcohol diluted with various kinds of flavoring. Federal drug administration authorities decided the dope was distributed from a common source located in Greater New York. Intensive sleuthing revealed that the peddlers received their supplies in alleys after ordering them by telephone. Raids were made and thousands of pounds of bonbons were seized by federal and local authorities. Over one hundred store keepers and peddlers were arrested in New York City alone for selling the stuff. Finally the trail led to the headquarters of the liquor candy ring in Brooklyn and the case was presented to the federal grand jury.

These business miscreants, who undertake to dope children in the schools with intoxicating liquor, should receive the limit of the law for such nefarious practice.

In this connection it will not be amiss to point out that if there is one bureau in the federal government which should not be limited by so-called economy appropriations it is the food and drug administration of the department of agriculture, whose main work is protecting all our people against the subversive activities of certain types of business men whose greed for profit impels them to organize into groups for the sole purpose of unloading impure, poisonous and adulterated food and drugs on a helpless public.

Fake Compensation Insurance

The necessity for state owned and operated workmen's compensation insurance funds for the adequate protection of men and women killed and injured by the neglect of employers is once again brought into the spotlight in connection with the case of a laborer to whom the New York bureau of workmen's compensation had given an award of $2,000 for injuries, in accordance with the workmen's compensation law. When he claimed the award from the insurance company he was informed that the contractor had paid no premium on the policy and that it had been canceled.

The investigation by District Attorney Geoghan, of Brooklyn, revealed the existence of an insurance ring which had issued fake insurance policies to small contractors and victimized numbers of injured workers. The scheme was worked by an architect in co-operation with contractors who desired to avoid the expense of carrying compulsory compensation insurance to indemnify employes for injuries on their construction projects. The plot uncovered by the district attorney's office indicates the extent to which degenerate employers and their assistants in the professional classes will sink in the development and promotion of suppositious devices to defraud working men and women of their rights under the law.

The architect rented for a small amount a workmen's compensation insurance policy purporting to be made out to a general contractor. Confronted with inspectors who asked for the policy required under the state law, the contractors exhibited the "policy" provided by the architect, explaining that they had sublet the construction job from the general contractor named in the policy. In reality the policy was worthless and the names of the contractors were fictitious.

So far six injured workers have been discovered who were victimized by the fake insurance ring, with additional victims piling up as the investigation proceeds. The architect who provided the fake policies pleaded guilty to petty larceny. The authorities say it will not be so easy to penalize the contractors who evidently co-operated with him in putting over the fraud.

In the meantime it appears that it will be very difficult for the injured workers to secure the compensation to which they are entitled under the state law. Of course the architect can be jailed for larceny and the contractors can be penalized if convicted. But the penalization of both groups will not pay the awards of which the employes have been defrauded.

The whole unsavory mess would have been avoided by giving the New York state workmen's compensation insurance fund a monopoly of writing compensation insurance. This would bar activities of insurance rackets designed to defraud the workers of the modest sums which society declares they are entitled to receive for having their bodies mutilated because of the neglect and refusal of employers to install up-to-date protective devices and methods to safeguard their employes against fatal and non-fatal accidents.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

This Darrow-Johnson row has its interesting features. However, the job of such men should be something bigger than to merely be interesting. Both have it in them to give American ideas and action.

Darrow crammed a great deal of solid meat into his report. But he did not do the best job possible—far from it. Johnson fired back with hot shot that, like the Darrow shot, had more heat than meat.

If these two giants have nothing better to do than burn each other up it is too bad. Darrow picked certain weak spots in NRA armor. On these he bored in hard enough. But he overlooked entirely the weakest spots. A better and more serviceable report than the Darrow report can be written and it ought to be written.

Darrow took up the poor business man's burden. He got in the so-called little fellow's corner. He didn't even see the wage-earner's corner, which is odd enough for the courageous old warrior and perhaps still more odd for Charles Edward Russell, who helped write the Darrow report.

If the average of what is called little business played a squarer game in the economic world than he generallyally does play he would have long since had more sympathy and his position today would be much stronger.

After all, there is a question as to how far the body politic or the body economic is bound to support a man in a given position just because he wants to be in that position and when he has ceased to find justification by service rendered to society.

That constitutes no plea for monopoly privately owned, either.

The question is whether we shall go sloppy-eyed over little business, while we let the millions of wage-earners go to a doom that is not softened by any cushioning of public interest.

Little business and big business have one aim in common—to get all they can. And both are squawking to the high heavens against rates of wages and hours of pay imposed by NRA codes, miserable as those hours and wages generally are.

Meanwhile ten millions of workers continue to go jobless. That is worth more than a weeping spell. It is worth more than a report. It demands action.

Do these squawking business men, big and little, imagine this condition can continue? Do they imagine that if NRA fails the next step will be backward toward old terms, or to the right and more conservatism?

There is too much misreading of the economic barometer, too little attention paid to the temperature of unrest.

Clarence Darrow, whose long life story is one that will loom big in history, may from some future perspective turn out to have fired a bigger shot than it now seems to be. Be that as it may, the big shot that needs firing today has not been fired.

The individualism and the embittered outlook of Darrow mixed strangely with the very earnest socialism of Charles Edward Russell to form a report that rings the bell on page 1, but that doesn't ring it in the field of action. It is just too darned bad.

Pres. Green Asks Roosevelt to Back Thirty-Hour Week

Claims That 10,000 Idle Make Legislation for Mandatory Shorter Work Week Imperative.

Washington, May 17. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, requested President Roosevelt to push through congress legislation making thirty hours the standard work week for all industries.

The labor leader said that the employment program had come to a "dead stop," and while 3,000,000 men had been re-employed under the codes for industries, 10,000,000 still were without industrial employment and being supported either by emergency employment or relief funds.

Mr. Green asked specifically that Mr. Roosevelt support the mandatory 30-hour week bill sponsored by Representative Connery, chairman of the House Labor committee. Mr. Connery, who accompanied Mr. Green to the White House, said that the measure had the approval of every member of the committee.

"Its members represent the North, East, South and West," Mr. Connery added. "I am sure it would be passed by the house and by the senate if we could get a rule that would permit the house to act on the bill."

Mr. Connery said that he and Mr. Green had told the president that "the unanimous demand of labor all over the country is for the 30-hour week."

"We feel there is an absolute necessity for the passage of this legislation," he went on. "The bill is not a hard and fast proposal such as was before the senate in the last session. It contains a flexible provision in the shape of the creation of a board to be set up by the secretary of labor. It would have power to exempt business from the effects of the law for a 30-day period where there is a shortage of labor."

Mr. Green cited the report of the Durable Goods Industries committee as evidence of an apparent unwillingness by industry to take further voluntary steps looking toward increased employment. At the same time he argued that the "heavy" industries are the ones which hold the only power to absorb the idle.

NRA BRINGS DOVE OF PEACE TO COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Washington, May 3.—To an industry previously torn by industrial strife, it is claimed by the cotton textile National Industrial relation board that NRA has brought an unprecedented condition of peaceful operation. The real problem was whether employers and employes could be put into the same co-operative functioning body and "click." The answer is given in the fact that during the time beginning Aug. 2, 1933, when the board was first created, there has been only one out of the 4,000 complaints filed with the regional and state boards which had to be carried to the national industrial relations board. Only six disputes reached the stage of a major strike and these only lasted a few days each. The records of all the cases have been gone over by a representative of the A. F. of L. and are open for the inspection of any representative of labor.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PRAISED BY MISS PERKINS

Rochester, N. Y.—The prompt enactment of the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill now before congress was urged by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in an address here before the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

She said its passage would lead to setting up a sound nation-wide system of unemployment insurance within the next few years. This, she predicted, would go toward preventing and lessening the periods of industrial activity in the future because it would give purchasing power to a small but steady market for all industrial products.

"If unemployment insurance had been inaugurated in the years before the crash in 1929 it would have put a bottom to the fall of depression and unemployment," the secretary stated. "We have only estimated to show what would have happened under unemployment insurance, but they are by competent actuaries and cover not the whole country but reasonably small areas."

BUFFALO JUDGE RULES AGAINST PAY CHISELER

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31.—A state court decision upholding the NRA was handed down by City Judge Patrick J. Keeler when he ruled that an NRA code signed by an employer is tantamount to a contract.

The ruling came in the case of Miss Doris Walter, 21, who brought suit against the Hyman-Rose Tobacco company for $230.70, which she claimed was due her under the NRA code.

Miss Walter testified that she worked 52½ hours per week from Aug. 7 to March 10 at a salary of $12 a week, while the company was doing business under the Blue Eagle.

The blanket code for cigar stores provided for a 40-hour week and a $15 minimum weekly wage for employes.

8 WORKERS ESCAPE DEATH IN COAL MINE FIRE TRAP

Linton, Ind.—Eight miners escaped from the Little Betty coal mine near here after being trapped in the pit for two hours by a fire that destroyed the surface buildings. The men groped through the darkened pit to the manway, an emergency exit, and made their way to the surface, 400 feet from the tipple where the fire was raging.

An explosion at this mine in January, 1931, took a toll of twenty-eight lives.

Although warned by that disastrous explosion, the management seems to have taken but little precaution since then to protect the lives of the miners against the dangers to life and limb caused by preventable fires.

Hours Cut, Pay Rise Asked by Board to Save NRA Program

Memorandum Urges 10 Per Cent Reduction in Work Time With Wage Increase—Large Profits Under Codes Cited in Support.

Washington, June 14.—A brief containing a convincing battery of facts and arguments in favor of a 10 per cent reduction in hours and a corresponding increase in wages for workers in industries operating under codes of fair competition has been presented by the labor advisory board to the national recovery administration through the labor policy board, headed by Dr. Leon C. Marshall, according to press reports here.

The brief contends that not only are the shorter hours and higher wages necessary unless the NRA is to fail because higher prices are not accompanied by increased purchasing power, but maintains that larger industrial profits since the NRA codes went into effect make it possible for many companies to make the change without loss. In support of this claim the advisory board cites figures published by the National City Bank of New York to show that 1,475 companies which reported a deficit of $97,000,000 in 1932 showed a profit of $661,000,000 in 1933.

Emphasizing the importance of converting some of these boosted profits into purchasing power through the income of the workers, and pointing out that the maximum work week of 40 hours prescribed in most codes "resulted in a large volume of re-employment, the memorandum continued:

Jobs for 1,500,000.

"A uniform reduction in hours of 10 per cent will not be a great burden at this time in view of the marked improvement in profits in the post-code period.

"A further reduction in hours of 10 per cent, with a concomitant increase in wage rates, would be a far easier burden now than were the original terms imposed in the codes.

"Most industries have had from six to eight months to adjust themselves to the new conditions, and they have done so with profit to themselves.

"The reduction in hours on the 10-10 principle will have the following results:

"First, in anticipation of increasing labor costs, prices will tend to rise, thus stimulating spending, as proved in the first experiment.

"Secondly, we estimate that it will absorb about a million and a half workers on the same level of production.

"Third, the absorption of these workers should still further stimulate demand, production and employment."

Business Must Provide Work for Idle.

Although expressing its belief that in applying the hours cut and pay increase due consideration should be given to the needs of special industries, the advisory board held that these exceptions had little to do with the general application of its proposals, adding:

"We are even more impressed with the widespread unemployment, the ability of business to thrive under the alleged restrictions and co-operative arrangements devised by the NRA, the let-down in activity concomitant with the dissolution of the CWA, while business has failed to continue to absorb new workers.

"We urge the immediate pursuit of the 10-10 program as the most intelligent course under the present circumstances and submit as our judgment that there is no more practicable substitute for the public necessity of maintaining some 11,000,000 workers on relief rolls in the near future."

Union Agreement Signed By Big Florida Brewery

Jacksonville, Fla.—Officials of the newly formed Local No. 171, of the International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America, won a distinct achievement when they persuaded William Ostner, president of the Jacksonville Brewing company, to sign an agreement to pay union wages and establish union hours and regulations. The products of the brewery will be marketed under the union label and only members in good standing in the Brewery Workers union will be employed.

In some instances it was stated that the rates of pay were raised from 25 per cent to 75 per cent. It is estimated that the increased wages will add about $25,000 to the pay roll. The plant operates with about 100 employes. It is said that Jacksonville has the distinction of marketing the first union-made beer manufactured in Florida.

Patient (at the end of her visit)—I have known you so long, doctor, I do not intend to insult you by offering to pay you. But I have arranged a handsome legacy for you in my will.

Doctor—That's very kind. Now please allow me to look at that prescription again. There is a slight alteration I would like to make in it.

Hopkins Changes Hours Rules for Work Relief

Washington.—Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, announced a modification of the rule on the minimum hours of labor under the work divisions of the emergency relief administrations throughout the country.

"No person shall be employed in work divisions less than six nor more than eight hours in any one day nor less than eighteen hours a month," the rule now states. "Persons whose budgetary deficiency is less than this shall receive direct relief. The total work allowed a worker in any month may be consolidated in any part of that month."

Previously the rule was that no skilled or professional person should work less than thirty hours a month and no unskilled person less than fifty-four hours a month.

The significance of the modification, Mr. Hopkins said, is that work may be given to many more skilled and technical persons who are receiving relief. In determining who is to get direct relief and who is to be given the opportunity to work for relief, the budgetary deficiency, or need, is first determined. If the person is able and willing to work, the number of hours of work required to provide the needed amount of relief at the prevailing rate for the kind of work is calculated. The minimu rate, however, is stipulated at 30 cents an hour. If the calculation shows that the person requires less than 18 hours of work to earn the needed amount, the person is not given work, but is given direct relief.

CHICAGO TEACHERS PROTEST DELAY IN SALARY PAYMENTS

Chicago, Ill.—More than 5,000 teachers, parents and students paraded through the Loop in protest against delay in the enactment of legislation which would relieve the financial plight of the teachers.

The marchers carried placards, some of which bore the legends: "Chicago, a fair for the world, unfair to teachers," and "NRA—no relief allowed."

The paraders seemed in a happy frame of mind. As they marched in the financial district a barrage of ticker tape and confetti descended upon them.

John Fewkes, the teachers' leader, addressed the paradehs at the Plaza on Michigan avenue. He complained that the salaries of the teachers are nearly eight months in arrears and demanded that the banks forthwith lend the board of education enough money to give them their back pay.

"You earn your wages"

THAT handy servant, the telephone, is a go-getter. He chases after groceries, runs to the drugstore, carries messages here, there and everywhere, and only asks a few cents a day as his wages.

It does not matter who you want or why, whether it be day or night, storm or sunshine. Lift the receiver to order a loaf of bread—casually call a friend for a brief chat—or speed a frantic summons to the doctor, it is all in the day's work to the telephone.

If you are trying to get along without a telephone in your home, it will pay you to investigate the small cost, and the different types, of telephone service.

You will then very likely agree with most folks, who believe it costs more to try to do without telephone service than it does to have it.

For information, just ask any of your friends with the telephone company, or call at the telephone Business Office.

D. C. CARPENTERS JOIN BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL

Washington, May 31.—Union carpenters in the District of Columbia, on strike for a six-hour day and a wage increase from $1 to $1.87½ an hour, were admitted to the District Building Trades council.

This strengthens both the carpenters and the council in the labor field, as it combines in the council all the thirty crafts associated with the building industry in the capital.

The influence of the council recently was thrown behind the carpenters in one particular even before affiliation, when the council agreed to pull all its unions off any jobs where contractors tried to use strikebreakers in place of the carpenters.

These carpenters now have the complete support of all other building trades here, and the official strength of the council behind them.

DOPE ON THE ELECTRICIANS

The Electricians are co-operating with the union bakers in helping them to win their strike, which is still in progress. And since the most of us use bakery products—especially the ones whose wives don't like the idea of making good old biscuits and cornbread—be sure and call for the labeled bread and cakes.

We should at all times be more considerate when we go shopping and demand products that carry the union label, for the simple reason if we don't create a demand for same we can't expect our neighboring brothers to progress and the merchants to stock it. We are more or less obligated to them that much. So in the future let us buy union-made merchandise.

We are very glad to report that the general attitude among the members of our local is a little more like old times, due to the fact that we all feel like we are going to have plenty of work some day, since the general conditions are somewhat better, although we have a long way to go before we have more work than we can take care of in Chattanooga.

Our ball team has been a little bit slow for the last week or so, because our boys have been going visiting on the week-ends and the rain has been so bad, too. But we are going to open up in a few weeks and knock 'em cold from there out. We will let you know from time to time when we have our games.

Brother Butler, our new president, is going to make our local a real organization by making the boys live up to their obligation and attend the meetings more regular so as to strengthen the present movement. That is what it is going to take for us to get anywhere these days. Take a tip. Thanks.

PAY CUT BRINGS STRIKE OF GOVERNMENT WORKERS

Paris, France.—Throughout France thousands of civil servants struck for periods ranging up to an hour in protest against government decrees cutting salaries and pensions. However, many other thousands refused to obey the strike order and virtually every government service except telegraph and posts functioned normally.

The chief center of protests as always was the central telegraph office, while throughout the country it was the postal, telephone and telegraph workers who did the most demonstrating.

The gas, electrical and transport services functioned without interruption all day. Employes of financial services, water supply and the tobacco monopoly also indulged in short strikes with all work suspended. Reports from dozens of provincial cities indicate things went there as they did in Paris. There was a total lack of violence anywhere.

Industry Can't Ignore Problem Of Displaced Men, Eastman Says

Pointing Out Rail Workers Have Suffered Severely During Depression, Federal Transportation Co-ordinator Declares Rail Labor Situation Is "Most Serious" and Can Only Be Solved by Definite Plan.

New York, June 14.—Since 1920, railroad labor has been cut in half and the railroad labor problem is "most serious and difficult," Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, declared in an address to the New York Bond club.

"Our business and financial leaders cannot with any wisdom ignore the problem," Eastman said, "for unless it is solved, they will sooner or later suffer with all the rest." He reminded the club members that faithful workers cannot be cast off like a worn-out garment and that steps must be taken to alleviate the situation caused by the dismissal of employes due to railroad economies.

In addition to outright loss of jobs, railroad men have suffered very severely from demotions, part time and furloughs, Eastman said.

"Railroad economies are very largely labor-saving devices," Eastman continued, "and any program of greater economy in operation for the future inevitably means, at least at the outset, less railroad employment. It is easy for us, who re sfely removed from the field of operation, to give little thought to the acute suffering and hardship which such programs may bring to individuals and even entire communities, but you may be sure that these results are not overlooked by those who have to endure them.

"It is a very difficult problem to work out. With the railroad situation as it is, and the competition which is found on every hand, the conclusion cannot be escaped that the railroads must for their own salvation be able to furnish the best possible service at the lowest possible cost. In the long run this is just as essential for the employees as for the companies. On the other hand, it is neither fair nor humane to cast off faithful workers like a worn-out garment.

"Much can be done to alleviate the situation through retirement annuities, unemployment benefits, placement service, and dismissal wages under certain conditions, and we are endeavoring and hope to work out practical plans along these lines which can be made effective without halting or unduly penalizing progress.

"However, the problem is in reality a much broader one than that and it extends over the entire field of industry. There is no sound reason why more labor should be used in production than is necessary. Nor have we in this country ever come anywhere near to the production of the amount of wealth which it is well within the capacity of our people to consume or utilize.

"Shorter work days, except to supply needed opportunity for rest, leisure and recreation are merely a counsel of despair and a confession of inability to solve the problem as it should be solved. It is not so much a question of the redistribution of wealth as it is of an increase in the opportunity to consume which will permit of a far greater production of wealth.

"The problem is of paramount and even supreme importance, for the people of the country will not forever endure a system which condemns millions to unemployment and lowers the standard of living for all except a very few.

"I wish I could give you the answer to this problem, but I cannot. On one point only I am clear, and that is that it never will be solved in any automatic way by leaving man to his own devices under laissez faire principles. It can be definite planning by the best brains which our country can bring to

Mrs. S. G. Ramey, of Reserve, Okla., writes that she has used Thedford's Black-Draught for twenty-five years, when needed, and has "found it very good." "When I have a sour stomach, my mouth tastes bitter, and I get bilious, sluggish and tired, I very soon have a severe headache. Delegates Off To Meeting Of School Teachers

Local 246 Sends Four Representatives to Convention of National Federation.

Miss Lassie Munsey, Miss Jean Pettit and Mr. and Mrs. Stanton E. Smith, delegates from Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, left Chattanooga Friday for Chicago to attend the eighteenth annual convention of the national body.

The sessions will be held at the Medinah Michigan Avenue club, the week of June 25. The theme will be "Educational Recovery." Particular stress will be laid upon the responsibility of the teachers in the present plight of the schools, Mr. Smith said.

Sound organization of the teachers to meet their responsibility and federal aid for relief in the present emergency will occupy a major part of the program. Tax systems will be discussed and an education program for the present emergency developed. Prominent educators and labor leaders will be in attendance.

It is anticipated that this convention will be the largest in the history of the American Federation of Teachers, since the membership has tripled this past year and eighty new locals have been chartered. The last local to be chartered is Bremerton, Wash., Local 335.

The local delegates will remain over in the Windy City for a few days following adjournment of the convention, visiting the fair.

Iron Molders Offer Support to Bakers

Local 52, Iron Molders, went on record unanimously at the last meeting of that organization as standing squarely behind the bakers on strike at the American Bakeries company, backing their pledge with a substantial contribution of cash to assist the chain concern's victims.

The molders have thus formally joined other crafts in offering encouragement to a new organization which, incidentally, has been an unswerving policy of Local 52 for many years.

APPEAL FOR FAIR WAGES MADE BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

Raleigh, N. C., June 21.—In an address to an audience of 8,000 here Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt appealed for fair wages, backed by an informed public opinion for the benefit of the nation as a whole.

"We women have a very heavy responsibility," he said. "And only if we take the trouble to now, can we meet the crisis. We are not at war, but we are meeting the crisis just as in war.

"We have reached a point in our civilization where we have to readjust ourselves for new conditions."

WIDESPREAD INTEREST SHOWN IN STRUGGLE OF LOCAL WORKERS

Moral and Financial Backing Comes From "Wide Front"—Bakery Workers Hear Chain Corporation Has $100,000 to Break Chattanooga Union—Dr. T. B. Cowan Spikes Latest Rumor Strike Is Settled—Case to Come Before Regional Labor Board Again Monday.

Rev. Dr. T. B. Cowan, chairman of a voluntary citizens' committee which has been endeavoring to secure a settlement of the strike of Bakers and Salesmen at the local plant of the American Bakeries company, Friday morning denied that conferences had resulted in an adjustment of the affair. Following the silencing last week of rumors to the same effect allegedly spread by emissaries of the chain corporation, it was reported renewed efforts had been put forth to give the impression a settlement had been made. Dr. Cowan emphatically denied that an agreement has been reached, and deplored the unfounded reports, which are obviously calculated to interfere with the work of the committee. T. C. Thompson and Prof. Smith, of the University of Chattanooga, are the other members of the committee which has been probing the affair.

The American Bakeries company is willing to spend $100,000 if necessary to force employes of its Chattanooga plant into submission, according to reports which quote an official of the chain corporation. The statement is alleged to have been made in a conversation with members of the two unions which have been on strike at the Chattanooga branch of the Atlanta concern for the past four weeks.

It is alleged that the official made the further statement that the company could keep the local plant closed for "twelve years if necessary."

The strike remains at a standstill, having apparently developed into an endurance contest, with little or no bread being baked by the concern here, and the distribution being practically nil, while various local unions in the territory are offering financial relief to the strikers, and moral encouragement is being received from all groups of Chattanoogans as well as in surrounding territory.

Widespread resentment is indicated against the arrogant tactics of the wealthy corporation by reports from some eighteen cities where the chain operates. From as far south as Jacksonville, Florida, comes assurance of hearty support, and in several other plants of the company in nearby cities the unrest of workers is declared to be growing.

Committees representing the Chattanooga workers are visiting each city where the chain operates, surveying the situation and seeking moral support for the local strikers.

Reports that the strike had been settled, allegedly spread by emissaries of the chain, were effectively spiked during the past few days by a widespread distribution of The Labor World. Every dealer in the territory was presented with a copy of last week's issue of this publication, containing a story detailing the truth of the situation and advising the public that when the strike is settled due notification will be given through these columns and the daily press.

The morale of the strikers, after a four weeks' struggle, is excellent, determination to stand for recognition of their right of collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing having increased as the "hard-boiled" position of the chain concern's officials is brought to light by succeeding incidents.

A session of the regional labor board will be devoted Monday to further consideration of the case, it was said, the body having adjourned in order that conferences might be held between the contending parties looking to a settlement of the affair. These conferences, however, developed only the fact that the chain's officials were as "set in their ways" as they had been from the time the local employes formed an organization, a "generous" offer on their part, to re-employ the strikers upon company terms having been secured after several hours of conferring, it was said.

CONGRESS OUTLAWS R. R. COMPANY UNIONS; STRENGTHENS POWER TO ENFORCE SECTION 7A

Washington, June 21.—Railroad company unions are outlawed and the power of the government to enforce Section 7-A of the recovery act is strengthened by measures approved in the closing hours of congress.

Outlawing of railroad company unions was accomplished by passage of the Dill-Grosser bill, which amended the railway labor act of 1926 by rewriting it and making several important changes in the mediation board and in the operation of the adjustment boards to settle grievances.

A summary of the bill follows:

Created a national railways adjustment board, which will have four divisions, the members to be selected by the rail carriers and labor organizations.

Provided for the establishment of regional or system boards of adjustment, if the railroads and the employes desire to set up such boards voluntarily.

Abolished the present board of mediation, consisting of five members, and established a new and smaller board called the national mediation board, with power to select and appoint employes to act as mediators under the instruction of the board with the same freedom to delegate its work as the interstate com-

Painters to Hold Annual Frolic At Warner Park

Fourteenth Outing Scheduled for Friday, July 27, at City Playground.

An annual event which will be of interest to hundreds of Chattanooga people is the picnic and barbecue to be held at Warner park by the Painters, Decorators, Paperhangers and Signwriters, Local Union No. 226.

For the past fourteen years one day in the year has been set aside by this organization and declared a holiday, for the express purpose of bringing together the families and friends of its membership for a day of recreation and pleasure, and to establish a closer relationship one with anothr.

It is the intention of the committee in charge of arrangements this year to make the affair bigger and better than any they have had in the past, and they promise that there will be something going on every minute of the day. There will be the customary races for the young folks, contests and games of all kinds, with valuable prizes offered.

"Of course, the feature of the day will be at noon, at which time a delicious barbecue lunch will be served, consisting of beef, pork and mutton with all the trimmings," said P. P. Thurston, committee chairman. "If you like meat barbecued in the old-fashion way by men who are experts in the art of cooking by this method, we suggest that you close up shop or office for the day, take the wife and kiddies out to the park and spend the day with the boys that play a large part in making our city and homes more beautiful. A $1.00 ticket will be good for two plates."

Standard Oil Chisels Pay, Hours, Board Charges

Washington, June 21.—L. S. Scott, chairman of the petroleum code committee for the District of Columbia, refused to award the new Blue Eagle to the Standard Oil company, the American Oil company and several independent dealers here.

Mr. Scott said his action was based upon completed complaints against the oil companies and declared that his committee had positive evidence that the companies named were "guilty of repeated and flagrant violations of he provisions of the code as regards the giving of discounts and the labor provisions both as to hours and wages."

"The petroleum code committee," he said, "has unquestioned authority to refuse to award the new Blue Eagle, which is a symbol of strict obedience to all code provisions, to any concern that violates any provision of the code."

NEW YORK CITY ADOPTS 5-DAY WEEK FOR SUMMER

New York.—Mayor LaGuardia announced that all city departments not strictly engaged in protecting the life, property and health of the city will go on a five-day week for the summer beginning July 1, or before then, if it can be arranged. This method of dealing with the summer period was decided upon instead of the former plan of closing all city offices at 4 o'clock on weekdays during July and August.

FIGHT AGAINST MACHINES WON BY MEXICAN LABOR

Vera Cruz, Mexico.—Labor disputes in Orizaba textile mills which threatened to lead to general sympathetic strikes appeared near solution. The walkout was put off six days pending final signatures to an agreement.

The employers agreed to retain all employes who might otherwise have been let out because of installation of new machinery.

CONVENTION OF HOSIERY UNION MARKS EPOCH

Illustrates Hopeful Developments for Labor.

"KEEN AND MILITANT" SPIRIT DISPLAYED

Held Declares Reading Sessions Most Encouraging in History.

Re-Elected

President American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

NOTICE.

An open meeting for all hosiery workers, union and non-union, will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Roosevelt Hall, Market and Seventh streets. All hosiery workers are invited to come and hear some interesting facts learned by our delegates at the convention in Reading last week.

N. O. SMOTHERMAN,
President, Branch 53.

Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, returned this week from the convention of the national body at Reading, with enthusiastic and encouraging reports from the gathering, which he declared was one of the greatest conventions ever held by the organization.

Some of the problems discussed by the delegates were explained and some interesting highlights brought out in an interview given The Labor World Thursday by Mr. Held.

"Youthful, realistic, keen and militant in spirit, the convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in Reading well illustrates the hopeful developments of the organized labor movement since the NRA," he said.

"A record-breaking attendance was on hand which reflected the vastly increased membership of the union as a result of the NRA. Almost two hundred delegates sat on the convention floor, representing a wider distribution of organization than has ever before been known in the hosiery industry," Mr. Held continued.

The report by Secretary-Treasurer William Smith reflected the amazing growth of the union since the last convention.

"Since September of 1933, 16,500 new members have enrolled in the ranks of the union. Twenty-four new branches have been created, while eight old branches were reorganized and set in flourishing condition.

"Included this year were the seamless branch of the industry and we assisted in developing a definite policy for the intensive organization of the workers in that branch of the trade.

"That widespread strikes are the

Choosing Collective Bargaining Agencies

The persistent ballyhoo of anti-union employers that workers favor the notorious company union was given a clear knock-out in the election of a collective bargaining agency by the employes of the Tennessee Public Service company, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Two American Federation of Labor unions and two company unions were on the ballot. The A. F. of L. unions were the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The company unions were the Street Car and Bus Operators' union of the transportation department of the Tennessee Public Service company and the Distribution Department Employes' Protective association of that company. Out of 277 effective ballots, 161 were for the A. F. of L. unions and 116 for the company unions, a clear majority of 45 for bona fide trade unionism.

The tabulation of the votes gave the following figures: Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, A. F. of L. union, 99 votes; Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, A. F. of L. union, 62 votes; Street Car and Bus Operators union, company union, 75 votes; Distribution Department Employes' Protective association, company union, 41 votes. Eight contested votes were not counted.

The election was held by secret ballot under the supervision of Thomas M. Finn, of the U. S. Conciliation Service, who declared that the voting was conducted on a high plane and in strict accordance with Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act. The ballots distinctly stated that the two bona fide unions were affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

It is this kind of an election, held under the supervision of a suitable representative of the federal government, which the bourbon anti-union employers throughout the United States are fighting tooth and nail.

Extending Workers' Education

The division of emergency education programs of the federal emergency relief administration is rendering valuable assistance to the practical education of working men and women not only in the problems which confront them in their efforts to earn a living, but also in the broader field of understanding the causes of the depression, to the end that our democratic institutions may be saved by the protection they give to the inherent rights of the masses to decent living standards, liberty in all of its aspects, and the happiness that naturally follows the acquisition of these essentials.

By means of labor institutes and workers schools, financially sponsored with federal funds, solid and substantial information on economic problems, including occupational questions, is being supplied to thousands of toilers who would not otherwise have the advantages which this knowledge gives.

In outlining the underlying policy in making practical education available for those who do most of the useful work in our complex economic system, Dr. L. R. Alderman, director of emergency education programs of the federal emergency relief administration, says the important thing is "to make the public schools fit the needs of all our people." Inasmuch as most of the people work for a living, special importance should be placed on making the schools fit the needs of working men and women. On this point Dr. Alderman says:

> "I think that workers' education at this time has this two-fold mission, first to help prepare the public schools for groups of organized workers and then to extend to these organized workers the right kind of an invitation to attend."

He points out that our 256,104 school plants should be the means of bringing about a "new understanding of our problems among our whole people that would make democracy stronger."

To assist in this commendable plan the division of emergency education programs publishes a monthly bulletin, "Workers Education." It includes news regarding workers' classes in all parts of the country, articles on resident schools here and abroad and articles by persons actively engaged in workers' education. Every worker, and especially every trade unionist, should read this bulletin regularly. Requests for it should be sent to the Specialist in Workers' Education, 1734 New York avenue, Washington, D. C.

SENATE LABOR COMMITTEE ASKS "KICKBACK" INQUIRY

Washington, June 21.—The senate labor committee has approved the Walsh-Davis resolution calling for investigation of the "kick-back racket" on federal building projects, whereby workers are forced to give up part of their pay to contractors as a condition of getting a job.

Chairman David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, said that testimony given at hearings before the committee "seemed to indicate" that contractors in many cities are violating prevailing rate of wage laws by forcing employes to give up part of their wages.

The resolution will ask for an appropriation of $25,000. If it is approved, Senator Walsh said, the committee would decide whether it or a subcommittee would undertake the inquiry. He said an expert investigator would be employed.

Walsh said the investigation would start in the District of Columbia, but would be extended to all cities where public buildings were under construction by contractors working for the government.

He said evidence already gathered by the committee showed that the "kick-back racket" was being practiced in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and other large cities.

MILL STRIKE INJUNCTION CARRIED TO U. S. COURT

Los Angeles, June 21.—The Mission hosiery mill strike injunction has been carried to the federal courts.

Aghast at the stringent and unprecedented injunction handed down by the California superior court restraining the strikers even for talking "in a loud voice" and enjoining any sort of picketing or congregation, J. C. Packard, heading the Mission strikers' legal staff, immediately took the case to the federal courts.

The strikers expect that on the basis of the Norris-LaGuardia act the federal courts will set aside the injunction. The management in filing its suit with the superior court was careful to ask an injunction only against the branch, and not against the national union in an effort to escape federal jurisdiction.

But the strikebreakers imported from distant states, among them North Carolina, brings the case under federal jurisdiction, the union contends.

TEXTILE MILL IS FINED; CHISLELED NRA CODE PAY

Providence, R. I.—Clyde Mills, Inc., of Westerly, R. I., were fined $100 for violation of the cotton textile code labor provisions. United States District Judge Ira Lloyd Letts, imposing the fine after the company had entered a plea of guilty, explained that the amount was low because of the defendant's financial condition.

The violation was failure to pay the code minimum wage during the week ended Jan. 5, 1934. The company agreed to comply strictly with the terms of the code in the future and to make satisfactory restitution of back wages to the employes.

Howard McGrath, United States district attorney for Rhode Island, was assisted by Reuben J. Martin, assistant counsel NRA litigation division.

This is the second criminal prosecution in Rhode Island for code violations, another textile mill having been fined $1,500 about a month ago.

SHORTER WORK WEEK AND HIGHER WAGES DEMANDED BY WAGNER

New York Senator Condemns NRA Code Employers for Grabbing Big Increase in Profits and Refusing Pay Advances and Reduced Hours.

Washington.—Vigorous criticism of the manifest determination of employers operating under codes of fair competition established by authority of the national industrial recovery act to refuse to increase mass buying power by raising wages coupled with their equally manifest determination to refuse to reduce the length of the work week to provide employment for our millions of idle, all in the face of mounting profits, was voiced by Senator Robert F. Wagner in a speech in the senate in defense of the original principles underlying the recovery program.

Just Return to Industry and Labor.

"A balance between the return to industry and the return to labor is at the very core of economic stability, and it is here that the new deal program seems in greatest need of immediate attention," he said.

"During the period between June and October, 1933, hours of work were reduced 16 per cent and employment increased 19 per cent, although production was declining 17 per cent.

Hours Lengthened, Earnings Cut.

"Paradoxical as it may seem, subsequent improvements in the general condition of business have been matched by increasing unwillingness to reduce hours and to raise wages. Between October, 1933, and March, 1934, production increased over 11 per cent. During the first quarter of 1934, corporation earnings have been three times as great as during the same period last year. Out of 670 dividend changes reported by Standard Statistics, 515 were favorable, as compared with only 156 a year ago.

"But this latter period has witnessed a gain of only 1.5 per cent in employment, hours of labor have been actually lengthened by one-half hour per week, and the real earnings of the individual worker are not appreciably greater than they were in March, 1933.

Injustice Breeds Violence.

"If the return of prosperity, as measured by increased industrial output and higher profits, is going to be accompanied by a desire to return to the wage philosophy of the 1920's, additional and more serious depressions are only a matter of a few years.

"The wage problem is not merely a technical question of providing enough purchasing power to keep industry running at full speed. We cannot justify ourselves of stopping short when that level is reached. We must go on to create a fairer system, in which the worker will share equitably in our great wealth and live in comfort and security. To deny this right to men who are intelligent is to invite unrest and violence.

"The same principles apply to hours of labor. Most of the maximum hour scales are far too high even by the narrow test of re-employment measures. They are indefensibly high when contrasted with the number of hours that people shall be required to work in a highly industrialized civilization."

Mill-Owner Solon Tries Fast One With Child-Labor Bill

Record of Pennsylvania Representative Sponsoring Measure Is 100 Per Cent. Unfavorable to the Workers.

Washington, June 21.—The American Federation of Labor is specifically and positively opposed to the federal child labor bill (H. R. 6184) introduced in the house of representatives by Congressman Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania.

The position of the federation was made known in a letter from W. C. Roberts and W. C. Hushing, legislative representatives of the federation, to Hon. William P. Connery, Jr., chairman of the house labor committee, to whom the bill was referred.

Seeks to Discredit Congress.

"Behind H. R. 6184, a bill to regulate employment of persons under 18 years of age and to provide minimum rates of compensation to be paid employes, is a scheme to discredit congress," the legislative representatives told Mr. Connery.

"One of the arguments used against the child labor amendment," the letter added, "is that congress would be more liberal than the states and would prohibit, regulate and limit the labor of children under the age of eighteen.

Unfavorable to Labor.

"Representative Rich is the only member of congress to our knowledge who has practically a 100 per cent unfavorable record on measures of interest to labor. If he was in favor of the child labor amendment, he would not have introduced the bill. It not only fixes the wages of employes under 18 years of age at 20 cents per hour, but provides that employes 18 years of age or older shall receive 28 cents per hour. He not only desires to regulate the employment of persons under 18 years of age, but has gone beyond that age.

"We are sure that the bill will be used for propaganda purposes to discredit congress and thereby help those who argue that congress would be more liberal than the states in order to defeat ratification of the child labor amendment."

It was pointed out at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor that Representative Rich in drafting the bill did not consult the A. F. of L., the national child labor committee, or any other national agency interested in child labor legislation.

The congressman lives in Woolrich, Pa. He is general manager and treasurer of the Woolrich Woolen mills.

LABOR REPRESENTATION BAN IN FURNACE CODE AUTHORITY

Washington.—The personnel of the code authority for the industrial furnace manufacturing industry made public by the national recovery administration, is composed of five members, all of whom are officials of companies engaged in the manufacture of furnaces. Despite the fact that the authority will enforce the labor sections of the code, the NRA did not deem it proper for representatives of the workers to participate in the administration.

DEPRESSION HASN'T HIT THIS HIGH-SALARY GROUP

Ottawa, Canada.—The forty ranking executives, including officers and directors, of the T. Eaton Co., Ltd., received salaries and bonuses totaling $1,857,300 last year, an average of $33,900, the parliamentary mass buying committee was told by its investigating auditor, W. L. Gordon, Toronto. The average in 1929, the peak year for the vast retail and mail order house, was $54,800.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

AKERY UNION OFFERS PLAN TO ENFORCE REPUDIATED CODE

ganized Workers Telegraph Gen. Johnson They're Ready to Organize 10,000 Bakery Owners to Accept Code in Good Faith and Put Its Provisions Into Effect.

ashington, June 21.—An offer to nize at once 10,000 union bakery rs to enforce the bakery industry as approved by President Roose- was contained in a telegram to very Administrator Hugh S. John- from Financial Secretary-Treasur- A. A. Myrup of the Bakery and fectionery Workers International n. The union took this action fol- ing repudiation of the code by the ers' Council, the organization of loying bakers who filed the code. he wire to Gen. Johnson was sent the union's headquarters in Chi- . The proposal to organize 10,- union bakery owners is but the step, and union officers believe y more than that would be brought the organization within a short e. The union charges that the new anization thus created would be more representative of the bakery industry than the organization which sponsored the code, headed by Henry Stude.

Union Holds Code Is Law.

It is the union view that the code, approved by the President on May 29, is in effect and can no more be repudiated than can any other federal law. However, a code authority must be designated, and it is the purpose of the union to bring into being an organization of employing bakers who will accept the code in good faith, who will name a code authority and who will police the code.

The union points out that the Bakers' Council repudiation of the code was based on provisions contained in the Executive Order approving the code, and that all of these provisions are standard and have been included in Executive Orders approving many other codes.

A primary objection of the Bakers' Council was to the President's order that the Council make a report on the operation of the hours and wages provision of the code at the end of 90 days. The union withdrew its objection to the code when it learned the administration planned to give the industry another opportunity to prove with facts that the wage and hour provisions were as liberal and as conducive to re-employment as they might be.

Assert Council Unjustified.

Nnder the code the 48-hour week will apply to a large portion of the industry. Union officials see no justification for the council's insistence on an inflexible standard of labor fixed in advance, and its refusal in the future to face the facts.

Southern Textile Mills Remain Closed by Strike

Federal Relief Funds Are Used to Feed Strikers' Families in Piedmont District.

Greenville, S. C., June 21.—Almost 2,000 workers in three cotton mills of the Piedmont section of South Carolina remained idle this week, while other plants of the area operated under a three-month 25 per cent curtailment program.

The operatives have been on strike several weeks. Representatives of the United Textile Workers' union from each of the three mills have conferred with the managements, but no definite steps toward a settlement have resulted.

There are 900 employes of Piedmont Manufacturing company at Piedmont, 275 employes of the Victor-Monaghan plant at Walhalla and 650 workers at Belton Manufacturing company at Belton now on strike. Federal relief funds are being used to feed strikers' families.

The policy of the relief administration at Washington is to relieve the destitute wherever they are found without regard to the causes of their destitution.

Local leaders of the United Textile Workers' union denied statement by Piedmont Manufacturing company officials that 500 non-union employes out of the 900 on strike had evinced a desire to return to work at a mass meeting on Tuesday. The union men said that only 123 employes of the mill attended the meeting and that 600 union members would "stay on strike until we get justice." The mill has been idle since the strike was called on May 28.

U. S. Court Upholds Anti-Injunction Law

Constitutionality of Norris-LaGuardia Act Affirmed by Federal Appeals Judges.

New York, June 21.—The United States circuit court of appeals, in a notable decision here, upheld the constitutionality of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act. The act forbids the granting of injunctions by the federal courts in labor disputes except in cases where fraud and violence are proved to exist.

The court ruled that it could not interfere with any attempt by organized labor to bring about the closed shop, engaging in strikes or sympathetic strikes or in any other legitimate and peaceful efforts to bring pressure to bear upon employers to achieve the purposes of a union.

The decision, written by Judge Martin T. Manton and concurred in by Judge Augustus Hand and Judge Harris B. Chase, was upon the injunction application of a group of employers in the construction industry against officers of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

The injunction suit had been in the courts since 1924. It was decided originally in favor of the employers by the federal courts, but was recently ordered retried by the United States supreme court on technical grounds.

TO REPRESENT LABOR.

Washington.—L. Reiss, manager of Shirt Makers' union, Local 25, New York City, has been appointed labor representative on the code authority for the blouse and skirt manufacturing industries, National Recovery Administrator Johnson announces.

GREEN URGES 30-HOUR LAW FOR IDLE RELIEF

Washington.—A final drive to prevail upon congress to enact the Connery 30-hour week bill into law during the present session of congress was made by President Green, of the American Federation of Labor. Trade unionists throughout the country were urged to wire their members of congress asking them to take favorable action on the measure.

"Because unemployment is so widespread and distressing," Mr. Green said, the Connery bill should be made statute law before congress adjourns. He stated the measure is absolutely necessary for all lines of industry as a constructive remedy for the scourge which has thrown millions into the unemployed army.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

merce commission now possesses.

Prohibited any carrier from providing financial assistance to any union of employes from funds of the carrier; prohibited the railroads from interfering in any manner whatsoever with employes joining or refusing to join any organization or union, and specifically provided that the choice of representatives of any craft shall be determined by a majority of the employes voting on the question.

Strengthening of Section 7-A of the recovery act was accomplished by passage of a joint resolution authorizing the president to establish a board or boards to investigate issues, facts or practices of employers or employes in any controversy.

This board can conduct elections by secret ballot of employes to determine what "person or persons or organization" they desire to have represent them in bargaining. This means that workers can choose an individual or they can choose the American Federation of Labor or any other organization to do their bargaining.

The board likewise has authority to order the production of any documents it may need, such as payrolls, or the production of any witnesses it may need to carry out its task. It has power to enforce orders just as the federal trade commission enforces them.

The right to strike is protected by Section 6, which says: "Nothing in this resolution shall impair in any manner the right of labor to strike or act in concert."

Persons who violate the provisions of the resolution are subject to a fine of $1,000 or one year in prison. The resolution applies for one year.

All of these are powers that the national labor board has sought to exercise through executive order. Some anti-union companies have resisted the exercise of the powers. Now they are definite grants from congress.

Black-Draught Brings Refreshing Relief of Constipation Troubles
Constipation produces many disagreeable sensations, several of which are mentioned by Mr. T. E. Stith, of Boonville, Ind., who writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught many years when needed for biliousness and other minor ills when a laxative was needed. I have a tight feeling in my chest when I get bilious. I get dizzy and feel very tired, just don't feel like doing my work. After taking Black-Draught, I feel much better. This is why I continue to use it when needed." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught is a good, purely vegetable laxative, obtainable for 25¢ a package.

MORE ABOUT
HOSIERY UNION

only alternative to government action instituting the 30-hour work week in the hosiery industry was made clear by Emil Rieve, president, in his report to the convention. Rieve declared that failure of the administration to bear down on employers after the employers started to buck the government has enormously weakened the whole NRA structure.

"In a report covering the many developments in the history of the union during the past year, Rieve stressed the fact that higher wages and production control are the immediate objectives of the federation. Hourly wages are now higher than they were in 1929 for most operations in the hosiery industry, Rieve said, but weekly earnings due to shorter hours are less.

"Referring to the protest of the executive committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce that passage of the Wagner bill would 'legalize strikes,' James H. Maurer, veteran labor and socialist leader, said: "You would think some people thought it was illegal to strike. We've always had the right to strike and we don't intend to give it up."

Earl D. Constantine, managing director of the American Association of Hosiery Manufacturers and executive director of the hosiery code authority, addressed the convention.

"Hosiery manufacturers generally were attacked by Constantine. 'Our greatest trouble,' he said, 'arises from violation of the fair trade practices of the code, those prohibiting sales below costs.

"'Most of the manufacturers think they can get away with it and deliberately violate the fair trade practice provision. They fail to realize they are stabbing themselves in the back and depriving themselves of an opportunity to benefit by code provisions.'

"Rieve was unanimously re-elected president. Alexander McKeown was re-elected first vice-president.

"Final action of the convention was to vote extraordinary powers to the national executive board to call a general strike in the trade if necessary in order to force a reduction in the present code limitation on the work week. Delegates demanded a 60-hour two-shift machine hour limitation per week in place of the present limitation of eighty hours divided in two shifts.

"The convention adopted regulations calculated to increase the revenue of the federation for organization and strike purposes. The drive to organize the south will be intensified and a program was adopted for unionizing the sixty thousand or more hosiery workers included in the jurisdiction of the federation and mostly located in the south."

A reader of this colyum of piffle drops in to tell us that his nephew, aged 6, wrote his first letter home, after going away to boarding school. It ran:

"Dear Mum: I went to chapel yesterday and I went to chapel today, and will you please send me some boxing gloves?"

Security for Jobs, Homes and Old Age Asked by Roosevelt

Unemployment Insurance, Pensions for Aged and Home Modernization Urged for Consideration of Next Congress.

Washington, June 21.—A broad plan to promote the security of the masses of America in their homes, their jobs and during old age was submitted to congress by President Roosevelt in a message setting forth proposals for social legislation for the consideration of the next congress, which convenes the first week in January, 1935.

Home life, the president said, must be enhanced by modernizing existing homes and building new ones, coupled with better use of the nation's land and water resources with special attention given to some of the millions of jobless workers as well as to farmers now trying to eke out a living on submarginal or unproductive lands.

Social Insurance.

On the questions of unemployment insurance and pensions for destitute aged the president said:

"Fear and worry based on unknown danger contribute to social unrest and economic demoralization. If, as our constitution tells us, our federal government was established among other things 'to promote the general welfare,' it is our plain duty to provide for that security upon which welfare depends.

"Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance.

"This is not an untried experiment. Lessons of experience are available from states, from industries and from many nations of the civilized world. The various types of social insurance are interrelated; and I think it is difficult to attempt to solve them piecemeal. Hence, I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors in life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age.

"I believe there should be a maximum of co-operation between states and the federal government. I believe that the funds necessary to provide this insurance should be raised by contribution rather than by an increase in general taxation.

"Above all, I am convinced that social insurance should be national in scope, although the several states should meet at least a large portion of the cost of management, leaving to the federal government the responsibility of investing, maintaining and safeguarding the funds constituting the necessary insurance reserves.

"I have commenced to make, with the greatest care, the necessary actuarial and other studies for the formulation of plans for the consideration of the Seventy-fourth congress."

Rights Must Be Maintained.

In concluding his message, the president declared:

"We must dedicate ourselves anew to a recovery of the old and sacred possessive rights for which mankind has constantly struggled—homes, livelihood and individual security. The road to these values is the way of progress. Neither you nor I will rest content until we have done our utmost to move further on that road."

One Hosiery Mill Feels Heavy Hand Of Uncle Sam

Employes Laid Off Because of Union Activities Are Ordered Reinstated Immediately.

Washington, June 21.—The national labor board ruled that the Hatch Hosiery company, Belmont, N. C., reinstate all striking employes by June 20, the recovery administration announced.

The dispute was between the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the Hatch mills. A strike of fifty-two out of 102 employes of the company began Feb. 9, following refusal of the management to reinstate six union workers who had been laid off and two who had been transferred to less desirable work a few days after they joined the federation. The board directed the company to reinstate them immediately to the positions they held on Feb. 5.

The board also ruled that with the calling off of the strike the company should reinstate not later than June 20 all strikers who applied, individually or collectively, before June 15.

Textile Workers Ready to Strike For Cut in Week

Union Officers Authorized to Call Special Convention to Plan Action If NRA Does Not Reduce Hours.

New York City, June 21.—The international executive board of the United Textile Workers of America, meeting in New York City, representing the various divisions of the industry, discussed the advisability of united action in support of the 30-hour work week.

The recent Washington settlement on the cotton textile industry took up one whole day of the executive council and reports of the international officers who took part in the negotiations.

It was officially voted to indorse the position of the officials who negotiated the agreement and give them discretionary power in carrying out the purposes of the organization in line with the demands made in Washington.

Workers in Readiness to Act.

Expecting that a report will be made in the near future by NRA officials on the question of hours and wages, it was also voted to give the officers the authority to call a special convention within the near future, if they deemed it advisable.

President McMahon announced that all of the divisions of the industry had indorsed the position of the parent body and were ready to take part in a general movement for the establishment of a shorter work week.

The woolen and worsted division held a meeting in Worcester, aMss., to take action on the proposal submitted to the National Wool association. The local unions have empowered their representatives to call a strike if necessary in support of their claims for regulation of the machine load and reduction of machine hour operations.

Leaders in the silk industry were in conference with Vice-President Francis J. Gorman formulating a policy which will be submitted to the employers in the near future.

The Executive Council formulated a memoranda which will be submitted to the administration officials in Washington, setting forth the extreme necessity of immediate action on the question of hours of labor, explaining that employers in all parts of the country now recognize that the present working time of eighty machine hours must be considerably reduced, if conditions throughout the textile industry are to be stabilized.

LABOR REPRESENTATIVES SUMMONED TO CAPITAL

Workers Aroused by Latest Harriman Outrage.

SEEK TO PROTECT LOYAL AMERICANS

Amazing Arrogance of Sock Mill Barons Reaches Peak in Kidnaping of Union Representative by Armed Mob Wednesday.

With a set determination to take such steps as will prevent physical violence against organizers of the American Federation of Labor on the part of gunmen employed or incited by southern textile mill operators, officials of several state federations in the southeast are in session Friday at Nashville to consider the outrage perpetrated at Harriman Wednesday when Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, was forcibly removed from a Southern railway train, after he had purchased a ticket for Chattanooga, taken for a ride and threatened with death by a mob which Mr. Held declares was incited by officials of the Harriman mills who have been defying the government of the United States because said government had the temerity to pass laws which did not suit the overlords of the sock mill.

Officials of southern state federations were called by George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation, to plan action not alone in the Held case, but to outline a permanent program and policy which will result in organizers being protected against the lawless elements which are from time to time enlisted by southern mill operators to prevent their employes from taking advantage of rights guaranteed them by the law of the land.

Conferences were being held Friday with the governor of Tennessee, the state's attorney-general and other officials, it was said, and a general meeting of the labor representatives will follow these pow-wows.

Paul J. Aymon, former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and representative of the American Federation, visited Harriman Thursday following the Held kidnaping, and reported on his return to Chattanooga that he could not share the optimism of Mayor DeArmond, who is quoted as saying that the town is "quiet as a Sunday school." Textile Unions to Celebrate "Fourth" At Winnepesaukah Rossville, Ridgedale, Chickamauga, East Lake Combine in Program.

Local 1751, Woolen Workers, Rossville, Local 1733, Chickamauga; Local 2216, East Lake, and Local 1785, Ridgedale, will combine on next Wednesday to celebrate the "Glorious Fourth" with an all-day basket dinner and speaking at Lake Winnepesaukah.

Committee in charge of the arrangements has succeeded in having President McMahon, of the United Textile Workers of America, assign Paul W. Fuller, educational director for the national organization, to deliver an address, which is scheduled for 3 p.m. Mr. Fuller is well known throughout the south and has visited this immediate section several times. He is an orator of national note, and will unquestionably bring a message of interest to all textile workers as well as the trade union movement generally.

A special invitation has been extended the local unions at LaFayette and Dalton, Ga., it was said, and committee members expressed the hope that all textile workers in this section, as well as other trade unionists, will make arrangements to bring the family and spend the day with the members of the four locals.

The committee is composed of Charles Puckett, George Payne, Sam Wilkins and Thomas Tripps.

Notice

Members of Local 415, Journeyman Barbers, are urged to attend the regular monthly session on Monday night at 7 o'clock, as matters of unusual importance will come before the organization for discussion. Decisions must be made which will affect every member of the organization, and a 100 per cent. attendance is expected.

GEORGE W. PERRY,
President.

State Association Postal Clerks to Hold Two-Day Meet

13th Annual Convention to Convene Here Wednesday and Thursday.

Thirteenth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Postal Clerks will convene in Chattanooga next Wednesday for a two-days session. This will be the first meeting of the state body in this city since 1928, and an elaborate entertainment program is being arranged for the entertainment of some 200 delegates and visitors who will come from all sections of the state.

On Wednesday a luncheon and band concert will be tendered the visitors at Lake Winnepesaukah, and on Thursday evening a banquet will be given at the Patten. Thursday morning at 7 the visiting ladies will be entertained at breakfast at the Maypole.

Senators McKellar and Bachman, Congressman S. D. McReynolds and William Ottie, national secretary-treasurer, will be guests of the postal workers, the latter being scheduled for an address on Thursday morning at the final business session of the convention.

A. A. Uttley, of Memphis, is president of the state body, and R. E. Hatcher, of Nashville, is secretary.

Local delegates to the convention next week are G. G. Grigsby, J. H. Daugherty, W. C. Carter, Claude Coppinger and W. W. Gross.

Committees from Branch 192 are as follows:

General chairman, G. G. Griggsby; finance, W. B. Langley; refreshments, W. D. Leverich; transportation, G. D. Russ; entertainment, Earle Posey.

The ladies' auxiliary is co-operating in entertainment plans. Mrs. Leonard Shipley is president of the auxiliary. Mrs. W. D. Leverich is in charge of arrangements for the breakfast on Thursday morning.

Business sessions will be held in the ballroom of the Patten.

Local 1785 to Meet At East Side Junior

Regular meeting of Local 1785, United Textile Workers, will be held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, at East Side Junior High school, on Main street, instead of at the regular meeting place, it is announced. Members are requested to note the temporary change, and are urged to attend this meeting.

Sympathy of the membership of Local 1785 is extended to Brother C. A. Alford in the death of his wife, Mrs. Pearl Alford, who passed away recently at her home. Funeral services were held at the Edgewood Baptist church last Thursday.

Fred Walker was the victim of an unfortunate automobile accident a few days ago, which necessitated the amputation of one arm. The local regrets the "hard luck" of Mr. Walker.

What do you know about the "goings on" among members of our local? Let's make a live and interesting column for our paper every week. Send me your items of interest to our membership each week, so we may have them published.

LOCAL LABOR MAKES PEACE WITH BREWERY

Southeastern Signs With Central Body.

BREWERY WORKERS GAIN 40 MEMBERS

Agreement Provides 100% Union Operation — Ends Long Controversy.

Contracts signed this week between the Southeastern Brewing company and Chattanooga Trades and Labor council brought to an end a lengthy and somewhat bitter controversy which had existed for several months, and which arose over the employment of non-union workmen on construction of work. Agreement with Central Body was attached to and made a part of the contract between the brewery and Local 79, Brewery Workers.

Under the terms of the pact none but members of recognized unions affiliated with Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will be employed, and some forty regular employes of the company will be members in good standing of Local 79. Negotiations were conducted for Central Body by the executive board, and for the Brewery Workers by Paul J. Aymon, Ed Steiner and Roy Lee. Manager Hudgins represented the company.

The Southeastern company for many months held the agency for Lion Pilsener beer, but upon completion of the plant began marketing their own product, "Old South beer and ale," and local distribution of these brands began Tuesday morning. It is said the purpose of the company is to eventually build other breweries in the southeast.

Mr. Hudgins Wednesday expressed gratification that the controversy had been amicably settled. "Our goal is 100 per cent. co-operation of all interests," he said. "We are happy that our disagreement with organized labor has been ended, and we, of course, intend to live up to the letter and the spirit of our contracts. The entire affair was unfortunate, and we are confident we can and will work in perfect harmony with the labor people of Chattanooga in future.

"Our negotiations with labor committees prior to ending of the unfortunate dispute were most pleasant, and I desire to commend the spirit of fairness shown by your representatives in working out the problems and the program for future co-operation.

"We believe we have a product which will be well received by the public, and, as a matter of fact, are even now far behind with our orders. However, we are working night and day to 'catch up,' and with a loyal working force presenting a solid front we will very soon be in position to supply all needs in our territory."

Officials of Central Body and of Local 79 also expressed gratification that the controversy is ended.

ATLANTA OFFICIALS DECLINE SETTLEMENT

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES DEPLORES TENDENCY EMPLOYERS TO DENY JUSTICE TO WORKERS

Statement Appeals for "Fair Play in Accord With the Plain Intent of an Act of Congress and With a Principle for Which the Churches Have Long Contended."

New York, June 28.—Expressing concern over the existing tension between labor and management in industry, the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America issued a statement on "The Present State of Industrial Relations," strongly urging that the rights of labor be fully recognized. The principle of collective bargaining, the statement says, has been affirmed repeatedly by religious bodies in the name of justice and fair dealing.

The statement of the council deplores the tendency among employers to hinder industrial workers in the exercise of free choice with reference to their representatives in collective bargaining and the widespread refusal of employers to deal with the representatives of organized labor. The demand of labor to be represented by persons in its own employ rather than in the pay of employers is declared to be just as reasonable as the insistence of employers upon securing the ablest possible persons to represent their own interests.

The full statement follows:

"The increasing tension between labor and management in some of the great industries of the nation creates a serious menace to civic order and social progress. We have previously expressed our hearty indorsement of the policy of the federal government, embodied in the national industrial recovery act, affirming the right of employes, as well as employers, to bargain collectively through persons freely chosen by themselves to represent their interests. This principle has long been advocated by leading church and civic bodies and has been amply demonstrated in major industries as practicable and desirable. This is not class legislation, but a guarantee of rights without which labor cannot hope to maintain its standards against strongly organized aggregations of capital when there is conflict of interests. Industry is in a healthier state when workers and employers are alike organized with prescribed rights and accepted responsibilities. Among the responsibilities thus incurred by labor is the free admission to its membership of competent workers without distinctions of nationality or race.

"Serious conflict has arisen over the refusal of strong employing groups to recognize trade unions and their determination to limit negotiations with labor to dealings with their own employes. The reasons for labor's insistence upon a broad basis of organization and upon representation of the workers by persons chosen and paid by themselves are too plain for argument. They are precisely the same reasons that impel employers to organize and to secure representatives of their own interests, chosen and paid by themselves. We appeal for fair play in accord with the plain intent of an act of congress and with a principle for which the churches have long contended. When labor is denied the right of free choice of representatives and when employers refuse to deal with representatives so chosen, the spirit and purpose of justice and democracy are thwarted.

"We make this appeal, however, not merely in the interest of what is known as collective bargaining, but in the interest of democratic social progress, which requires that the many functional groups of various types in modern society shall have scope for the development of standards and methods of action for which they may be properly held responsible. That abuses of power have occurred on the part of labor as on the part of other groups may be freely admitted, but these cannot be pleaded as excusing a denial of justice. We are convinced that full recognition of social rights is the best assurance of responsible and wholesome social action. It is for such recognition that we urgent appeal."

Barbers Indorse Turner for Office

Following communication, signed by President Perry and Secretary Helms, of Local 415, Barbers, is published in conformity to the policy of The Labor World:

Editor The Labor World:

"Barbers' Local 415, in regular meeting on June 4, indorsed Brother Tom Turner for constable of the First district, as he is a union man of long standing, having served many years as a barber and is still on the job, and is a former Mine Worker and World War Veteran. We trust organized labor will rally to support of Mr. Turner.

WILL NOT SIGN WITH LOCAL UNIONS

Chattanoogans to Continue Struggle for Justice From Chain Company Bosses. Organization in Other Cities Continues.

American Bakeries company, chain organization whose Chattanooga plant has been tied up with a walkout of bakers and salesmen for the past five weeks, refused point-blank to sign any agreement which mentioned the word "union," according to representatives of the workers who appeared for the second time before the regional labor board in Atlanta last Monday. Although the workers agreed to arbitrate the differences before any fair tribunal, at the suggestion of the labor board, the company flatly declined the proposal. Later, however, at the insistence of the board, a two-hour conference was held, which was finally broken up when Joe V. Williams, local attorney for the chain corporation, stated plainly that a Mr. Broeman, president of the chain, of Atlanta, positively refused to sign any peace pact which contained mention of any union.

The matter was thus returned to the regional board, and it was announced that body would issue a statement of fact within the next few days.

In the meantime, the local plant remains exactly as it was on the day following the strike, with little or no bread being distributed locally. It was stated Friday that officials of the chain had sent letters and calls to members of the local unions and other former employes, urging them to assist in breaking the ranks of the strikers, but of course totally without success.

It was said that organization in various other plants of the corporation is proceeding satisfactorily, and the probability of an extension of the disturbance is increasing.

Local support for the strikers is practically 100 per cent., and as the position of the chain is explained to citizens of other communities where the bakeries operate, additions to the supporters are constantly being made.

Reports of settlement of the strike, allegedly broadcast by employes of the company, have not been so

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What well known United States senator branded company unions as the chief obstacle to collective bargaining?

A.—Robert F. Wagner, of New York, who said: "The greatest obstacle to collective bargaining are employer-dominated unions, which have multiplied with amazing rapidity since the enactment of the recovery act."

Q.—How did the Brewery Workers' union vote on the proposal to turn over the beer drivers, firemen and engineers to the craft unions claiming jurisdiction?

A.—The union, by a vote of 24,161 to 170, voted against the proposal.

Q.—Can delegates to the A. F. of L. be bound by instructions?

A.—In 1901 it was ruled that each delegate controls his own vote and the A. F. of L. conventions must allow him to vote as he sees fit, even though he may vote contrary to his own instructions.

Ancient Libel Is Nailed

Southern workers are not so dumb as they have been painted, according to a report in one of the textile trade papers, in which it is stated that the picture of southern help was badly distorted at some of the recent code hearings. They were represented as being slow witted, their fingers as clumsy, awkward and slow, and unable to turn out work that would command any price at all as compared with the product of the efficient marvels of the northern cities.

One manufacturer, who will start producing furnishings in a Tennessee town next year, is quoted as saying that this town is able to furnish workers of a mental type superior by far to that of the average factory worker of the north. He states that there are 570 girls, all high school graduates, listed by the town as willing and eager to go into shirt and other needle trades factories. Even the minimum wage of the codes is big money to them, because they live at home, and their costs of living are low.

"The trade" sometimes regards as a menace the possibilities of employment of intelligent workers in these southern towns, and the eagerness with which they welcome shirt, neckwear and other needlework plants. The state authorities tend to make special dispensations when a plant is started, by classing as students the workers who are learning a trade. Their product is disposed of by the state, in some instances, it is thought. Eventually, these "schools" become regular factories. In this way the product of this class of labor come into competition with the regular products of the trade, much in the same way as the products of prisons and of the "sheltered" institutions.

But the old tradition of the "dumb southerner" is out. The proposed decentralization of industry may be following this trail, among others, before long. As a matter of fact, it is already on the way.

Strike Right Affirmed

The undercover propaganda seeking to curb by statute law the right of working men and women to refuse to sell the use of their labor power to profit-grabbing employers whenever the workers regard such action as necessary to promote their general economic welfare received two setbacks in labor laws enacted at the close of the 1934 session of the Seventy-third congress.

Limiting this inherent right is frequently sought by employers who petition judges to issue injunctions restraining workers from striking and vigorously conducting strikes.

The first blow at the anti-strike scheme is found in the Crosser amendment to the railway labor law. After setting up machinery to guarantee the right of railroad employes to organize in bona fide unions without interference from employers and outlining the enforcement procedure, the amendment says:

> "Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to require an individual employe to render labor or service without his consent, nor shall anything in this act be construed to make the quitting of his labor by an individual employe an illegal act; nor shall any court issue any process to compel the performance by an individual employe of such labor or service without his consent."

By this amendment, and without mincing words, the congress of the United States plainly and positively informs judges of high and low degree that they are debarred by federal law from issuing injunctions or other court orders which either directly or indirectly limit the right of railroad employes to strike.

The second curb on those employer dictators, who would like to see American workers chained by law to their tasks without the right to withhold their labor power whenever they see fit to do so, is contained in the La Follette amendment to the new labor disputes act, which reads:

> "Nothing in this resolution shall prevent or impede or diminish in any way the right of employes to strike or engage in other concerted activities."

The right to strike is the right of working men and women to refuse to sell the use of their labor power—their power to create wealth and perform service—to those who own and control industry, who buy it for the sole purpose of employing it to produce profits for the exclusive benefit of coupon clippers, dividend receivers and rent grabbers. To limit this right in any way is to deprive the workers of their major final weapon of defense and offense in preserving their economic liberties.

Congress did well in reaffirming the right of labor to refuse to work, to strike, whenever in labor's belief the exercise of that right is absolutely necessary to protect and enlarge the workers' economic liberties.

Railroad Company Unions Smashed

The emergency railroad transportation act, passed by the special session of the Seventy-third congress, in 1933, contained a provision which made it unlawful for railroad companies to use railroad funds to maintain "so-called company unions."

Despite this positive mandate, railroad officials in many instances continued to support these economic monstrosities. But this policy, so openly against the rights of railroad employes, appears to be definitely smashed by the Crosser bill amending the railway labor act, passed by the 1934 session of congress just before it adjourned.

In their zeal to nullify the intent of the special session of congress to ban the company union, railroad officials and their high-salaried attorneys resorted to sophistical nomenclature to disguise the real purpose of these fake labor organizations. They were labeled "employe representation" plans, "employes' mutual benefit" societies, and given numerous other smoke-screen names in the attempt to evade the meaning of the statute.

The Crosser act puts an end to this chicanery by clearly defining just what is meant by the term company union, and then prescribing it. Here is the definition:

> "The term 'company union' means any group or association of employes formed for the purpose of collective bargaining, whether or not same shall be formally organized, which was so formed at the suggestion, with the aid, or under the influence of any carrier, or its or their officers or agents, and/or whose constitution, by-laws or actions are under any control or influence of any carrier or carriers, or its or their officers or agents."

This definition of a company union appears to be so explicit that the legal sophists employed by the railroad executives, even though they be endowed with the combined skill of their ancient counterparts, Protagoras of Abdera and Hippias of Elias, will be unable to weaken it with their adroit and specious reasoning.

After giving this clear definition, the Crosser act declares that it shall be unlawful for railroad companies to use railroad funds "in maintaining company unions," prohibits them from requiring persons seeking employment "to sign any contract or agreement promising to join or not to join a company union," and imposes a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $20,000, or imprisonment for not more than six months or both fine and imprisonment for any "carrier, its officers or agents," found guilty of violating the provision.

Evidently the Crosser railroad labor act of 1934 sentences and executes beyond resuscitation the company union in the railroad industry. It is regrettable that congress did not enact the original Wagner disputes bill, and thus smash the company union monstrosity in all industries.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Congress has gone home and every cut-throat and shylock in the country is happy. Those congressmen and senators sure of re-election are also happy. A group of perhaps fifty are very unhappy, sure of nothing except that they have a fight on their hands.

In 250 days about 400 laws went into the collection over which lawyers must now pore when they go into court. That is a lot of law. Some of it was trivial, much of it was of enormous importance.

As to a great deal of it, we shall know more about its value a year hance. Today we think we like a great many things that may prove burdensome in the future—but for now they seem necessary.

One thing about congress always seems strange. With weeks and often months in which to plan and consider and evolve, bills come in at the last minute to jam up the closing hours of a session. And then important measures are raced through at such speed that only a few can ever know what it is all about. If there can be that speed in the closing hours, why can there not be a little more orderly and measured procedure a little earlier, so that reason may replace confusion?

Nobody can really answer that question, because nobody really knows all there is to know about the quirks of human nature which rule congresses, just as they rule gatherings of Boy Scouts and Rotary clubs—yes, and unions as well. We are still the well known, but little known human race—the oddest thing on earth.

Most laws are mere rules to compel men and women to abandon certain kinds of conduct and to conform to certain other kinds of conduct. There are very few great principles and these must serve as the basis for the multitude of rules.

If humanity were really civilized, human beings would themselves conform to the great principles upon which there is general agreement; and most of the laws would not be necessary. It may take a law to compel a great corporation to stop making slaves out of its employes, but it shouldn't. Corporations are controlled by men serving as directors and by executives carrying out their orders. Why should men, acting as directors, be any more brutal than they seem to be when they act as deacons on Sunday morning? That is another hard question to answer. But when the deacons go out on Monday and act like mad men then laws have to be made.

And now we shall live along for some months without a congress, but with a government made tremendously more powerful, armed with vast new authority and equipped with more money than was ever in the world lumped together for one man to expend.

Now we shall begin to find out what those laws were meant to accomplish. Now we shall find out whether there is to be any modification of the long, long struggle between those who have power and to those who only have labor power.

In these coming months we shall find out a lot of things. And in the most courageous, most magnificently experimenting nation on earth we shall find out about these things—and if they are not right we shall then do other things. The signs are that we are on a march in which there is no place to turn around and go backward.

AMERICAN TOBACCO CO. GRANTS PAY INCREASE

Richmond, Va.—In a determined effort to reduce the widespread discontent of its employes with their low pay, officials of the American Tobacco company here announced a general wage increase to offset the increased prices for everything that makes up a living.

The wage increase covers workers employed in cigarette, smoking tobacco and leaf tobacco plants here and at Durham and Reidsville, N. C., and Louisville, Ky. The company's payroll in Richmond was increased $3,000 to $3,500 weekly. In explaining the increase, C. H. Gibson, manager of the company's Richmond branch, said:

"The American Tobacco company recently completed a survey of wages and living costs among its hourly and piecework employes and the increase was decided upon to offset higher living costs and strighten out cases here and there were wages sometimes out of line. While it is not on a direct percentage basis, each class of employes has been given consideration."

TEXTILE JOBBERS FLOUT CODE; SELL TO CONSUMERS

New York.—Joseph Platzker, secretary of the East Side Chamber of Commerce, reported to the wholesale code authority that he had evidence, obtained in a two months' survey, to show that New York textile goods retailers were losing about $1,000,000 yearly as result of the unfair and illegal competition of jobbers and wholesalers who sold directly to consumers.

Not merely were many jobbers and wholesalers selling directly to consumers, in defiance of their NRA codes, Mr. Platzker said, but were selling at wholesale prices.

LABOR OFFICIAL APPROVES FEDERAL JOB AGENCIES

Detroit, June 21.—The prediction that the United States employment agencies will be a permanent institution was made here by Claude S. Carney, chairman of the Michigan state commission of labor and industry. Mr. Carney said:

"I believe the government will use those agencies right along to provide employment in times of depression and to take up the slack in industry.

"It may be an early step toward unemployment insurance."

"Where the old system of employment had provided jobs for thirty-t gime has placed 1,100 a month in industry before the advent of the CWA.

"During March we placed 1,200 persons through the Detroit office and 1,100 through the Pontiac office. We were enabled to do this because we have all requirements properly classified and have obtained excellent co-operation from the large industrial concerns. The federal government gave us $44,000 for the operation of forty-one agencies and this figure was matched by the state."

bacco Barons Skin Farmer, Labor, and Public—Southern Railway Beats Buses at Own Game.

itten for ILNS by Gordon Nye, well-own newspaper man and labor writer, following a trip through the Piedmont region.)

As you ride through this tobacco-ising district, one thought keeps iting back—you can't forget it. You the lean and hungry-looking farm-preparing the soil for their next p. They live in hovels, and are r beyond a doubt. In fact, the vernment has to underwrite them order to keep them off relief.

Then you come into one of these acco cities and see miles of fac-ies, great office buildings, mag-icent hotels, universities, all owned those who buy and sell the to-co. They skin the farmer, they n their employes, and last, but not st, with the aid of expensive, h-powered ballyhoo advertising, y skin the public. This racket has en these tobacco barons princi-lities so great, so vast, that all er feudal barons of the past look nickel-nursing pikers, compared these modern special-privileged bers.

Stopping at High Point, N. C., you informed that this city has the hest elevation of any on the South-railway, between Washington d Charlotte. You are told that the has a greater variety of indus-es than any other in the Piedmont. d it is easy to believe. Dozens great furniture factories are scat-ed about the town. A dozen knit-g mills make fine hosiery for mi-y. The traffic policeman, a booster, nts to know if you called at the mber of commerce and "got the ures?" He adds the information t the city has 40,000 people, that erybody works, and that High Point the finest city in the Piedmont. wever, when he learns that you il from Florida he said and says: I could sell my property for half t it is worth, I would move to rida, get me a little farm, and go ing once in a while." We all have r secret dreams.

The Southern railway is beating bus lines at their own game. You ll recall a few years back, when railroads protested to the inter-te commerce commission. Their plaint was that the bus lines with rates were taking all their pas-gers. At that time, the commis-n had no power to regulate the s, and could do nothing to help railroads. Now the Southern has its coach rates to 1½ cents per e. The railroad says: "We are isfied." The bus lines say: "That will break us." The shoe is on other foot, and is pinching!

General Tire Co. Plant Closed by Strike of 1,100

Wages, Hours and Working Conditions Protested by Rubber Plant Employes.

Following item furnished by a Labor World news service recalled to local trades unionists some correspondence recently between officials of Chattanooga unions and of the General Tire company. Protesting against the attitude of the Don Cherry Tire company, alleged "Home Store" affiliate, local unionists were informed by a high official of the General Tire company that his employes "average more per year than any other industrial plant in the United States."

Now go on with the story:

Akron, O., June 28.—The plant of the General Tire and Rubber company here was closed when 1,100 employes organized in the United Rubber Workers' Federal Labor union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, walked out in a dispute over hours, wages and recognition of the union.

Business circles feared the strike would spread to other factories in this area. During the past year employes of the rubber companies have been strongly organized by the American Federation of Labor, and lately a number of general meetings have been held to consider the questions in dispute.

Representatives of the union accepted the company's offer to raise wages which would place the concern's pay level on a par with other companies, but they refused to return to work until the company union was abolished.

MORE ABOUT KIDNAPINGS

clared it was his opinion that the town resembled an armed camp, with an ever-present danger of outbreaks which might lead to serious trouble.

Mr. Held said Friday morning labor men at Harriman had recognized his abductors, at least two of whom were "straw-bosses" at the Harriman mills, which fact tended to prove his charges that the mill officials themselves were responsible for the outrage.

Amazing campaign of the mill owners to defeat the purposes of the recovery program has been regarded almost nationally as an open defiance of the United States government or any other force which dares to interfere with the non-union policies of the corporation. Various telegrams and "protests" sent the recovery administration, bearing insults to the government officials and signed by the "loyal employes" of the mills, are generally recognized as a part of the destructive campaign engineered by the mill owners; representations that the concern has in its employ some 600-odd employes, when only about 150 to 200 were working prior to the shut-down, are pointed out as typical of the campaign, and the storming of relief agencies the day following the shut-down is regarded by union members as another move engineered by the mill officials to force the hand of the government. It was suggested, however, that there is every possibility that the employes who demanded relief so soon were in need of help, because of the low wages paid by the corporation.

Kidnaping of Edward F. McGrady and Alfred Hoffman at Elizabethton was recalled by local trades unionists Thursday, and it was pointed out that Mr. McGrady was later named assistant secretary of labor, and is now first assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in the administration of the national recovery act.

Recovery officials have maintained their position that the Harriman mills must comply with the regulations imposed by the act before the "Eagle" is returned to the mill, and the hope is general among patriotic citizens that the position of the national enforcement officers will not be altered.

Mr. Held stated Friday morning he would await developments before taking any further steps in the kidnaping matter.

Hosiery Workers' Local Delegate Is Enthusiastic

Mrs. Terrell Brings Optimistic Report From Reading Convention.

Mrs. Althea Terrell, delegate representing Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, returned home last week with an optimistic story from the convention of the federation in Reading, Pa.

"It is regrettable all members of our branch could not have attended the meeting," she said. "Almost two hundred delegates attended, twelve representing the south. They were highly praised for their loyal work in organizing the south.

"Twenty-four new branches have been added to the ranks of our union, mostly all from this section.

"The hosiery workers of the north not only work together, but have social life together. They know each other, which makes life worth living. We must wake up to the fact that we need a social life in the south.

"I urge all hosiery workers to go to work and organize our city 100 per cent and make the south a better place in which to live. We have about 4,000 hosiery workers in the city of Chattanooga, and if every one would do their duty as a member of the union or as a true American citizen we could have just what the hosiery workers in the north have.

"The convention adopted a resolution providing for an organization drive for hosiery workers in the south.

"If the local hosiery workers could only see what progress the people of Reading have made they would organize. They have organized since last September, and have 10,000 members. They not only work together, but they have a social life together. They also have a beautiful country club, where they have everything for recreation, and a very large night club in the city. We, too, could have those things here if we would only organize.

"I am urging every member of Branch 53 to act as an organizer and organize the 4,000 hosiery workers of Chattanooga and make our city one to be proud of. Get better conditions, make it a better place to live. We have two southern members on the national executive board, T. C. Hooks from High Point, N. C., Clyde Heckrote from Martinsburg, W. Va. Let us try, we can do it."

Completion of the first year of NRA'S task of codifying industry finds 24,000,000 people working under more than 450 codes which have fixed minimum rates of pay, maximum work weeks and eliminated destructive trade practices.

TEXTILE BOSSES VICTIMIZE UNIONISTS

Greenville, S. C.—The campaign of the United Textile Workers of America to mobilize all textile workers in the south in the union is progressing in good shape, according to John A. Peel, head of the union organization in this region. This progress, he said, was made in the face of bitter opposition of the manufacturers, who were making a concerted effort to intimidate their employes by discharging union members and in other ways.

SMITH SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR TEACHERS

Local Delegate Makes Optimistic Report.

EXPANSION MOVE GIVEN APPROVAL

Co-Operation Given by A. F. of L. Praised by Delegates at National Meeting.

Stanton E. Smith, delegate to the annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers at Chicago, returned this week from the sessions full of enthusiasm and optimism for the future of the federation.

Asked for a statement regarding the work of the convention, Mr. Smith prepared the following article for readers of The Labor World:

"The past year has seen the American Federation of Teachers double in membership and in number of locals. This was the outstanding report of the secretary, Mrs. Hanson, and the various organizers. Ohio and Arkansas were the scenes of greatest expansion and state federations of teachers have been established in both states in addition to the one already in existence in Wisconsin.

"Advocating an aggressive program of expansion and organization and backed by the united strength of the newly organized Ohio and Arkansas, in conjunction with the Chicago teachers' union, the Atlanta union and several other locals, Raymond Lowery, of Toledo, O., defeated Dr. Linville for the presidency for the coming year. In addition the same forces succeeded in electing a controlling majority of the executive council and thus assured themselves of a full opportunity to put their expansion program into action.

"Mrs. Florence Curtis Hanson, who was unopposed for the office of secretary-treasurer, announced that the coming year would be her last in that office, as she felt that she was reaching the time of life when she deserved a rest. Her career has been a long and serviceable one.

"Miss Selma Borchardt in her report as legislative representative in Washington, D. C., told of strenuous efforts in attempting to secure federal emergency aid for schools. Although aid for rural schools had been granted in the form of relief funds earlier in the congress, it was not until the closing days of the session that, largely through the help of the American Federation of Labor, it was possible to secure authority for school districts to borrow funds for school purposes from the R. F. C. on sufficient collateral. Although this far from meets the needs of schools in the present emergency, it was a victory for Miss Borchardt and her labor backers. It is to be regretted that Miss Borchardt felt called upon to resign both as vice-president and as legislative representative for reasons which she deemed adequate.

"Outstanding among the actions of the convention was the adoption of a program of permanent federal aid for schools with the dual purpose to equalize educational opportunity in the various sections of the country and to make greater use of the taxing resources of the federal government to relieve the excess strain on real estate on which local governments so largely depend. This program calls for at least $600,000,000 annually.

"Another resolution advocated independent political action by organized labor and still another both praised and condemned the NRA—praised it for eliminating child labor and stimulating organization of the workers and condemning it for inadequate enforcement of Section 7-A and failure to grant to labor adequate representation and power on code authorities.

"The convention was intensely interesting and at times rather heated. It was characterized by a struggle for power by the newly-organized groups

POST OFFICE CLERKS HOLD 'BIGGEST' MEET

Local Convention Called Best Ever Held.

WILL CONVENE NEXT YEAR AT JACKSON

Committees From Branch 192 Did Good Job in Entertaining Visitors.

(By "Gus Himself")

The Tennessee Federation of Postoffice Clerks ended their thirteenth annual convention Thursday. Meeting Wednesday morning, July 4, at 9 a.m. with welcoming addresses by Mayor Bass, Postmaster Dennis, J. H. Daugherty, president of Local 192, and Mrs. Leonard Shipley, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, there was something doing every minute of the time until the close of the meeting at 2 p.m. Thursday.

After welcoming addresses and a short business session the morning of the fourth, all delegates and visitors were taken to Lake Winnepesaukah for a lunch and swim, and were entertained by the Postoffice Carriers' band with a band concert. Beginning at 7 p.m., the band gave another concert preceding one of the nicest banquets ever held by this organization beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Patten hotel, convention headquarters.

Speakers at the banquet were Senator Nathan Bachman, Congressman McReynolds, Matt Robinson, Mrs. W. D. Leverich, Mrs. Herman Lowe, Mrs. C. V. Duggan and Milliam Otte. Mayor Bass, Postmaster Dennis and Judge Cummings also made short addresses and were guests of honor at the banquet. George Forbes acted as toastmaster and ran the show for the evening as usual. George is a past president of the state federation and is known personally by almost every postoffice clerk in the state.

The ladies' auxiliary to the Tennessee federation held their annual convention at the same time at convention headquarters, and were honored by having their national president, Mrs. Herman Lowe, of Nashville, as a guest of honor. Mrs. Lowe visits a number of state conventions every year and made a special trip from Albany, Ga., where she was the guest of honor at the Georgia auxiliary convention. The visiting ladies were entertained with a breakfast Thursday and held their business session immediately following this breakfast, Mrs. A. P. Sylar, president, of Memphis, presiding.

Mrs. Charles Werndli was elected state president and Mrs. E. L. Posey re-elected as second vice-president. Other officers were Mrs. W. C. Scarbrough, of Memphis, first vice-president, and Mrs. W. I. Horner, of Nashville, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The final business session of the federation was featured by an address by William Otte, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, of Washington, and was presided over by A. A. Utley, president, of Memphis. One of the unusual features of the convention was the unanimous re-election of all the state officers by acclamation. These are: A. A. Utley, president; John W. Lyon, Lebanon, Tenn., first vice-president; J. H. Daugherty, Chattanooga, second vice-president; E. E. Dinkins, Paris, Tenn., third vice-president; E. R. Hatcher, Nashville, secretary-treasurer, and C. V. Duggan, Knoxville, state organizer.

The convention was the largest and best attended of any ever held by the state federation and one of the most enjoyable features of the entire convention was the wonderful co-operation of the Letter Carriers' band. The band boys played the night of the 3rd, all day July 4 and came back with a concert at 7 p.m. the night of the 4th. The executive committee of Local 192 wishes to express their thanks for the wonderful co-operation and support of the band, and also to thank the ladies' auxiliary for their help in arranging for and furnishing

WEALTHY CORPORATION IRKS EMPLOYES IN TWO NEIGHBOR CITY PLANTS

Union Officials Will Try to Prevent Walkouts—Unorganized Strike at Florence, S. C., Recalled—Local Situation Unchanged—Chattanooga Plant Operating at 5 Per Cent Capacity—Strikers Again Thank Public for Support.

Indications that plants of the American Bakeries company in Atlanta and Birmingham will be involved in strike troubles as well as the local branch of the chain corporation were seen in reports coming from these two cities this week. Herman J. Schad, representative of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' union, who has been in Chattanooga since the local strike occurred several weeks ago, left Friday to visit the scenes of the threatened trouble, and to endeavor to secure an adjustment which will cover all plants of the corporation. Unyielding attitude of the concern's officials, however, it was admitted makes possibility of a settlement short of strikes improbable. It was recalled that a report was current some two weeks ago that officials of the bakeries company had boasted the corporation would "spend $100,000" in order to break the local union of bakers and salesmen, and although it is believed by some that the losses have possibly already neared that point, determination to "starve the local workers back" appears to be as strong as ever.

For some weeks dissatisfaction with conditions has been reported from several cities where the chain operates, a member of the local union recalling Friday that last fall an unorganized walkout at the Florence, S. C., plant of the company was adjusted only through efforts of government officials. It was declared workers in the Florence plant were compelled to labor fifteen or sixteen hours per day, and as long as twenty hours on the "big day," Friday.

The Atlanta and Birmingham plants, The Labor World was told, are now well organized, in spite of opposition, and employes are growing more and more restless as no move is made by the company to improve conditions.

Local situation remains unchanged. The Chattanooga plant is being operated, it was said, at about 5 per cent. capacity by strikebreakers, some of whom were imported from other cities. Practically all of this bread is being shipped out of town, it is declared, although two or three local retailers still are stocking ABC products.

Anticipated report of the regional labor board at Atlanta, which will issue a "statement of fact" in regard to the Chattanooga strike, has been delayed through illness of a member, it was reported. It was said also that the local board at Birmingham has before it the case of employes of the Birmingham plant of the chain. Another case from the same plant is said to have been adjusted by the Birmingham board several months ago.

Chattanooga workers thrown out of employment by the arrogant attitude of the wealthy corporation are standing 100 per cent against returning to work until they receive what they regard as their American rights and privileges, and the obvious effort on the part of Atlanta officials of the bakery chain to "starve them out" gives no indication whatever of success.

The Chattanoogans Friday asked The Labor World to again express their appreciation to the local business men and citizenship generally for the hearty support given the strikers, and to ask that this support be continued until the struggle is ended.

First Local Ballot On Choice of Union Removes All Doubt

Preference for Legitimate Organization Shown by Signal Cement Vote.

First vote of employes of a local manufacturing plant under government supervision demonstrated the workers prefer a legitimate organization to the so-called "company union," a dummy plan engineered by large employers as a buffer against the formation of real organizations by employes to deal with matters effecting working conditions.

On Tuesday employes of the Signal Mountain Portland Cement company, who have for the past several months maintained a federal local union, voted, under direction of a representative of the United States government and free from any possible coercion, to retain their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, thus removing all doubt as to their desires in the matter—or as to their intelligence and foresight, incidentally.

It is reported the vote was 100 per cent. for the American Federation of Labor organization.

F. L. Ogden is president of the Cement Workers' union, which is Local 18269, American Federation of Labor.

The way is thus opened for collective bargaining and for real co-operation between employer and employe at the cement plant.

State Committee Makes Indorsements

Indorsement of Senators Nathan L. Bachman and Kenneth McKellar and Gov. Hill McAlister featured a session of the nonpartisan political committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods at Nashville last Saturday. Congressman S. D. McReynolds was also given the O. K. of the committee members.

The state committee is composed of the president, secretary and legislative chairman of the federation, and the legislative chairman of each of the four transportation brotherhoods and the Telegraphers.

Paul J. Aymon was elected chairman of the committee, succeeding H. V. Reid, of Memphis, who retired from the committee after many years of conscientious and faithful service.

Mr. Aymon said Thursday a formal statement will soon be issued by the state body.

Textile Workers Hear Oratory At Winnepesaukah

Hundreds Enjoy Outing and Speeches of National Leaders at Celebration.

A crowd estimated at from 5,000 to 7,000 visited Lake Winnepesaukah on Wednesday, perhaps half of whom were members of the United Textile Workers of America, who joined in a day of picnicking and heard the gospel of trades unionism expounded by Paul W. Fuller and C. W. Bolick, representatives of the international union. William Otte, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, who was attending the convention of the Tennessee clerks, also delivered an address.

Local unions at Rossville, Ridgedale, East Lake, Chickamauga and La Fayette were represented, many bringing their families and spending the entire day.

The celebration was arranged by a committee from Local 1751, composed of Charles Puckett, chairman; George Payne, Thomas Cripps, Sam Wilkins and Bob Hawkins.

POLICIES OF ROY M'DONALD ARE EXPLAINED

Times Correspondent Is 'Set Right.'

PHILOSOPHY OF GROCER RECALLED

Low - Wage, Long - Hours Statements of Merchant Pointed Out.

Business policies of Roy McDonald and his so-called "Home Stores" were again brought to public attention this week through a communication to the Times signed "Mrs. E. B. Alloway." The letter praised McDonald as a public benefactor because he had allegedly sold milk at a price which competitors contend is below cost.

John H. Crump, chairman of the "Home Stores" committee of Chattanooga Typographical union, which committee is charged with the duty of keeping constantly before the public the position of McDonald with reference to legitimate business and to his employes, took occasion to answer the communication and explain the "individualistic" policy of the grocer, baker, dairyman, druggist, printer, publisher, tire dealer, laundryman, etc.

Mr. Crump's letter follows:

"July 5, 1934.

"Mrs. E. B. Alloway, 3108 Curtis Street, City.

"Dear Mrs. Alloway:

"Your letter published in this morning's issue of the Times prompts me to say that you are evidently not familiar with the business policies of the McDonald organization. Were you acquainted with Roy McDonald's ideas on low prices I don't believe you would have been so quick to come forward with praise for him.

"It is not my intent to be critical of your well-written letter, but to place before you a few facts concerning the McDonald organization.

"Did you ever ask yourself this question when offered a bargain: 'Am I getting quality at the expense of everyone connected with producing this article, or am I being cheated?' Low prices invariably mean that the farmer, dairyman, mill or factory worker received correspondingly lower prices for their labor, or that you are receiving low quality for your money. Sometimes low prices means both.

"The man who buys at wholesale and sells at retail does not do so for the fun he gets out of it. He gets his profit, and the cheaper he can buy and the lower wage at which he can secure employes, the higher profit he makes.

"Mr. McDonald styles himself an 'individualist.' Yes, Mrs. Alloway, he is very much an individualist in that he believes in low wages and long hours for all workers.

"A year ago, when he inaugurated his weekly throw-sheet, Mr. McDonald told a committee from Chattanooga Typographical union that 'President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 by not ordering all wages cut 50 per cent.' He claimed that such action would have ended the depression immediately. Luckily his views are not shared by the leaders of our country, as you can see for yourself that since wages generally have been increased more people have been put to work and everyone has a brighter outlook for the future.

"The average working man spends most of what he earns, so common sense tells us that the man who makes $30 a week is a better potential market than the man who makes $15 a week. Increased buying power means increased consumption.

"When Mr. McDonald inaugurated his throw-sheet do you think he followed out the idea advertised by his Home Stores—'Home Owned and Operated?' No indeed! He imported workmen from out of the state when there were many unemployed printers and pressmen in Chattanooga at the time. And that after conferences between he and a committee from

HOSIERY UNION TO DRIVE FOR 35-HOUR WEEK

All National Agreements Are Terminated.

NOTICES ARE ISSUED TO MANUFACTURERS

Officials Will Insist on Maintenance of Wage Scales for Members.

Philadelphia, July 5.—All agreements or contracts between the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the hosiery manufacturers of this country have been formally canceled by the union and will terminate Aug. 31.

President Rieve and Secretary-Treasurer Smith, of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, explained to the manufacturers that cancellations notices were issued to protect the union, because of the uncertainty of the hours situation in the industry.

The hosiery code authority is proposing to the NRA a reduction in hours of from forty per week per operative to thirty-five per week. Hearings on this matter will open in Washington on July 9.

The union is demanding that proportionate wage increases shall accompany any hours cut that may be made.

The code authority is seeking an increase in minimum wage rates prescribed by the code but this will not actually affect the great majority of full-fashioned mills in the country who are now paying much above the minimum scale, it is stated. It is claimed that approximately 80 per cent of the production of full fashioned hosiery is being manufactured by mills who pay the union wage scale or very close to it.

Union rates are often almost twice as high as code minima, it is pointed out. An increase of about 14 per cent in present piece rates in the union scale would be necessary in order to keep earnings at their present levels if hours are cut to thirty-five week, President Rieve insists. The code authority does not propose an increase in the minimum rates for seamless workers and proposes to retain the same minima for a thirty-five-hour week that are now being made for a 40-hour week. The only exception is that increases are being proposed for fixers in the seamless mills.

In their formal communication to the hosiery manufacturers Rieve and Smith stated that the union will be prepared to discuss revisions in the wage scale immediately after the question of hours is settled. The union is of course supporting enactment of an hours slash, but seeks a 30-hour work week instead of the 35-hour proposal of the manufacturers.

The notice of cancellation may be regarded as a matter of form in the case of a large section of the trade.

It is accepted as a foregone conclusion by non-union as well as union forces that the 35-hour work-week plan will be O. K.'d by the NRA and put into effect.

The federation is placing itself in a position where it can legally take any action that it may feel is necessary if a crisis develops in the next two months.

The recent convention in Reading gave the leaders of the federation a definite mandate on this question and the membership is prepared to be called upon for drastic action if this should prove to be unavoidable.

The principle of increased wages to compensate for reduced hours is fundamental and must be pushed to a conclusion, federation officials feel.

The hosiery code authority is probably the first important trade group with a 40-hour limit now to seek a permanent 35-hour work-week. The iseue is therefore of the greatest importance to industry as a whole and the developments in this matter will be watched closely by official Washington and by the general public.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Is organized labor satisfied with the joint resolution passed by congress providing for the appointment of labor boards to investigate issues and facts in labor controversies?

A.—No. President Green of the A. F. of L. recently said that the act is inadequate, and that labor will continue its fight in the next congress for the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Q.—What was the first name of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen?

A.—Brotherhood of Railroad Brakemen of the Western Hemisphere.

Q.—Who said: "The only entirely reliable 'friend of labor' is labor itself?"

A.—Walter Macarthur, in "Trade Union Epigrams," published by the American Federation of Labor.

What Next!

The first American synthetic rubber automobile tires which look like real rubber and are said to wear fully as well were recently announced at Wilmington, Del. The synthetic rubber is made of acetylene, salt and water. The acetylene comes from coal and limestone, so that all the ingredients are home products. The new tires will not be made for sale at present, but held as a check against excessive rubber prices.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, rundown condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefitted them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Codes Can Be Enforced

Violators of NRA codes are finding that the Recovery Act has sharp teeth. In Philadelphia a garage owner convicted of violating the hours and wage provisions of the code was fined $74,000.

Evidence that the garage owner, in the face of code requirements of a $15 minimum salary and 54 hour maximum workweek, paid his employes as low as $9 and forced them to work up to 88 hours went uncontradicted.

Federal Judge George A. Welsh told the jurors:

"You are to judge whether the congress was to sit supinely by and watch the country drift into industrial crises, or whether they should act with the powers vested in them in the greatest crisis since the birth of the nation."

In York, Pa., the owner of a storage battery firm was held in federal court in default of $5,000 bail on charges of violating code wage provisions.

These two cases show NRA hour and wage provisions can be enforced. Similar vigorous action is needed by state and federal authorities in all sections. Such action will tend to convince employers that it is the part of wisdom to observe NRA codes.

Time for Temporizing Past

President Roosevelt has recently twice warned in vigorous language against the automobile accident peril. The other day he expressed "deep concern over the staggering toll of deaths, injuries and property damage caused by highway accidents."

"We can no longer afford to temporize with this problem," the president said.

With approximately 300,000 deaths, and an even greater number of injuries annually, caused by automobile accidents, the problem of road safety demands action of the most vigorous kind. It is one of the most serious problems confronting the nation and it is imperative that it be speedily solved.

The problem deserves the attention of all trade unionists. In addition to their interest in the general welfare, menaced by auto accidents and their consequences, trade unionists have a special interest in the problem because such accidents add heavily to the cost of trade union benefits. Unions are continually paying benefits for the deaths in highway accidents of members who would otherwise live for many years.

Tennessee Shocked by Poorhouses

"The almshouse system, as it now exists, is a blot on the social structure of Tennessee." This renewed sharp indictment of poorhouses is a result of a CWA study conducted by Doctors William E. Cole and Ralph E. Dunford, members of the social science and psychology staffs of the University of Tennessee. The survey covered 48 of the 80 county almshouses of the state. Nearly 2,000 inmates were housed in these almshouses, where almost unbelievable filth, overcrowding, lack of segregation, and stupid and callous supervision were found by the investigators. The immediate adoption of a system of old-age pensions as well as better care for the aged incapacitated were urged.

The time may not be long in coming when union men and women and their sympathizers may pick their reading matter as they pick their wearing apparel and other necessities—by the union label. The magazine, Real America, now displays the label on its masthead, and it is logical to suppose that this innovation will find imitators.

The label has always been used on certain types of publications, but most magazines of general interest have refrained from this enlightening practice until now. Even Real America was slow in adopting this highly sensible course. Although the magazine has always been strictly union in its manufacture, it has been more than a year in the process of having the label affixed to its masthead.

When asked about this delay, Edwin Baird, editor of Real America, said that the content of the magazine, in his opinion, left no doubt in the minds of his readers as to the sympathies of the publishers, and it was not until several editors of union publications directed his attention to the lack of the label on his magazine that he took the matter into consideration. Then he acted immediately.

There is then, at last, one magazine of general interest, and of national circulation, wearing the union label proudly on its masthead. It is to be hoped that other publications meriting this label will follow suit.

"Dressed up to kill" is a common phrase, but "dressed up to be killed" means something quite different. The New York state department of labor reports on industrial injuries show that thousands of workers go to their daily jobs dressed in a way to invite injury or death.

Appropriate attire for one's job is a matter of care and common sense, yet many accidents happen in industry because care and common sense in dressing are not observed by workers.

Loose sleeves, flowing neckties, dangling shoe strings, fluffy ruffles, bracelets, even rings are out of place where workers come in contact with machinery. Even the fluffy hair of a pretty shop girl is a distinct menace. Such machine operators should dress their hair compactly or confine it in a net or cap.

NRA CODE PAY CHISELER FACES $5,000,000 FINE

Philadelphia, July 5. — Possible fines, totaling more than $5,000,000, hung over the Sley System of garages here on the basis of return of the first federal indictment in this area for alleged violation of an NRA code.

The indictment, specifically naming Harry Sley, contains seventy-four counts charging violation of sections of the code pertaining to hours and wages.

It was charged that violations began last December. Since each day an employer fails to live up to a code is regarded as a separate violation, subject to a maximum penalty of $500 for each offense, the court could impose fines of more than $5,000,000 should Sley be found guilty.

Witnesses testified trat employes of the Sley system worked as long as eighty hours a week, instead of the fifty-four-hour maximum.

Employes also testified they received $10 a week instead of $15.

BUILD UP ECONOMIC STRENGTH, UNION HEAD ADVISES WORKERS

Fort Worth, Tex., July 5.—Harvey C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America, told the union biennial convention here that labor must not expect too much from the government under the NRA, and thereby fail to itself perform functions that are vital to labor's welfare.

"NRA has given the oil worker nothing but the right to organize and bargain collectively," he said. "The rest is up to us."

Fremming indicated that the tendency of oil companies' executives is toward the settlement of workers' grievances through peaceful mediation, but at the same time he pointed out the workers must keep in readiness to show "our economic strength to strike."

Conn. Textile Workers Vote State-Wide Strike

Putnam, Conn.—Workers in Connecticut's cotton, silk and rayon industries have voted in favor of a general strike by July. Forty-seven locals, with 33,000 members, were represented at a meeting of the Connecticut Textile council.

The Connecticut Federation of Labor will be asked to urge all affiliated crafts to support the textile workers.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

It is said that there wouldn't be courts enough to hear nor jails enough to hold the violators of one big NRA code.

That's something of a measure of the code violation problem.

It's something of a measure of industrial morality, too. It is fair to ask this: If these business gents will to that extent violate rules to which they have agreed, what must have been their conduct when there were no rules?

Anybody who can answer that question correctly can have the first prize of a fur lined doughnut or a free ride on the merry-go-round.

These code violating gentlemen are the fellows who talk about how terrible labor is and what awful things strikes are for the poor employers and the poor public.

Remember, ladies and gentlemen, codes are criminal laws! A lot of employers forget about—some will get snared plenty.

There's this about law violation: There may not be enough jails to hold all the violators, but if a few are jugged none of the others can know whether they will be taken next, and they'll proceed with at least a measure of fear in their hearts.

Of course, if nobody is jugged, then there'll be no fear. Some vigorous lessons will help mightily, and there are enough lawyers on the government payroll to hand out all the lessons that are needed.

At a commencement performance this week a famous college professor oratorically demanded to know whether we are willing to scrap the system "under which this country has prospered for more than 100 years."

Professor, learn your history! In that hundred years there have been at least 25 when there was no prosperity. What about 'em?

Besides all that, if the system can be rectified so that there can be jobs, reasonable security and a decently distributed prosperity, the system won't have to be scrapped.

But chances are that if the fixing process doesn't work, there will be plenty of disorganizing done to the present system, if it is a system.

It is getting to be axiomatic that ten and a half million will not remain permanently idle without a tremendous kick. Pretty soon what is merely axiomatic will get dynamic, and then, boys, watch out.

The kind of professor who talks that way isn't being invited into the Brain Trust, which is to the good to that extent.

Just when the banks were all set to handle a big Baltimore & Ohio bond issue—about 25 millions—along comes the RFC and tells the railroad it will lend the money, saving the road the bank profits on the handling of the issue.

And if that isn't something new, just ask some of the disappointed bankers. bankers.

It is said that steel prices will go rushed to get ahead of the jump,b up in July, that orders are being rushed to get ahead of the jump, and that the rise will slow up production. All of which looks like a lot of hooey to influence the unions in their course of action. But, the unions have their eye on a principle, and principles are not fixed by rising or falling prices.

Used to be a great stunt to get a new member. Now they get 'em in hundreds. This will yet be an organized nation.

No one is ever silly enough to ask what a bridegroom wore at the wedding. Even without seeing him one knows he wore a worried look.

Steel Elections Are Fear Votes, Green Declares

"Yes" Ballots Cast by Workers Under Coercion, Labor Head Charges.

Washington, July 3.—Recent workers' elections at steel plants, at which the workers are said to have voted overwhelmingly for company unions, were fear votes, not representing the true sentiments of the men, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, charged in a statement issued here.

"If the returns of workers' elections as announced by the steel corporations are correct, a perfect state of satisfaction prevails among the workers employed in the steel industry," President Green said. He continued: "It was announced that more than 90 per cent of the workers voted for the adoption of the company union plan.

"But the existence of this alleged state of satisfaction, as well as the analysis made of these elections by the steel corporations management, are contradicted by the facts. The elections held were company union elections; they were company controlled and company dominated. The election machinery was set up by the steel corporations. The actual voting took place inside the steel manufacturing plants. The management and the bosses were everywhere in evidence and the elections were held in a company union atmosphere. There could be no other result than the result announced. The workers were given to understand that the corporations wished the company union plan approved and the workers clearly understood how the company wished them to vote.

"The vote, therefore, represents a vote of fear, of coercion, and of intimidation. It was a 'yes' vote cast by men who because of fear were compelled to vote 'yes.' The fact that the steel corporations management refuses to permit an election to be held under the direction, control and supervision of the national labor board, an independent, impartial government agency, shows that the corporations would not dare to run the risk of permitting their workers to vote freely and independently, separate and apart from company union domination and control, where the workers could by secret ballot vote in accordance with their judgment and the dictates of their conscience.

"A petition signed by 50 per cent of the steel workers employed in the Carnegie plant at Duquesne, Pa., was presented to the national labor board a short time ago, requesting that an election be held as provided for in the president's executive order of Feb. 1. Because of the hostile opposition of the United States Steel corporation this petition was never granted and the election asked for was never held.

"But in the announcement of the company union election, it is alleged that the workers of the Carnegie Steel company voted almost unanimously for the company union plan and in conformity with company union requirements. Such a vote does not square with the facts. If the steel corporation management is convinced that the steel workers want the company union plan as formulated by the company and as prepared for the workers by the steel corporations management, why are they afraid to risk an election held under governmental supervision and control?"

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

NEW NATIONAL LABOR BOARD APPOINTED BY PRESIDENT

Takes Place of Old Wagner Board, Formally Abolished by Executive Order—Board of Three Also Named by Roosevelt to Deal With Labor Disputes in Steel Industry.

Washington, July 5.—Following his appointment of a board of three to arbitrate differences between employers and workers in the steel industry, President Roosevelt announced creation of a new national labor relations board to take the place of the national labor board.

The president appointed on the new board Lloyd Garrison, acting dean of the Wisconsin University Law school, chairman; Harry Alvin Mills, professor of economics at the University of Illinois, and Edwin S. Smith, commissioner of labor and industries in Massachusetts.

In an executive order setting up the new board, the president formally abolished the national labor board, which has adjusted many hundreds of controversies under the direction of Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York.

Roosevelt complimented the retiring board members on their "unselfish and effective services during the difficult days of this last year."

To Have Broad Power.

The new board will have broad power to conduct labor elections, hear cases of discharges of employers and to act as voluntary arbitrator. It was established under authority of the joint labor disputes resolution passed in the closing session of congress.

The president made plain the board "is authorized to recommend to the president that in such cases as they deem it desirable, existing labor boards such as the industrial boards already created in the cotton textile industry or the petroleum industry, and such as the various regional labor boards, should be re-established under the authority of the joint resolution . . . and also to recommend that additional boards of a similar character should be newly created."

Members of the retiring national labor board, in addition to Chairman Wagner, are Vice-Chairman Clay Williams, Vice-Chairman L. C. Marshall, Henry S. Dennison, Ernest Draper, Pierre S. du Pont, Louis E. Kirstein, Walter C. Teagle, George L. Berry, William Green, Dr. Francis J. Haas, John L. Lewis and Dr. Leo Wolman.

Stacey Heads Steel Board.

The board appointed to deal with labor questions in the steel industry is composed of Walter P. Stacey, chief justice of the supreme court of North Carolina; Admiral Henry A. Wiley (retired), who has had experience in industrial disputes, and James Mullenbach, who has been a labor arbitrator in the clothing trades in Chicago for many years.

The board is known as the national steel labor relations board. Announcing appointment of the board, the president said:

"This board consists of three impartial members, who will be thoroughly independent in their judgment and who are fully empowered to act under the law. They will make reports to me through the secretary of labor of their activities from time to time.

"The functions of the board will be limited to labor relations in the iron and steel industry.

"In that field the board was authorized to hear and determine cases of alleged violations of Section 7-A (collective bargaining) of the national industrial recovery act, to mediate in labor questions, to serve as a board of voluntary arbitration and by secret ballot to conduct labor elections to determine who are representatives of workers for collective bargaining."

Appointment of the steel board was approved by employers and organized workers in the steel industry and averted danger of a strike at this time. Naming of the board was suggested by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers in convention at Pittsburgh and was approved by the convention.

AUTO UNIONS TAKE FIRST STEP TOWARD ORGANIZATION OF BIG NATIONAL UNION

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—Local unions of automobile workers, in a two-day national convention here, took the first step toward creation of an international union by formation of the United Automobile Workers National council.

The national council, elected after the meeting adjourned, consists of eleven members from the various states which have local automobile unions. The chairman will be a national representative of the labor federation, to be appointed by President William Green, of the A. F. of L.

Its function will be to advise the national representative of the federation as to the problems and desires of the Federal Auto Workers unions, to co-operate with him in strengthening the organizations and in promotion of organization campaigns.

Formation of the national council was in accordance with advice by President Green, who declared that the American Federation of Labor intends to form one big union of the 150 scattered automobile unions and weld them into an organization that can effectively defend labor's rights in the automobile industry. Formation of a national council preliminary to the organization of a national union was asked by Green, as well as by William Collins, A. F. of L. organizer in the Detroit area.

Green urged the automobile workers to follow the example of their employers, organized into the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which speaks for all the manufacturers.

Nobody challenged the right of the employers to organize in that way, he said, and nobody could well oppose the workers if they saw fit to organize an international union.

"We claim that right for ourselves and we will fight until we get it," he declared.

"We have well defined plans," he added. "During the summer and fall we are going through the period of strengthening our foundation and the building of a structure that will be unassailable in the protection of your economic welfare."

The first steps toward the goal outlined by President Green will be the strengthening of the staff of organizers in the automobile regions. The workers' education bureau, the educational arm of the A. F. of L., will soon open study groups and form institutes for the purpose of preparing the union members and the young, inexperienced leaders for the tasks before them next winter.

Resolutions were adopted criticizing Gen. Johnson for amending the automobile code without a public hearing. Manufacturers were criticized for fostering company unions.

The conference called upon the national automobile labor board to begin at once an adequate study of shop conditions against which complaints were made so that an intelligent solution might be worked out by the unions and the managements.

Sympathize With Fellow Workers

Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, at the last regular meeting adopted resolutions prepared by a committee, expressing sympathy for two members, Ed Gollahon and Ed Fisher, both of whom have recently suffered bereavements in the death of their mothers.

The resolutions, signed by Joe Bell, R. L. Lee and Paul Aymon, follow:

"Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call from this life the mothers of two of our members, Brothers Ed Gollahon and Ed Fisher; and,

"Whereas, we share in the sorrow which has come to these brothers by the passing of their loved ones; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we extend to them and to other surviving relatives our heartfelt sympathy, and that copies of this resolution be furnished our bereaved brothers, and sent The Labor World for publication."

British Unemployment Conditions Are Better

London.—The registered number of British unemployed workers for May was 2,090,000, which is 492,000 less than a year ago and 722,000 less than in September, 1931. The labor situation is reported better than at any time since 1929.

The decrease in unemployed has been greatest among the heavy industries, and compared with a year ago only eight out of 102 industrial groups show a higher unemployment percentage. In only two of these groups is the increase as much as 1 per cent.

This indicates definite improvement in the basic trades.

NRA ORDER AVERTS STRIKE IN WOOL TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Washington, July 5.—National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson announced that a threatened strike in the wool textile industry, involving approximately 135,000 workers and set for July 2, had been averted.

Following references between Division Administrator R. L. Houston, representatives of the United Textile Workers of America and the wool textile code authority, Gen. Johnson signed two orders establishing an industrial relations board for the wool and silk industries. The board will function for the silk industry also because of the similarity of their labor problems to those in the wool industry.

Robert W. Bruere will be chairman of the new board. Dr. Bruere is now chairman of the Cotton Textile Industrial relations board. Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers, will represent the employes of the wool industry on the board. Arthur Besse, chairman of the wool textile code authority, will serve temporarily as the representative of the employers of the wool industry until such time as the code authority selects its own representatives.

The chief labor complaints, resulting in the threats of a strike, concerned charges that the "stretch-out" in various mills was too heavy. Other problems discussed were inequalities in wages between employes of different plants.

General Tire Workers Tighten Picket Lines

Akron, O., July 5.—It is estimated that 1,500 pickets now surround the plant here of the General Tire and Rubber company.

Negotiations between union strikers and company officials reached a deadlock.

Plans to make a "nation-wide issue" of the strike were discussed by United Rubber Workers' officials, who charged that the company had "gone back on its word to raise wages to the level of other tire companies here."

Negotiations reached a deadlock when the company refused to discuss the strikers' demands "until interference with shipments, office force and executives is discontinued."

10,267,000 IDLE IN MAY, GREEN SAYS; BOSSES BLAMED FOR NOT CREATING JOBS

Millions of Families Are on Relief Rolls—Business Men Refuse to Recognize That Making Jobs and Wages for the Unemployed Is the Basic Element in Recovery Program.

Washington, July 5.—Although 10,267,000 were in the unemployed army during May, with 3,850,000 families on relief rolls, the business men of America continue their foolish practice of locking their plants and thus reducing to zero the purchasing ability of the jobless workers, declared William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his current statement on unemployment.

For the nation as a whole the federation's estimate shows that nearly 300,000 returned to work in May, with trade union reports indicating gains in employment during May and the first part of June.

Mr. Green stressed the fact business men generally persist in their backward policy of locking the millions of jobless out of opportunities for employment, thus throwing on the government all the work of relief.

"Men and women are still going back to work, although gains are not so rapid now as they were in the early spring," Mr. Green said. "Our unemployment figures for the country as a whole show that nearly 300,000 went back to work in May, and trade union reports for the first part of June show employment still gaining. Trade union weighted figures show 20.7 per cent of the membership unemployed in April, 20 per cent in May (revised) and 19.7 per cent in the first part of June (preliminary).

"Gradually workers are regaining the winter employment losses. Unemployment in industry is not yet back to the September, 1933, level, for 10,267,000 were out of work in May, compared to 10,108,000 last September.

Gain in Building Employment.

"Employment in building is beginning to increase, although gains are small; nearly 150,000 went back to work in April and May, but more than 1,400,000 are still without work. Small gains in May were quite general throughout industry. In factories, nearly 10,000 went back to work; farms, 42,000; mines, nearly 40,000; wholesale and retail trade, 28,000; roads, nearly 30,000; railroads, 45,000.

"For the 10,267,000 still without work in industry, the government is increasing its emergency work program. More than 115,000 were added to PWA payrolls in May, and the number on the work program of the relief administration has risen from 550,000 at the beginning of April to more than 900,000 at the end of May and 976,000 in mid-June; conservation camps have enrolled 16,000 more. In these three services more than 1,660,000 were employed in May, reducing those entirely without work to 8,600,000. The government emergency payroll in these services is over $80,000,000 a month.

"Need is greater among the millions unemployed than it was this time last year. In April, 1933, 4,475,000 families were on relief rolls; in April this year the figure was approximately 3,850,000, with about 750,000 on the ERA work program, or a total of 4,600,000.

Millions for Federal Relief.

"The fact that more than 10,000,000 are still without work in industry is a basic reason for our tardy business recovery. This problem deserves first attention from industrialists; it is not receiving the attention needed. Business men in general are taking no responsibility for these millions, making no general effort to get them back to work. The government alone is caring for them through emergency relief—this provides only a meager living for one-sixth of them."

Tables accompanying Mr. Green's statement showed the tremendous increase in the jobless army from January, 1930, to May, 1934.

The tables revealed that from 3,216,000 unemployed in January, 1930, the number has risen to 10,267,000 in May, 1934.

In June, 1930, the figure was 3,250,000; 6,841,000 in June, 1931; 11,853,000 in June, 1932; 12,204,000 in June, 1933, and 10,769,000 in December, 1933.

The figures for 1934 follow:

January	11,755,000
February	11,443,000
March	10,849,000
April	10,551,000
May	10,267,000
June (preliminary)	10,267,000

Local 192 has by the whole-hearted co-operation of every member and by the wonderful work of the various committees appointed by President Daugherty again demonstrated that they can really entertain their state organization. Particular mention should be made of the fine work of all committees and particularly the following:

Langley, Coppinger and Melvin, of the finance committee, raised the "jack." Earl Posey, of the entertainment committee, with the co-operation of his members, saw that the entertainment was of the best. G. D. Russ, chairman of the transportation committee, was on the job and had plenty of cars available, and Werndli, Phillips and Dangherty had the "eats" (the ladies' auxiliary did the work, most of it, but anyway the eats were there). And boy, oh, boy, did that refreshment committee function. Leverich, Gross and Pierce were there with the goods, and if you don't believe it ask any one who called at Room 109.

After adjournment, Chairman Russ, of the transportation committee, with the co-operation of Melvin and Carter, provided a sightseeing trip to Lookout mountain for Secretary Otte and the officers of the state federation which was enjoyed very much. George Forbes also assisted on this trip to the extent of furnishing transportation for the best looking girl at the convention and acted as chaperone on the trip—that is, he chaperoned the best looking girl.

Delegates and visitors were unanimous in saying that the convention just closed was the largest and best ever held by the state organization.

Jackson, Tenn., was selected for the next annual convention to be held July 4, 1935.

The secretary of Local 192 furnished the editor of The Labor World the wrong list of delegates to the state convention from Local 192. The following members were delegates to this convention: Charles Werndli, J. S. Kerley, Earl Posey, W. C. Carter, J. H. Daugherty and G. G. Grigsby. He regrets the error made and asks that the correct list be published.

Chattanooga Typographical union during which efforts were made to induce him to employ union craftsmen. Mr. McDonald told the committee that his employes would 'work any hours I see fit to designate and at any task I may require of them.'

"The business policies of Mr. McDonald are viewed with disfavor by working men and women of Chattanooga and vicinity. Union men and women prefer to trade with a man who is willing to pay his employes fair wages and work them reasonable hours.

"The working man has a right to enjoy life the same as the man for whom he works, but he can't get much enjoyment when he works long hours and receives low pay for his labor. If Mr. McDonald had his way the working man would have no time for anything except work and sleep, consequently he would need a wage sufficient only to purchase the bare necessities of life. But thank God we have a leader in Washington who sees things differently.

"Please accept this letter with the friendly intent in which it is written—not with a view toward criticism of your attitude, but with the object of giving you information about something with which you are evidently unfamiliar."

Former Head State Federation Passes

Thomas M. Gann, former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, died last Thursday at his home in Nashville, following a lingering illness. Funeral services were held Saturday.

Mr. Gann, a member of the United Mine Workers, was at one time President of District 19, having for many years made his home in Knoxville. He was active in trade union work until his health failed, and numbered hundreds of personal friends throughout the state.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Ethel Neely Gann; his daughters, the Misses Flora and Etta Gann; his sons, Hayes Gann and Floy and Claude Neeley, all of Nashville; three sisters, Mrs. Louisa Beene, of Chattanooga; Mrs. Martha Crest and Miss Amanda Gann, of Soddy, and three brothers, W. H. and B. H. Gann, of Hixson, Tenn., and J. L. Gann, of Nashville.

AYS TEACHERS NOT IN FAVOR OF SALES TAX

tanton E. Smith Denies Newspaper Reports.

ITES ACTION BY VARIOUS BODIES

rotests Against "Use of Schools as Screen for Drive" of Proponents.

Stanton E. Smith, president of Lo- 246, American Federation of achers, in a letter to The Labor orld takes umbrage at what he rms the "use of the schools as a reen for the drive to saddle a sales x on the backs of those with rela- ely small incomes," and denies wspaper statements that school achers of Tennessee favor such a x.

Mr. Smith declares basis for such tements is found in a resolution sed by a state teachers' organiza- n last April, and points out that thing is now being said of the fact at the resolution stated specifically ch a tax was favored only as a mporary emergency measure.

Local 246, as well as the American deration of Teachers, the Memphis achers' federation and other organi- ions are opposing the idea, he de- res, and offers the comment that w, if any, authorities on taxation any importance can be found who l defend the sales tax on any other und than it will bring in the ney."

Mr. Smith's letter follows:

July 9, 1934.

the Editor of The Labor World:

t is not true that all of the teach- of Tennessee favor the enactment a general sales tax, even for edu- ional purposes. This statement is de because of the statements re- ly appearing in the daily press officials of the two local depart- nts of education to the effect that educational forces of Tennessee backing the sales tax.

The Chattanooga-Hamilton County achers' association has consistently still does oppose the enactment of eneral sales tax for any purpose. rticularly do we protest against the of the schools as the screen for drive to saddle this tax on the ks of those with relatively small omes, especially as it has no basis the most defensible principle of ation, namely, the ability to pay.

The American Federation of Teach- as a national organization, is op- ed to the sales tax; the Memphis chers' union also opposes; the op- ition of the American Federation well known; and few, if any, au- rities on taxation of any impor- ce can be found who will defend sales tax on any other grounds n that it will "bring in the money." re is pretty general agreement ng the latter that the sales tax is inversion of the principle of abil- to pay and as such places the bur- on those least able to bear it.

lfred D. Buehler, associate pro- or of economics of the University Vermont, writes: "The general s tax, because it tends to be ab- ed by wage-earners, tends to r standards of living * * * Pro- ion is also affected by the gen- l sales tax, which reduces the de- d for various articles and serv- " e basis of the statement that the ers of Tennessee favor such a is the resolution passed at the ting of the Tennessee State Teach- association last April. Nothing is being said of the fact that the lution stated specifically that they red it as an emergency measure until the state constitution could amended as to legalize a state me tax or a similar form of tax. e schools do need financial sup- badly; the property tax is a bur- and does not distribute the tax fairly; but neither of these argu- ts is sufficient reason for the en- ent of a less defensible form of tion.

e sales tax, contrary to popular ion, is not a new invention. It used in ancient Egypt and Rome, in medieval Spain, and in France previous to the French Revolution. In each case it marked the decline of an empire or the end of a dynasty.

President Roosevelt by emphatically denouncing the scheme prevented the sales tax from being made a part of the financial program of the democratic party.

Harold M. Groves, an outstanding authority and professor of public finance at the University of Wisconsin, recently said: "To use the sales tax as a supplement to the property tax is to add a second regressive tax and a further burden to those already staggering under the load of the property tax."

Dr. Robert Murray Haig, president of the National Tax association, said: "To propose the substitution of general sales taxes for taxes on real estate as a measure of relief for the small man is an insult to intelligence and an affront to common sense."

In conclusion we would like to quote from the report of the Portland Teachers' union of Portland, Ore.: "It would seem that the duty of the public schools is to do their share in attempting to secure social and economic justice for the mass of the people. The question arises as to how teachers can have this objective in view and at the same time consistently support a tax that is as admittedly unjust as the sales tax," even though it might assure the more certain payment of their salaries. The answer is that the majority of the teachers of Chattanooga and Hamilton county do not support such a measure.

Sincerely yours,
STANTON E. SMITH,
President Local 246, American Federation of Teachers.

Times Editorial On Sales Tax Is Highly Commended

Central Body Instructs Secretary to Convey Appreciation to Morning Paper.

A recent editorial in the Chattanooga Times condemning a proposed sales tax was noted by Central Body in regular session Monday night, and a letter written the management of the morning paper, commending the sentiments expressed, was approved by the delegates. This letter, prepared by Secretary Cuthbert, while approving the editorial, expressed the opinion that the regular writer could not have composed the article, and asked to know the author.

"We feel certain in our own minds," the letter states, "that your regular editorial writer could not by the greatest stretch of the imagination have been capable of leaning toward the welfare of the so-called common people."

The letter follows:

July 9, 1934.

Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, II.,
Chattanooga Times,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Dear Mr. Ochs:

The editorial in this morning's Times concerning the sales tax deserves special notice from the working people of this city and vicinity. This is particularly true because editorials of the past in your paper have been consistently on the reactionary side and in favor of vested interests rather than in the interests of the [illegible].

While I have been instructed by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular session to convey to you its approval of this editorial, we would also like to ask of you who wrote it. We feel certain in our own minds that your regular editorial writer could not by the greatest stretch of the imagination have been capable of leaning toward the welfare of the so-called common people.

Yours truly,
T. R. CUTHBERT,
Secretary.

ATLANTA OFFICIALS A.B.C. CHAIN CORPORATION SPURN OFFERS OF LOCAL STRIKERS TO ARBITRATE

Regional Labor Board Reports Findings in Chattanooga Case. Strikes in Atlanta and Birmingham Plants of Wealthy Chain Not Yet Called—Renewed Assurances of Support Come to Chattanooga Workers on Strike in Protest Against Arrogant Attitude of "Big Bosses" of Company.

Refusal of the officials of the American Bakeries company to submit issues involved in the strike of Bakers and Salesmen at the local plant of the corporation to arbitration by the Atlanta regional board will necessitate appeal of the case to the national labor board, it was announced Thursday, and representatives of the Chattanoogans have written the national board asking what steps it will take in view of a finding of fact issued by the Atlanta board following two hearings before that body.

Chattanooga employes of the chain have been on strike for the past several weeks, but all overtures for a settlement under the terms of the national recovery act have been spurned by Atlanta officials of the corporation, and the local plant of the corporation remains practically idle, with sales of their product locally nil.

Efforts to prevent strikes in the Birmingham and Atlanta plants of the wealthy concern have so far proved successful, although it is stated that probabilities are these two branches will be tied up within the next few days. Local support for the Chattanoogans continues all that could be expected, evidences of a sympathetic interest in the cause of the workers being seen on every hand. Increasing interest, also, is being shown in the affair by surrounding communities, and assurances of sympathy are being received constantly from different sections.

Publication of facts regarding the "hard-boiled" attitude of the Atlanta officials of the wealthy corporation in last week's issue of The Labor World brought renewed offers of support during the past week, and disagreement with the uncompromising position of these "captains of industry" is more generally evident.

Members of the local unions involved and of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council are pointing to one paragraph in the findings of the Atlanta regional board which of itself it is claimed indicates the sound position of the strikers. This paragraph follows:

"The employes offered to submit the entire matter to the board for arbitration and final decision, but the employers refused."

Herman J. Schad, representing the international union, has addressed the following communication to the national labor board:

July 9, 1934.

National Labor Relations Board, Commerce Building, Washington, D. C.
Gentlemen:

The regional labor board in Atlanta, Ga., today handed down their fact-finding decision in the case of the American Bakeries company's plant at Chattanooga, Tenn., and their striking employes, members of Bakers' Union No. 25 and Bakery Salesmen's Union No. 549, of Chattanooga, Tenn., Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America.

The decision of the board is no doubt in your hands by this time, but I am enclosing a copy in order to avoid unnecessary delay and to facilitate matters.

The strike occurred on the company's refusal to deal with their organized employes; the men are on strike since May 27 and still out 100 per cent. They are willing to make a settlement, but in spite of all efforts of the board no agreement could be reached on account of the uncompromising attitude of the company in insisting on dealing with their employes. The company insists that it has not refused to bargain collectively with its employes, but the company has its own ideas of collective bargaining; the company wants to deal collectively on its side with individual employes, and this to my mind is an arbitrary, vicious distortion or interpretation of both the letter and spirit of the NRA; besides, the employes have been dealing with the company in that manner for years and have found that system unsatisfactory; therefore they have organized and want to deal with the company through their organizations in the future; but the company opposes this new departure and insists that such an innovation in collective bargaining is contrary to the time-honored policy of the American Bakeries company.

A copy of the decision of the board has been sent to the American Bakeries company, but, judging from their previous and present attitude, it is extremely doubtful if they will pay any attention to it, as they seem determined to starve their striking employes into submission and thereby destroy the organizations of their employes. The striking men, as already stated, intend to remain out 100 per cent until the company comes to reason and it would be criminal to permit the company to destroy such a unanimous spirit of solidarity.

Kindly let me know at your earliest convenience what action the national board will take, and if the company refuses to abide by the decision, what further action will be taken and how far the national board can go in enforcing its decision and what further steps will be taken to compel the American Bakeries company to come to an honorable adjustment with its striking men and their organizations.

Trusting this will aid in making the situation sufficiently clear, and hoping to hear from you soon, I am,

Respectfully,
HERMAN J. SCHAD,
International Representative,
B. & C. W. I. U. of A.

As the arrogance of the Atlanta officials of the wealthy chain corporation becomes more evident, determination of the Chattanooga workers to protect their interests grows stronger, it is said, and probabilities are that the local plant will remain practically closed until such time as the "big bosses" of the concern shall indicate a disposition to deal with their Chattanooga employes under the terms prescribed by the United States government through the national recovery act.

Machinists Would Query Candidates For Governorship

Seek Payment of Prevailing Wages to Mechanics in State Highway Garages.

A resolution originating in Rock City Lodge No. 154, International Association of Machinists (Nashville), calling upon the legislative committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor to question candidates for governor regarding payment of decent wages to mechanics in the state highway garages, was approved by Central Body Monday night, as follows:

"Resolved, That this local go on record as requesting the legislative committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor to send a questionnaire to all candidates for governor, asking their position as to the payment of decent wages to mechanics of all crafts, in the various state highway garages over the state, and that said wages amount to at least the prevailing wage rate paid mechanics in the vicinity of said

Ortwein New Chief Of Local Painters; Veterans Honored

Union Shows Preference for Old-Timers in Selection of Officials.

Preference for veterans is shown by Local 226, Painters, in the annual election of officers, which occurred last week, and the members of the official family are practically all men whose names are familiar to all local trades unionists.

M. H. Ortwein, new president, has been active in his local union as well as in Central Body for many years, and has served the latter organization as president several terms. Others placed in office have similar records, and it is apparent that affairs of Local 226 will be in good hands during the coming months.

The list follows:

President—M. H. Ortwein.
Vice-President—George Good.
Treasurer—J. Paul Sanders.

Will Not Give Up Efforts to Punish Held's Kidnapers

State and National Labor Bodies Determined to Mete Justice to Mob.

Refusal of a grand jury at Kingston to indict members of a mob which forcibly removed Fred Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, from a train at Harriman, maltreated and took him for a ride, threatening death to the union official, will not be accepted as final by the American Federation of Labor, the Hosiery Workers and the Tennessee Federation of Labor, according to opinions expressed by labor officials following the report of the grand jury.

Mr. Held said Thursday no stone will be left unturned to mete justice to the perpetrators of the crime, which he holds was incited by officials of the Harriman Hosiery mills, and the victim of the incident is in constant contact with national and state officials.

It was pointed out that representatives of the department of justice had

Central Body Asks Reconsideration Of State Committee

Holds No Indorsement Should Have Been Made in Gubernatorial Race.

Asking the nonpartisan committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods to withdraw its indorsement of Gov. Hill McAlister, Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night indicated a feeling that no indorsement should have been made in this race. Letter sent over the signature of Secretary T. R. Cuthbert states that "this council went on record that John McCall and Lewis Pope were both notorious in their labor records, and of course could not expect any labor man to vote for them." However, Gov. McAlister is described as "the lessor of three evils." and the committee is asked to state upon what grounds an indorsement was made instead of a simple statement of facts issued.

The letter follows:

July 9, 1934.

Mr. Paul J. Aymon, Chairman
Tennessee Federation of Labor
Non-Partisan Committee,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Dear Brother Aymon:

In its regular session the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council instructed me to convey to you as chairman of the Non-partisan committee a protest against the indorsement of Gov. Hill McAlister, and the request that your committee withdraw this indorsement and not indorse any candidate.

This council went on record that John McCall and Lewis Pope were both notorious in their labor record and of course could not expect any union man to vote for them. However, as far as labor in Chattanooga is concerned, Mr. Hill McAlister is the least of three evils, which of itself does not call for an indorsement of him by labor.

This council respectfully asks of your committee on what grounds was McAlister indorsed instead of simple statements of facts being made.

Fraternally, yours,
T. R. CUTHBERT,
Secretary.

Pay Tribute To Loyal Unionist

Tribute to the memory of Horace Embler, active member of Local 219, Papermakers, is paid in a resolution adopted by Central Body Monday night.

Mr. Embler, who passed away last Saturday after a brief illness from appendicitis, was one of the most active and loyal members of the recently-formed Papermakers organization, and had worked tirelessly to assist in gaining a substantial foundation for the local. He was of a jovial disposition, and numbered his friends by the hundreds. The sudden passing of Mr. Embler proved a genuine shock to members of organized labor who had been associated with him, and his loss will be keenly felt both personally and as an intelligent, forward-looking trades unionist.

Resolution of Central Body follows:

Whereas, since the successful organization of Papermakers' union, Local 219, Brother Horace Embler was one of the delegates sent to the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council to represent his local union, which he did faithfully and well; and,

Whereas, Brother Embler not only demonstrated himself as faithful and earnest in his trades unionism, but he endeared himself to everyone in our council as a man, generous whenever called upon to serve others, both in time and money; and,

Whereas, it has pleased God to take Brother Embler from us to a better place above, his illness being short and merciful; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, That in this manner we pay tribute to Brother Embler and extend to his family, his local union, and his many personal friends our expression of bereavement and sorrow.

T. R. CUTHBERT,
W. R. BARNEY,
M. H. ORTWEIN,
Committee.

WORKERS WILL HEAR ORATORY BY CANDIDATES

All Aspirants for Office Invited to Special Meeting.

SESSION OPEN TO UNION FOLKS ONLY

Impartial Hearing Will Be Given All Comers Monday Night at Central Body.

COMMITTEE TO HOLD SESSION FOR CANDIDATES

Poll tax and vote committees of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council has requested to announce that all candidates for the state legislature, both upper and lower houses, are asked to appear at Roosevelt hall, Market and Seventh streets, on next Wednesday evening, to answer questions regarding their various positions on matters in which the workers are interested.

It is announced that a very few minutes will be required for each of the legislative aspirants, and it is hoped that all will accept the invitation issued by the committee.

Monday night will be "candidates night" at Central Body. Following a custom of many years' standing, all aspirants for office, county, state or national, are invited to come before the union representatives and state their claims for suffrage of the workers.

The meeting will, as usual, be open to all union men, and the candidates will be allowed as much time as possible to present their cases.

Aspirants for United States senate, congress, state senate, lower house of the legislature and all county offices are expected to be present, and it is assured ample opportunity will be given, under the most favorable circumstances, to discuss the various issues of the campaigns.

For the benefit of those who are for the first time seeking public office, it is announced that respectful hearings are always granted, and no heckling or other untoward interference will be tolerated. Also, it is stressed that no collection will be taken, and nothing sold on the premises.

Due to the fact that the session will be strictly a labor meeting, and to the further fact that large crowds of trades unionists always appear to hear the speeches, it is announced, admission will be limited strictly to union members and candidates.

Roosevelt hall, where the meeting will be held, will accommodate several hundred people, and it is believed members of trades unions who wish to attend will all be comfortably seated.

The meeting will be called to order promptly at 7:30, and names of the guests will be drawn from a hat as the order of introduction.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What was the first declaration of the American Federation of Labor on convict labor?

A.—Plank 6 in the first platform (1881) demanded repeal of all laws permitting prison contract labor, which was denounced as a "species of slavery in its worst form."

Q.—When was the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers organized?

A.—Aug. 4, 1876. It was an amalgamation of various independent unions in the industry, including the United Sons of Vulcah, the Iron and Steel Roll Hands' union and the Nailers union.

Q.—Who was the first trade unionist to be a member of the cabinet of the president of the United States?

A.—The late William B. Wilson, first secretary of labor.

Every color absorbs a certain amount of light and reflects the rest. Telecolor measures the reflections and can detect color differences indistinguishable by the human eye. U. S. Intervention Needed

Conditions in the Imperial Valley of Southern California remain unchanged, agricultural employers there still refusing to permit their employes to organize. This condition has long made the valley notorious.

The policy and actions of the employers have repeatedly been denounced by representatives of the Federal Government and other investigators but the employers go right on denying the workers the rights of free speech, assemblage and organization. They have resorted to terrorism to maintain their autocratic rule and have not been deterred even by a Federal injunction.

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, Federal conciliator, went to the valley some weeks ago to investigate. At first he was inclined to side with the employers but further investigation has changed his attitude, though he has been able to accomplish little in restoring civil rights to workers.

"The lawlessness and intimidation," Gen. Glassford said of the events in the valley, "is directed not only against alleged communists, but also against these professional and business men of the community who by word or deed oppose the political aims of a small but powerful group, engaged in exploiting a 'red' hysteria for the promotion of its own interests. The immediate responsibility for action and results rests with the elected officials of Imperial Valley."

Apparently only strong Federal intervention will restore and protect the rights of the Imperial Valley workers. The elected officials have shown they will not protect the rights of citizens and they will have no ground for complaint if the Federal Government steps in and does what they should have done.

Does Mexico Face New Turmoil?

Mexican radicalism of the kind that flamed in support of Francisco I. Madero and toppled the old dictator, Porfirio Diaz, from power, is flaming again in the wake of the Mexican election which rolled up a tremendous plurality for the Calles party.

Antonio I. Villareal, defeated candidate, was one of the original revolutionists, never reconciled to the Calles policies. Pablo Gonzales, in exile in Texas, is another. Soto y Gama was one of the most extreme, an agrarian. Aurelio Manrique is of their type. These and others are reported gathering on the Texan border to plan rebellion. Villareal is not with them, but is reported under surveillance at his Monterey home.

If there is rebellion it probably will be sporadic. Making revolutions in Mexico isn't what it once was, when oil millions poured into many rebellious hands.

Calles, now reputed richest man in Mexico, seems secure in power and the revolutionary program has not been entirely abandoned by his adherents. Enough of it went by the boards, however, to leave many sorely dissatisfied and elections probably do not yet operate well enough to afford expression to minority views. Perhaps not even to majority views.

Cuba is in turmoil; the Gran Chaco embroils two nations; there are lesser outbreaks elsewhere. Latin America is not out of her woes, but she needs sympathetic understanding much more than interference. Fortunately, we don't "order out the Marines" the way we used to.

Denial of "Rights"

A. G. McKnight, NRA Director of Litigation, recently said that defenders of the Recovery Act might well stress some of the "rights" that the act denies. Politicians attacking the act on the ground that it invades the rights of citizens to forget or ignore the "rights" that it denies—"rights" that labor believes should be denied. Here they are, as outlined by Mr. McKnight:

"1. We will deny the right of industrial giants to wreck each other and cause national disaster.

"2. We will deny the right of children to be permanently stunted by laborious work in the days of their childhood.

"3. We will deny the rights of the master of industry to say that working men are mere chattels.

"4. We will deny the right to keep 10,000,000 of our rugged individual citizens permanently ragged."

BRICKAYERS, ELECTRICAL WORKERS, CARPENTERS, JOIN A. F. L. BUILDING TRADES DEPT.

Washington, July 12.—The International Union of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers; the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers have enrolled in the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, it was announced at the A. F. of L. headquarters here. All of the eligible national and international unions are now members of the department, officials stated.

RELIEF ROLL TOTALS LARGER THAN SAME TIME LAST YEAR

Washington, July 12.—The number of families on relief throughout the nation was larger on April 1 than at the same time in 1933, the department of commerce reports.

In its monthly survey of current business, reporting generally improved conditions in most sections of American business and industry, the department said:

"Notwithstanding the progress made in recent months in absorbing into industry a portion of the unemployed, the number without work remains large."

Uniform State Labor Laws May Result From New Compact Act

Washington, July 12.—The state compact act, signed by President Roosevelt on June 8, may lead to the making of pacts by states to adopt and enforce uniform labor and welfare laws. Possibilities of the act in this direction are now being studied by economists, sociologists, trade associations and labor organizations. The act reads:

"That the consent of congress is hereby given to any two or more states to enter into agreements or compacts for co-operative effort and mutual assistance in the prevention of crime and in the enforcement of their respective criminal laws and policies, and to establish such agencies, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective such agreements and compacts."

The significance of the act rests upon the fact that it applies to any law yith a criminal penalty. The definition of the penalty would vary according to states, but generally speaking a sentence of one year or more, or the alternative of a fine, is sufficient to make it a "criminal penalty." Labor laws are, therefore, included in the interpretation of the act. This may not have been indended by congress, but there it is!

The administration has for some time pondered the difficulties of enforcement of NRA codes and other laws passed as recovery measures. For some time there has been suggestion that the enforcement of the laws, especially those relating to labor, be delegated to the state governments. This was done in the case of the handicapped clause inserted in the codes as a standard provision and under which, by executive order, the state governments were to regulate exemptions for the subnormal group under rules laid down by the U. S. Department of Labor.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs through Mrs. Poole, president, comments on the act: "It points the way to state co-operation in other fields beside crime prevention—in the realm of public health and other phases of general welfare."

"This bill by its plan and philosophy moves in a direction distinctly opposite from the present tendency toward government by a great federal bureaucracy of a dependent people."

The constitution, act 1, section 10, reads: "No state shall without the consent of congress enter into an agreement or pact with another state." This has been a bar to state agreements to effect not only better enforcement of crime prevention, which is the primary objective of the act, but has also prevented states from getting together on other mutually desirable projects. The chief significance, therefore, of the act is that it constitutes an opening wedge toward further decentralization of government functions and may show the way out of the growing Washington bureaucracy.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Like some huge and more or less bungling mill, NRA has gone along grinding out the words "40 hours and 40 cents" like an endless and unimaginative refrain. Minimum wages and maximum hours. There has been a magnificent and absent-minded disregard of facts. Somebody put a record on the machine and let 'er play. That's the way it looks and that's the way it sounds.

The president asks whether anybody would like to go back to the old ways and the old conditions. The answer must be that nobody wants to go back, which in no way changes the fact that there could have been some refard for facts in the fixing of maximum hours and minimum wages, that there could have been twice the progress there has been and that NRA could have scored a 75 per cent record instead of something like a 50 record.

Time will come when people will wonder how some deputies who have served ever could have been appointed, much less continued in their jobs. Of course that judgment must be tempered by the fact that a great organization had to be thrown together quickly and that no perfect score could have been made. Nevertheless, NRA is suffering today from the work of some of its most trusted men who in the beginning worked toward and helped fix policies that now must be undone.

One brilliant record stands out among administrators. It is that of Maj. George L. Berry, man of labor, division chief. Intelligence and courage have marked his work. So, in a different field, with Edward F. McGrady, trouble-shooter of the highest order.

Brilliant records are needed to balance those not so good.

In Europe they have long talked about conservative American labor. Europe doesn't know half the story about American labor militancy.

Europe ought to have sent students to study the Pacific coast tidewater strike. Europe ought to have sent students to observe the courage of men willing and eager to face the issue with the powerful steel trust.

Europe ought to know American labor. To know about it is one thing, to know it is another. Europe has mostly just known about us.

Independence day has just passed, with the usual accompaniment and with little thought about freedom itself. Americans still possess and use the right of free speech, the right of free press and the right of free assemblage. While those rights exist freedom exists.

America remains a land of freedom and there isn't going to be any change. We will continue to edge along toward whittling away the power of boards of directors to exploit the poor and doom them to lives of servitude and poverty, but that was always power, not a right.

Too many of the high and mighty confuse power with rights. They have used power to smash the rights of those who had no power. When those who have had no power suddenly get some power and begin to exercise long denied rights, then comes the squawk.

Let them squawk. While freedom of speech, of the press and of assemblage are among us the masses of the people are in no danger.

Quebec Premier Blames Strikes On U. S. Unions

Official, Ignoring Sore Spot of Low Wages, Publicly Assails "Yankee" Labor Organizations for Causing Unrest.

Ottawa, July 12.—Annoyed by strikes in Quebec, Premier Taschereau of that province has suppressed La Vie Quvrire, and called on the Dominion immigration authorities to prevent American representatives of international unions entering Canada.

Successful strikes of lumberjacks and pulp and paper mill workers have been followed by a strike of 1,000 copper and gold miners in northern Quebec, which has so far resisted the efforts of the provincial police to smash it.

There has also been a considerable number of small strikes in various parts of Quebec.

Premier Teschereau publicly blames the "Yankee unions" for fomenting unrest, and declares that labor in Quebec is treated better than in any other country. The fact that a parliamentary committee has shown that thousands of men in scores of factories and stores are working for $6 a week, and even less, is not supposed to be responsible for discontent.

Last session of the Quebec legislature adopted legislation giving a preferred position to company unions masquerading as national unions, but this sort of paternalism is being rejected by many workers.

BRADY ATTACKS COMPANY UNION

Cleveland, O.—Col. George S. Brady, deputy administrator of the national recovery administration, believes that company unions are a menace to constructive industrial relations and holds the opinion that the workers must develop an organization equally as powerful as the code authorities if they are to secure and retain their rights under codes of fair competition established by authority of the national industrial recovery act.

These views were expressed by Col. Brady in an address prepared for the convention of the National Association of Purchasing Agents here, but in the absence of the deputy administrator it was read to the delegates.

"Company unions in the United States have usually merited the name given them by labor—Yellow Dog unions," Col. Brady said.

"No honest man who desires to see fair play and progressive planning would advocate abandonment by labor of the position gained by it until there is assurance of substantial organization to free labor from the domination of management."

ALABAMA MINERS STRIKE.

Birmingham, Ala.—Driven to desperation by low wages and poor working conditions, seven hundred coal miners at the Moss and McCormic shafts near here went on strike. Miners' union officials said that steps toward arbitration of the dispute would be taken immediately.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

TENNESSEE PRISON SHIRT PLANT HITS WOMEN WORKERS

Work Shirt Manufacturers Say Extension of Convict Work Is Social Menace.

Martin, Tenn., July 12.—The National Work Shirt Manufacturers' association voiced a vigorous protest against permitting the manufacture of work shirts by the Tennessee state penitentiary in open competition with the work shirt factories employing thousands of women in the state. If the prison operates it will mean cutting down production and possible shutdown of the local shirt factory, throwing hundreds of women out of employment.

In a statement expressing its opposition to the scheme, the manufacturers' association said, in part:

"The state of Tennessee has adopted a peculiar method of promoting the principles of the new deal and of standing behind the president in his campaign to increase employment. It has gone into the business of manufacturing shirts at the state penitentiary and selling them on the open market in competition with private manufacturers and with women workers in that industry. E. L. Pardue, who has charge of the prison industries under Dr. Cocke, the commissioner of institutions, has announced the purchase of several hundred thousand yards of cloth from the Alabama state prison, delivery of which will be made this week. This fabric will be made into work shirts at the prison by the convicts. It is said that Mr. Pardue expects to market the goods almost entirely within the state. The penitentiary will probably turn out about 2,000 to 3,000 dozen shirts a week.

"Sewing shirts is a woman's trade. One of the first principles of prison management is that the inmates should work at something that will enable them to earn an honest living when their terms expire. A convict who learns this trade has no chance whatever of using it when released.

"We question whether the citizens of Tennessee approve a project to put its convicts in competition with the girls and women of the state. Gov. McAlister and Lewis S. Pope are contenders at the approaching primaries for the nomination for governor. Perhaps it would be advisable to get from both of them a categorical 'yes' or 'no' as to what they think of Mr. Pardue's scheme."

BUSINESS MAKING NO GENERAL EFFORT TO PUT IDLE BACK TO WORK, LABOR HEAD DECLARES

Washington, July 12.—Business men in general are taking no responsibility for the 10,000,000 unemployed workers, making no general effort to put them back to work, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, declared in making public the federation's latest report on unemployment.

"The fact that more than 10,000,000 are still without work in industry is a basic reason for our tardy business recovery," President Green said. "This problem deserves first attention from industrialists; it is not receiving the attention needed."

President Green said that men and women are still going back to work, although employment gains are not so rapid now as they were in the early spring. He continued:

"Our unemployment estimate for the country as a whole shows that nearly 300,000 went back to work in May, and trade union reports for the first part of June show employment still gaining. Trade union weighted figures show 20.7 per cent of the membership unemployed in April, 20.0 per cent in May (revised) and 19.7 per cent in the first part of June (preliminary).

"Gradually workers are regaining the winter employment losses. Unemployment in industry is not yet back to the September, 1933, level, for 10,267,000 were out of work in May, compared to 10,103,000 last September. Employment in building is beginning to increase, although gains are small; nearly 10,000 went back to work in April and May, but more than 1,400,000 are still without work.

"For the 10,267,000 still without work in industry, the government is increasing its emergency work program. More than 115,000 were added to PWA payrolls in May, and the number on the work program of the relief administration has risen from 550,000 at the beginning of April to more than 900,000 at the end of May and 976,000 in mid-June; conservation camps have enrolled 16,000 more. In these three services, more than 660,000 were employed in May, reducing those entirely without work to 8,600,000. The government emergency payroll in these services is over $80,000,000 a month.

"Need is greater among the millions unemployed than it was at this time last year. In April, 1933, 4,475,000 families were on relief rolls; in April this year the figure was approximately 3,850,000, with about 750,000 on the ERA work program, or a total of 4,600,000. Federal payments for relief were $73,000,000 last April, compared to $150,000,000 for relief and ERA work program this year. The increased cost is due to greater need and to the improvement in relief payments."

DR. JOHN R. RYAN HITS LOW WAGES AND HIGH PROFITS

New York, July 12.—A strong condemnation of the policy which sets up maximum returns for those who own and control industry and low living standards for those who do most of the useful work characterized the address of Dr. John R. Ryan, professor of moral theology an industrial ethics at the Catholic university of Washington, D. C., before 1,500 teachers here. Dr. Ryan said:

"We are witnessing the nemesis of the capitalist philosophy. Ever since the industrial revolution, business men believed that they could pay the lowest wages and make the highest profits without interfering with the welfare of business.

"They believed that the process would go on automatically, that they could produce indefinite amounts of goods and that these quantities of goods would automatically find markets. They did not believe that it was necessary to give the masses enough money to buy the goods."

Advocates Living Wage.

Claiming that business men have flouted the right of labor to a living wage, Dr. Ryan said they would be better off today if they had applied that policy, adding:

"A few of them have, indeed, come to realize that good ethics is also good business.

"The most critical question confronting the capitalist system is whether the opinions of these few enlightened business men will prevail, or whether they will be ignored by the bourbons of industry.

"The new industrial system, the new economic society, will occupy a middle ground between capitalism and communism, between individualism and socialism."

HOURS EXEMPTION TO RECOUP STRIKE LOSSES DENIED MILLS

Washington, July 12.—Forty-one mills in the knitted underwear industry in the Philadelphia area have been denied by the National Recovery Administration the privilege of working their employes 14 hours a week above the 40 hours prescribed by the code for that industry in order to make up the productive time lost during a 38-day strike last spring. It was announced that H. O. King, division administrator, had refused to grant their application for a temporary exemption from the hours provision of the code.

The applicants had asserted that, coming as it did, at a peak season when the industry was being hard driven to meet the requirements for demands for sports wear, summer dresses and bathing suits, the strike had the effect of throwing all the mills far behind with their orders. They claimed that the mills are not equipped with sufficient machinery, nor is there enough available skilled workers to handle the extra load.

In denying the applications, which were endorsed by the code authority, the administration has adhered to the general rule that it is against policy to grant hours in excess of code provisions because of shut-downs due to industrial disputes. It was held that the settlement of such disputes by discussion rather than by strikes should be encouraged and that exemptions designed to minimize for either party the unfortunate consequences of strikes are not in accord with sound policy.

FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Let the Record Speak!

Hon. Thomas S. Myers,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

My Dear Mr. Myers:

I feel it is only fair to you to express my appreciation, as legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, for your fine co-operation with us in endeavoring to pass laws for the benefit of the masses.

As a member of the Tennessee legislature of 1913 you evidenced a splendid spirit with reference to our problems and supported our program 100 per cent. My associations with you were most pleasant and satisfactory at all times.

May I wish for you continued success in your political aspirations, as well as heartiest personal greetings.

Yours very truly,
DAVID HANLY,
Legislative Chairman,
Tennessee Federation of Labor.

I appreciate beyond words the splendid assurances of co-operation from Chattanooga Unionists, and solicit your continued support and influence.

MORE ABOUT SALES TAX

upon income and inheritance taxes. The removal of tax exemptions from all securities and income was also urged.

"We are quite willing to surrender our tax exemption privilege along with other citizens of the nation, as a means to overcome this anti-social feature of our tax laws," the teachers, who are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, said.

The convention declared the sales tax violates the principle of ability to pay and claimed that it takes an unfair share of the workers' earnings, especially in the realm of food and clothing.

Miss Selma M. Borchardt, of Washington, legislative representative of the teachers' federation, declared the public schools are a "vicious part of the spoils system" and urged that teachers get into politics to take the schools out of politics.

"Tenure, adequate pay, pensions can be secured only by articulate political effort of the teachers exercising their rights and assuming their duties as citizens," she said.

"Congress has given more to asphalt roads than to the roads of childhood because asphalt roads can maintain a better lobby than the children can."

Black-Draught For Dizziness, Headache Due To Constipation

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught several years and find it splendid," writes Mr. G. W. Holley, of St. Paul, Va. "I take it for dizziness or headache (due to constipation). I have never found anything better. A short while ago, we began giving our children Syrup of Black-Draught as a laxative for colds and little stomach ailments, and have found it very satisfactory." ... Millions of packages of Thedford's Black-Draught are required to satisfy the demand for this popular, old reliable, purely vegetable laxative. 25¢ a package. "Children like the Syrup."

TEXTILE STRIKERS AIDED BY UNITED STATES FUNDS

Southern Mill Owners Refuse to Reinstate Union Members and Ban Conciliation Efforts.

Greenville, S. C., July 12.—Textile mill owners here are outspoken in their opposition to the use of federal funds for the support of strikers and their families in three cotton communities of the Piedmont section pending futile efforts at the settlement of the controversies which caused the walk-outs.

The federal government takes the position that destitution must be relieved regardless of its cause, and that if strikers lack funds for the support of themselves and those dependent upon them the federal government will take care of them.

"There are 900 workers at Piedmont Manufacturing company, 650 at Belton mills and 275 at the Victor-Monaghan plant at Walhalla on strike. The workers have been idle for over a month and efforts of conciliators to bring labor and managements together have failed thus far.

It was understood that the management of the Piedmont Manufacturing company had issued an ultimatum to a committee of strikers that the strikers could return to work when and only when they wish to return at the terms as of before the strike. The management refused to allow five discharged United Textile Workers members to be reinstated and also refused to grant other requests of strikers.

"Strikers at Belton mills have been unable to get a hearing before the management, although they said they were willing to return to meet owners half way."

Railway Pension $90,000,000 Fund Will Retire 100,000 Employes the First Year

Cleveland, O., July 12.—The last step in perfecting a nation-wide pension system for millions of railway employes was taken on June 30, when President Roosevelt at Washington signed the legislation on this subject enacted by the recent session of congress.

In commenting on the law, Alexander F. Whitney, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who retired as chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, said:

"The pension act is the finest piece of railroad legislation since the eight-hour day was achieved in 1916.

"Railroad men feel that they have obtained two very wonderful concessions in the wage restoration and the pension legislation. The first increases our purchasing power by $4,000,000 a month, and on the basis of May payrolls, will mean an increase of $16,000,000 monthly by next April.

"The pension law, which becomes effective in ninety days, will permit the retirement of 100,000 men this year alone. Not only will this take care of the men who have broken down in railroad service, but it will help the unemployment problem by elevating the young man who is looking for the opportunity to work."

The pensions legislation provides for deduction of 2 per cent from workers' salaries and 4 per cent from carriers' payrolls to set up a fund which is expected to consist of at least $90,000,000 a year.

This fund will be administered by a three-man commission to be appointed by the president. One commissioner will be selected from railroad labor, one from management and the third will represent the public.

Men will be eligible for retirement upon reaching the age of 65, completion of thirty years' service with a carrier, or for disability. The amount of their pension will depend upon their previous earnings, but is not to exceed $120 a month or more than two-thirds of their average salary.

Mr. Whitney explained that many of the carriers have had retirement pension systems of their own, but the new legislation creates a universal method taking in all carriers.

Southern Hosiery Mill Forces Workers to Sign "Yellow Dog"

Valdese, N. C.—The "yellow dog contract" is again being used as a means of frightening workers into relinquishing their right to become members of a labor union. The Waldensian Hosiery mill here, which closed down twelve weeks ago when the workers organized, has forced its employes to sign a two-typewritten-page "yellow dog contract" in order to get their jobs back.

R. O. Huffman, president of the Southern Hosiery Manufacturers' association, is also a large stockholder in the Waldensian mill, reports Harry Hogan, representative of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Apparently this move of the Waldensian mill is part of a concerted plan against the union by the southern employers' organization.

The United States department of labor is investigating the situation at the Waldensian mills.

Musicians Plan Picnic for Sunday

George Rogers, president of Local 80, Musicians, announced Thursday that plans are complete for a picnic-outing under auspices of the local to be held at Lookout Lake next Sunday, beginning early morning and continuing throughout the day.

"What's the program?" a representative of The Labor World asked.

"Oh, a little beer, a lot of sandwiches, some games and a general get-together and good time," the prexy replied.

Further than that, deponent saith not.

3,000 LABOR DISPUTES ADJUSTED

More than 3,000 labor disputes, affecting two million employes, have been amicably adjusted by the national labor board since its creation last August. This is a remarkable record, in view of the rapid shift to entirely new relationships between labor and management, fostered under NIRA.

One thing we are certain of, the strike of the onion pickers out in the west will not be broken up with tear gas bombs.

Picture Operators Indorse Tom Turner

Local 259, Moving Picture Operators, has indorsed the candidacy of Tom Turner, of Local 415, Barbers, for constable in the First civil district. The following letter explains the position of the local:

Mr. R. M. Cooke,
Editor Labor World,
City.

Dear Sir and Brother:

This is to notify you that Local 259, at our last regular meeting, went on record as indorsing the candidacy of Brother Tom Turner, member of Local 415, Barbers, for the office of constable in the First civil district, and we believe Brother Turner is entitled to the support of all union men and women.

Trusting you will publish this letter in The Labor World,

Fraternally yours,
C. E. CURLE,
Secretary, Local 259, Moving Picture Machine Operators.

Tom Hall Better After Bad Attack

Tom Hall, veteran member of Lodge 1450, Machinists, who suffered a severe attack some ten days ago which necessitated a period in Erlanger hospital, has sufficiently recovered to return to his home in St. Elmo, and was reported Thursday morning as "feeling fine."

Scores of friends of the old-timer will be pleased to learn that he is rapidly recovering, and the hope will be general among trades unionists that he "snaps out of it" completely within a short time.

GULFPORT STRIKE ENDED.

Gulfport, Miss.—The longshoremen's strike here has been settled with this schedule of wages: 60 cents an hour between 7 a.m. and 4 p.m; 75 cents an hour for all other hours between 4 p.m. and 7 a.m.; overtime of more than eight hours, 90 cents an hour. The former scale was 50 cents an hour and 60 cents for overtime.

made an investigation of the affair, and upon their report will depend what action, if any, will be taken by the federal government. It was believed possible that the railroad company may prosecute the kidnapers, and position taken by attorneys for the road may shape the nature of the next step.

In the meantime, the struggle between the United States government and T. Asbury Wright, attorney for the mill, continues, with the mill closed and the government apparently proceeding as usual. Small guns of the mill barons and their backers are being turned more and more bitterly on the administration, but so far as can be determined the fire has apparently been somewhat widely scattered, as Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, is planning a vacation with reference to the situation in the East Tennessee mill town.

HARRIMAN MILL OWNERS CONDEMNED BY JOHNSON

Blame for the labor disputes whirling around the Harriman Hosiery mills, and the closing of the mills by the company officials was thrown squarely on the shoulders of the mill owners by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, in a telegram to the mayor of Harriman. The telegram read:

"The company states that no new employes have come in from a distance of twenty-five miles, yet it refuses an auditor to check the last payroll and clear it from such cases.

"Second, the company refuses to spread employment, one of the keystones of NIRA.

"The company has tentatively agreed on all other points. Added acceptance of these two points will restore the Blue Eagle immediately and place NRA aggressively behind the company in an attempt to build back its payroll to a point where the people of your town will enjoy the benefits of their American citizenship."

What Helen, age 2, thinks about ELECTRIC WATER HEATING

"I don't know what's come over this family. Everybody seems so much happier . . . particularly me. All this week Mother has had more time to play with me. Daddy's been keeping those bristly whiskers of his shaved off—so I'm not all scratched up any more. My clothes are cleaner and sweeter, and my bath is always nice and warm. It must be that new electric water heater that's brought this change about!

"If it is . . . I'm for it 100%. I don't know what it looks like nor how it works. I don't know what Mother and Dad mean about an all-electric home, either, but if it's as much cheaper as they say it it, maybe I can have some more nickels for my bank."

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

AYMON DEFENDS INDORSEMENT OF GOV. McALISTER

ommittee Chairman Replies to Central Body.

EVIEWS RECORDS OF POPE, McCALL

eclares Action Believed for Best Interest of State's Workers.

Nonpartisan Campaign Committee the Tennessee Federation of La- and the Railroad Brotherhoods in- sed the record of Gov. Hill Mc- ster only after very careful con- eration of all the facts, according a letter written Friday by Paul J. mon, chairman, in answer to a test of Chattanooga Central Body inst that action.

The committee, Mr. Aymon says, er reviewing the records of three didates for the governorship, ached the identical conclusion ich your Central Body expressed— t neither Mr. Pope nor Mr. Mc- l is entitled to or should receive support of working people of this te."

The committee was not unmindful, chairman declares, of the fact t Gov. McAlister has not always n in thorough accord with the nessee workers, but the commit- "found many things which tended overbalance any unfavorable poli- which he may have advocated."

further, the letter says, "the gov- r is being charged with responsi- y for certain policies and activi- which are purely functions of the e legislature, and over which his e has no control whatever."

Chairman Aymon contends that the mittee is charged with the duty advancing the cause of the work- on the political field, and acted the sole purpose of protecting best interests of labor.

In consideration of the unfavor- records of both Mr. Pope and McCall, as was so well expressed your Central Body," the letter de- es, "together with the many fa- able points in the record of Gov. Alister, this committee felt there nothing left to do but advise working people of the state to port the governor in his present e."

follows, in full:

Mr. T. R. Cuthbert, Secretary hattanooga Trades and Labor ouncil, hattanooga, Tennessee.

ear Brother Cuthbert:

Your letter of July 9, inform- g me of the action of Chatta- oga Trades and Labor council criticizing unanimous action the Non-Partisan Political ampaign Committee of the Ten- ssee Federation of Labor and e Railroad Brotherhoods, in is committee's indorsement of e record of Gov. Hill McAlister, d asking that this indorsement withdrawn, has been care- lly considered.

In reply thereto, I wish to ad- e that the nonpartisan com- ittee, with the sole purpose of otecting the best interests of e working people of this state, regular session at Nashville on ne 30, took up, among other ngs, the question of the guber- torial race, and after very care- consideration of the public cords of three candidates for high and powerful office, ached the identical conclusion ich your Central Body ex- ssed—that neither Mr. Pope r Mr. McCall was entitled to should receive the support of working people of this state.

The committee was not and is unmindful of the fact that v. Hill McAlister has advo- ed and put into effect certain icies with which the labor vement of Tennessee is not in orough accord. However, in fully reviewing his record we nd many things which tended far overbalance any unfavor- le policies which he may have ocated. Furthermore, it was ught out in the committee's cussions that the governor is ng charged with certain poli- and activities which are ely functions of the state leg- ature, and over which his office has no control whatever. One of the most favorable activities of the present administration which were brought out in the committee's discussions was the contrast of policies with the previous administration respecting the use of state troops in labor controversies. For instance, when Gov. McAlister assumed office the state militia was in charge in the Wilder field, where coal miners were struggling against autocracy and un-American conditions. After an investigation of this situation by the commissioner of labor and others on the governor's staff these troops were immediately withdrawn, and it is a matter of more or less common knowledge that repeated requests have since been made for state troops from various sections of the state where labor troubles threatened, and have been firmly refused by the governor.

In consideration of the unfavorable records of both Mr. Pope and Mr. McCall, as was so well expressed by your Central Body, together with the many favorable points in the record of Gov. McAlister, this committee felt that there was nothing left to do but advise working people of the state to support the governor in his present race.

This committee, as you know, is composed of the legislative representatives of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods, and each and every member is charged with the duty of advancing the cause of organized labor in the political field, as well as in industrial matters. We feel that we have acted in the best interests of all workers, and felt that our action may have prevented a division of thought and unified the ballots of the workers.

We hope that this explanation will be satisfactory to the Chattanooga Central Body, and that your request for withdrawal of the indorsement of Gov. McAlister will be rescinded at your next meeting.

With kindest regards and best wishes,

Sincerely and fraternally yours,
Nonpartisan Campaign Committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods.

PAUL J. AYMON,
Chairman.

Central Body To Hear Candidates Monday Night

All Aspirants Invited to Appear Before Workers at Roosevelt Hall.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will be host Monday night to all candidates for public office before the primary of Aug. 2, and it is expected a capacity crowd will be present at Roosevelt Hall to hear the claims of the office-seekers for support of the organized workers.

Through error, it was announced in last week's issue of The Labor World that the meeting would be held on last Monday, but this was corrected through the daily press and other means.

The entire session will be turned over to the visitors, and each will be given as much time as possible to present their views, and will be granted the floor to "point with pride or view with alarm" without hindrance, it is promised.

The meeting will be called to order promptly at 7:30, and it is believed practically every candidate in the races will take advantage of the opportunity to discuss his or her opinions with the workers.

MEATCUTTERS CALL MEETING

A called meeting for all local Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen was issueud this week, for the purpose of reorganizing a local union. Union and non-union workers are urged to be present at Roosevelt Hall on Tuesday, July 24, at 7:30. A representative of the international union will be present, it is announced, to advise the local workers.

The Meat Cutters formerly had one of the best organized and most effective locals in Chattanooga, and it is hoped the organization to be formed next Tuesday night will include all eligible men in the city.

CHAIN BAKERY CHARGED WITH GROSS VIOLATION NATIONAL RECOVERY ACT

Chattanooga Strikers Against Wealthy Corporation Tell Represetative Story of Efforts to Induce Officials to Recognize Federal Law—Atlanta Bosses Continue Arrogant Attitude, and Local Plant Remains Practically Closed. Public Support of Chattanoogans Remains Almost 100 Per Cent.

Chester M. Wright, editor of International Labor News Service, will take the case of the Chattanooga workers forced on strike by the American Bakeries company before the national labor board, according to information given The Labor World Thursday by spokesmen for the two organizations battling the wealthy chain baking corporation for recognition.

In a communication signed by President Sims and Secretary Gentry, released to The Labor World, Mr. Wright is given a history of the local trouble, which for the past eight weeks has kept the Chattanooga plant of the chain practically closed while the powerful corporation has left no stone unturned in its efforts to break the organization of bakers and salesmen.

The Chattanooga public, however, including merchants, restaurant owners and others who dispense bread and cakes, has maintained remarkable interest in the troubles forced upon the local workers, and distribution of American Bakery products in the city and surrounding territory has been and is practically stopped.

Discharge of F. H. Sisson, former manager of the corporation's Chattanooga plant, is recalled in a review of the situation sent Mr. Wright, and opinion is expressed that Mr. Sisson, although "employes were well aware of his excellent qualities as a manager," was discharged by the corporation because he had recommended that the chain's officials deal collectively with the Chattanooga workers.

Walter G. Locke, who succeeded Mr. Sisson as manager of the local plant, is declared to have presented an entirely different attitude from that which allegedly cost Mr. Sisson his job, and his manner is described as "brusque, and never varying from the company's attitude of ignoring the issue."

The letter to Mr. Wright reviews the issues of the strike, and recalls the arrogant attitude of officials of the chain corporation in their refusal to deal with their employes through representatives of their own choice.

Offer of the strikers, at the Atlanta regional labor board hearing, to submit the entire matter to arbitration, is recalled, and the company's blunt refusal, through its officers in Atlanta, to agree to such a course is pointed out to the labor official.

"In conclusion," the letter states, "we again say that the refusal of the company to deal with the two locals is a very clear violation of the national recovery act."

The strike situation stands today exactly as it did when the workers walked out, spokesmen for the two unions said. There has been no indication of a weakening on the part of the Atlanta officials of the chain in their determination to break the organization, it was explained.

Situation in Atlanta and Birmingham, where strikes have been threatened, is unchanged, and it is hoped that employes of the American chain in those cities will not be compelled to close the plants there.

The local unionists' letter to Mr. Wright follows:

Mr. Chester Mr. Wright,
Carpenters Building,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Sir and Brother:

Under date of July 12, 1934, we are in receipt of a letter from William Green, suggesting that since you will represent us in our relations with the national labor board, that we give you a complete summary of the case of the American Bakeries company versus its striking employes. In regard to this case we may state as follows:

The organization (Bakers and Confectionery Workers Local No. 25) was installed in July, 1933. Its members who were employed by the American Bakeries company at its plant in this city encountered little or no opposition to their organizing. The American Bakeries company had signed the president's re-employment agreement at its first opportunity.

In October, 1933, Local 25 appointed a committee to present to the management a tentative agreement which was substantially the same as that herewith enclosed. The manager of the Chattanooga plant, Freeman H. Sisson, courteously received the committee but stated that he could not commit himself on the company's attitude toward such an agreement. However, he promised to get in touch with officials of his company and give us their attitude on this matter and arranged that a conference should be held for this purpose. The committee called back not once but many times at approximately two-weeks' intervals, up until the discharge of Mr. Sisson, which took place about April 1, 1934. However, the officials of the company had never made any statement whatsoever, evidently trusting that their employes would lose interest or lack the energy to push the matter. The abovementioned discharge of Mr. Freeman H. Sisson was looked upon by the employes as a very unfriendly gesture by the company since the employes were very well aware of his excellent qualities as a manager. In fact the employes were convinced that the only reason for his discharge was that he had recommended at four different times that the company sign such agreement.

With the advent of Mr. Walter G. Locke as manager a very different attitude was apparent to the committees which called on him. His manner was brusque, but he never varied from the company's attitude in ignoring the issue.

Seeing that nothing was to be accomplished by their previous tactics, on May 27, 1934, all the employes, both the bakers and salesmen (who belonged to Local 549, Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, which local was installed in April, 1934) went out on strike.

The company replied by seeking an injunction in federal court to so curtail the activities of the strikers as to force them to give up. A copy of the injunction as granted is herewith enclosed. Possibly there may be something of value to be found in the transcript of the hearing, but we do not have enough funds on hand to obtain such a transcript.

Because the refusal of the company to deal collectively is in direct contradiction with Section 7-A of the national recovery act, we filed a complaint with the regional labor board of Atlanta and received a hearing on June 2. The board withheld any opinion at this time, hoping that the matter might be settled in Atlanta without sending it before the national board. The regional board suggested that it should adjourn for the company and the strikers to attempt to adjust their differences. In accordance with this suggestion a conference was held in Chattanooga between representatives of the company and the strikers. No progress could be made at this conference because the company insisted that it was not obliged to deal with the two locals mentioned as collective bargaining agencies of the strikers. Subsequently, the board held a further hearing at which the strikers offered to accept arbitration of the board but the company refused.

In conclusion, we again say that the refusal of the company to deal with the two locals is a very clear violation of the national recovery act. In Atlanta the board attempted to effect reconciliation, but while the strikers and the company were able to find agreeable terms for a contract the company wished to make this contract with four of its employes. The employes consider such a contract foolish in the extreme and only an effort to evade the point. We are certain that a copy of the hearings in Atlanta will be most valuable, since the attitude of the company is clearly expressed. We are certain that you understand the full significance of our fight. The tremendous importance of a successful climax is easily apparent. The bakers of the south are all watching the results anxiously. We will be glad to furnish any further information.

Unionist Drowned In Local Creek

Following report of the tragic death of Ulysses J. King, member of Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, is supplied by a committee from that organization:

Ulysses J. King, 23, of 3211 Campbell street, was drowned Tuesday when the current of Chickamauga creek carried him from the mouth of the creek into the Tennessee river. King was not an expert swimmer, and he sank in fifteen feet of water after being carried by the current out into the rivver. The body was recovered two hours later by Ebb Denham, Coroner Charles Epperson and ambulance attendants. Mr. King was a member of a fishing party and was not missed by fellow swimmers until after he sank. The victim was a part time employe of the News and was employed by the Browning Hosiery mill. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances King; three brothers, Prince, Theodore and Earl King; two sisters, Mrs. Ethel Forrest and Miss Katherine King. Funeral services were held from the East Chattanooga Church of God, with the Rev. Wm. Ellis officiating. Interment in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. King was an active member of the union and will be missed by his friends. Branch 53 expresses their deep sympathy for the family.

Carpenters Install New Officials At 'Get-Together' Meet

F. H. May Named President. New Faces Seen in Official Family Local 74.

Local 74, Carpenters, has installed newly-elected officers, and at an enthusiastic session of the organization the future of these workers was discussed and a general pledge of co-operation was made, according to members of the local.

F. H. May was named president, and among the official family are several who are beginning their first terms as officers of the union.

The list follows:

President—F. H. May.
Vice-President—H. L. Overturf.
Financial Secretary—O. B. Davis.
Recording Secretary—W. H. Snelling.
Treasurer—R. L. Malone.
Warden—Fred Harden.
Conductor—Leonard Cordell.
Business Agent—A. V. Cordell.
Executive Board—J. L. Carpenter, C. W. Smith and A. V. Cordell.

Brother J. H. Pratt was re-elected as trustee as his term was the one to expire.

Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council are T. S. Rose, J. L. Carpenter, R. L. Malone, F. H. May, A. V. Cordell and C. W. Smith.

"Expressions of regret were heard that it was necessary to lose the services of such veterans as J. L. Carpenter and Z. B. Bender," a spokesman for Local 74 told The Labor World, "but the Carpenters are pleased that these two have been called to larger fields and are sure they will give good account of themselves in their respective positions.

"Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting and the future of Local 74 was discussed with all pledging faith, loyalty and service.

"The Carpenters have not made as rapid strides in gaining new members as some of the other crafts, due to the nature of their work, the examinations covering several classifications and only men able to pass are admitted.

"We are steadily getting in the better mechanics and in due time will be able to report all are in."

Brewery Workers Elect Officers

Roy Lee, veteran member and official of Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, was named president of that organization at the annual election held at last regular session of the union.

Other officers are:

Vice-President—George Irvin.
Financial Secretary—Richard Burkes.
Recording Secretary—E. D. Fisher.
Treasurer—Leo Lee.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Bob Parker.
Trustees—Ed Steiner, Victor Divers and Tom Ellis.

Delegates to Central Body, all re-elected, are: Roy Lee, Leo Lee, Paul J. Aymon, Ed Steiner and W. F. Strickland.

John J. Manning Passes Away

Washington, July 19.—John J. Manning, veteran trades unionist and for many years secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Trades department, American Federation of Labor, died early on July 17 at his residence, 4016 Twelfth street, N. E., Washington. Mr. Manning was one of the best known trade union executives in the United States and had hosts of warm friends throughout the nation.

Boilermakers Boost Cummings

Editor The Labor World:

The membership of this local very kindly requests you to print the following letter in your next issue of The Labor World:

July 13, 1934.

The members of Lookout Lodge, Local No. 14, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America, at a regular meeting held July 13, 1934, unanimously indorsed the Hon. Will Cummings for county judge in the election to be held Aug. 2, 1934.

PAINTERS PLAN PICNIC-OUTING AT LOCAL PARK

All-Day Program Set for Next Friday.

BASEBALL GAME ONE BIG FEATURE

Carpenters and Painters to Vie for Honors on Warner Diamond.

Committee arranging for the 1934 edition of "Painters' Day" announces that everything is in readiness for the event, which will be staged at Warner park next Friday, and, as usual, will be an all-day affair, with "something doing" every minute of the time from 10 a.m. until late evening.

The annual picnic-barbecue of Local 226 has for years been looked forward to with much anticipated pleasure by thousands of citizens, and throngs of men, women and children always enjoy the outings.

All paint and paper houses and sign shops in the city will close for the day, and, of course, no member of the crafts will work.

At 12 noon the barbecue feast will be served, and an elaborate menu is scheduled for the unionists and their guests.

Feature of the athletic events will be a baseball game between the Painters and Carpenters, and if too many of the old-timers listed in the line-ups don't fall out, the competition promises to be keen. Already both teams are practicing, and each is predicting slaughter for the other.

The line-ups are announced as follows:

Painters: C. W. Weidner, cf.; H. G. Hicks, 3b.; John Smith, 1b.; M. H. Ortwein, rf.; Forest Weidner, lf.; P. P. Thurston, 2b.; C. H. Thurston, ss.; Frank Miller, c.; Erskin Mabee, Bill Shores, Roosevelt Reed, p.; W. J. Wallace, utility.

Carpenters: O. B. Davis, cf.; H. V. Cordell, 3b.; Fred Hardin, 1b.; W. H. Snelling, rf.; Lon Ault, lf.; L. L. Cordell, 2b.; Chas. Daugherty, ss.; L. R. Cordell, c.; Harold Brown, J. A. Bowman, F. E. McArthur, p.

Umpires: Charles Leonard and J. G. Burkes.

Field contests and games which start at 10 o'clock include a footrace for boys from 6 to 10 years; for girls from 6 to 10; men's footrace, from 25 to 50; girls' footrace from 12 to 20; women's footrace from 25 to 50; pinning the tail on the donkey; standing jumping contest for men 20 to 60; running jumping contest for boys 10 to 15; beauty contest for girls of all ages.

The afternoon program, beginning at 1:30, will begin with a drawing for the feature prize, and will include horseshoe pitching contests for men and women. The baseball game will be called at 2:30.

Really worthwhile prizes, it is announced, have been secured for all winners, and competition will doubtless be keen from start to finish.

TEXTILE WORKERS ENFORCE CODE

Elizabethton, Tenn. — The drive here to enroll all textile workers in the United Textile Workers' union is receiving a fine response, according to President J. C. Lancaster of Local No. 2207. The present membership of the local is nearly 500, with new enrollments constantly taking place.

"We are working with the plants of the American Bemberg corporation and the North American Rayon corporation," Mr. Lancaster said. "We are primarily interested in relieving unemployment by sticking to the NRA codes of fair dealing. It is our purpose to stamp out the tendency of a man who has a regular job from working at other or part-time jobs, and keeping some one else from being employed. There are too many men out of work and walking the streets now."

THREAD WORKERS STRIKE.

Fall River, Mass.—Demanding the closed shop, employes of the Kerr mills of the American Thread company went on strike here. Union officials said 1,500 persons were out.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What great international labor organization has recently moved its headquarters to Washington, D. C.?

A.—The United Mine Workers of America.

Q.—Who said: "The problem of the labor movement is to protect those who work against those who desire to exploit and to give them constantly better opportunities for life and work?"

A.—Samuel Gompers.

Q.—When were factory inspectors first appointed in the United States?

A.—In 1867, in Massachusetts, which passed a law generally regarded as the first factory legislation in this country.

What Next!

The London Daily Herald reports that three nations are testing an invisible smoke "which can stall airplane engines and be hung in the sky as a barrage against invaders." The Herald says that during recent trials a whole squadron of aircraft was forced to land through engine failure. The invisible smoke is said to consist of solid particles which are drawn into the motor through the carburetor and upset its functioning.

More About Wage Differentials

An example of the gross unfairness of a wage differential based on geographic lines as between north and south was shown by an incident that occurred at the recent convention of the International Oil Workers' union at Fort Worth.

Two delegates got into a conversation about the cost of living. One was from Illinois, the other from west Texas. They compared notes on the prices of clothes, caps, shoes and gloves. The Texas man, against whom the differential discriminated, readily demonstrated he was paying much higher prices than the Illinois man.

The wives of these workers were drawn into the conversation and the first comparison, that of the price of bacon, of a certain grade if not brand, showed that while the Illinois woman was paying 13 cents a pound for it the Texas housewife was paying 28 cents a pound for the same product. The prices of other foodstuff ran as high and the discrepancy as wide and this held all down the line of the cost of living.

All this because the bright agent of some major oil company saw a chance to chisel the southern workers by bringing in the old idea first fostered by the textile barons that the cost of living was lower in the south than in the north.

The northern worker does not get any particular benefit from the discrimination and the southern man gets a wage cut. These men and women compared prices of the better clothing they wore to the convention. They showed almost a complete standardization of quality and a close comparison on prices always with the man from the remoter field in the south paying more than those in the industrial centers of the north.

The west Texas man exploded another fallacy—that of the lower cost for fuel and the milder climate when he said, "The fellow who thinks it doesn't get cold down here should spend some time in the western districts. He would find that we have a protracted period of cold and freezing out here."

The conclusion is that this matter of a geographical differential should be made the subject of an economic survey to the end this unjust discrimination be brought to an end.

Labor Has Some New Cards

"It may be a new deal," said one old observer in the labor ranks, "but it is still the old game." The old deck was played out, and some of the cards had almost lost their meaning. "Yellow Dog Contract" was in the discard. "Labor Injunction" was pretty well used up. "Child Labor" and "Prison Labor" still were big cards, and the only answer to the "Wage Cut" was labor's "Strike" hand.

In the new deal "Child Labor" is supposed to be out of the deck. At any rate, "Minimum Wage" goes a long way toward making a two-spot of it. The new "Collective Bargaining" card is a big one, but it still has to be played along with "Organization," or it doesn't count for much. "Company Union" is a card inserted into the deck by employers. The answer to it is the "non-interference" card of Section A; but there is usually a call for the referee when labor plays that.

It is still the old game, and the stakes really have not changed much. We are still demanding "more than a living wage," and the bosses are playing for "reasonable profits." Some day there may come a showdown as to what the stakes of the game really are. When that day comes there may be more than a new deal. The game itself may have to be changed. How soon that will be may depend upon the outcome of the new deal, and how the bosses try to play their old cards. Meanwhile labor has some brand new cards and can play a stiffer game and take more tricks.

Labor Should Mobilize for Pensions

Legislation dealing with pensions for the aged and those physically unable to work will be given serious consideration by the next congress which convenes in January, 1935.

President Roosevelt is strongly in favor of pension laws. The enactment by congress of the railroad retirement act, under which annual annuities will be paid to all railroad employes attaining the age of 65 or completing thirty years of service, indicates that federal legislators look with favor on a general pension system.

This act, carrying the approval of the administration, may represent the government's conception of an insurance plan applicable to industry and commerce generally. Executives of the national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor should therefore study carefully the provisions of the act.

When the railroad retirement act was before congress it was strenuously opposed by the organized railroad executives, who represent, not those who do the useful work in the railroad industry, but those who live on interest and dividends derived from investments.

With the warning furnished by the belligerent opposition of railroad executives to railroad pensions, organized labor should lose no time in scheduling a plan of action relative to pension legislation for industrial workers generally.

If trade union officials do not express themselves strongly on this important question, there is a possibility of their silence being interpreted as a lack of interest in industrial pensions.

Moreover, the trade journals, representing the stockholders and bond-owners, are now expressing themselves in opposition to the pension idea and are urging industrial executives to formulate their antilabor plans in advance so that they will be ready to bombard congress as soon as the question is opened by a message from the president expressing his desire for pension legislation.

It is understood that the administration's pension plan is in the process of formation. In this connection, trade union executives are able to mobilize information in favor of a real and just pension system as against the unjust schemes which will undoubtedly be put forward by those who own and control industry and operate it for the exclusive benefit of coupon clippers and dividend receivers.

Many national and international unions have operated pension plans for years. Their officials know the benefits and the difficulties of adequate pension systems. By taking immediate initiative while congress is not in session, trade union executives will be able to present a united front in support of a just pension system when the subject is officially presented to the federal legislators.

It is inevitable that retirement annuities are to become a vital part of our national system of social protection.

The workers are the ones who are vitally concerned in these annuities. Organized labor as the voice of all the workers, whether they are in trade unions or not, is wonderfully equipped to play an important part in securing adequate legislation to protect all toilers against indigency either from old age or other impairment of their ability to work.

The American Federation of Labor is already on record in favor of general old age pensions. The affiliated unions are able to render constructive work in this direction by positive and unequivocal declarations in favor of federal pension legislation so that all workers may be assured of an adequate income during their unproductive years. In this manner much of the effect of the opposition of industrial corporations to this progressive and socially just policy will be promptly nullified.

The Passing Show

Nots and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Some day some wise guy is going to try to put up a building by beginning at the top story. This wise guy will build the roof first, then the top story, then on down, story by story, until he has finished the ground floor. Then this wise guy will dig a basement to put under the building and the job will be done.

Why not? Why do the job in the same old way just because it has always been done that way?

Ever since the first early bird made himself a shack men have been making buildings by starting with something that rested on or in the ground. Just no imagination at all, it seems.

But, wait a minute, wait a minute. Of course maybe some fellow will come along, hang the roof from a lot of balloons and go on building a building from the top down, but it isn't likely.

We are smashing plenty of precedent in these stirring days. Yea, verily, many plenty and plenty many, and joyous is the music made by the pieces as they tumble.

But we must keep in mind this one sound fact: There is no principle which says that everything has to be done different than it always has been done. The proper thing to do is to separate fundamental principles from mere practices and policies. Many do not understand that. So, they would like to smash everything.

That's going backwards, not forwards.

Starting a building on the ground is something we do because there is an inflexible principle back of it. Following precedent there is not being reactionary, it is being progressive.

One of the biggest jobs for a lot of people today is to keep their thinking straight. And lazy thinkers don't like to do that because it involves mental effort. It's so doggone much easier to go out and watch a ball game where someone else does all the work.

In relations with workers a lot of employers start by trying to build a roof for themselves and then they wonder why the thing doesn't hold up. They never stopped to think the thing through. And if they ever do learn anything it will have to be hammered into them.

Don't let us ever think unionism is all perfect either. The young fellows who flock in and think they have the world by the tail on a downhill swing are thinking in the right direction, but they have left out a lot. Some of them will take plenty on the chin before they get enough in the head to steer a straight and practical course.

Getting it into the head by taking it on the chin always hurts and sometimes weakens the chin in the end. It may sound brave, but sometimes there is no other way and some prefer it that way, but it is always the most costly way and the slowest way.

That goes for employers—plenty of them—who move around with the aid of the most modern machinery and yet do their thinking in caves in the light of tallow dips, blind to the fact that a century has passed since their type of thought had any place in the scheme of things.

Getting first principles straight usually means getting subsequent action on a right and sound basis. More people ought to try it.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved
Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. BAKERY WORKERS PLEDGE AID IN MAKING SUCCESS OF CODE

Washington, July 19.—The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union has offered "all of its resources to assist in making a success of the newly-organized industrial self-government in this vital industry and in the enforcement of its provisions," in a communication to National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson from Andrew A. Myrup, international secretary-treasurer of the union.

"It will be the part of patriotism—a new kind of patriotism"—Myrup continued, "to observe the law within the industry and to see that it is observed by others."

The text of the communication follows:

"It is gratifying to record that the code for the bakery industry now is in effect. It is far from perfect. But it stands for the beginning of self-government in this great industry. It stands for a measure of progress along democratic lines. It opens the door to a future of orderly development, stability and betterment for all who contribute usefully to the industry.

"The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union will, of course, strive for improvement, but we hope to do this in the spirit of the times and to the end that the entire industry may find its way to a firmer basis more advantageous to all.

"The union offers all of its resources to assist in making a success of the newly organized industrial self-government in this vital industry and in the enforcement of its provisions. It will be the part of patriotism—a new kind of industrial patriotism—to observe the law within the industry and to see that it is observed by others. Without hesitation and with real gratification the union, speaking for the masses of the workers within the industry, observes the establishment of code government, for that is what it amounts to.

"The doors are open. Failure to achieve the highest possible objectives can only be the fault of those upon whom responsibility now rests. It will be our purpose to be helpful in every manner consistent with the avowed objectives of the NRA and the code. And we offer our sincere congratulations to those bakery employers who have striven with such zeal in an effort to formulate as a beginning a code for progress and sound general principles."

Wage Chiseler, Facing $200,000 Fine, Closes Virginia Clothing Plant

Fredericksburg, Va. — Confronted with an order from the national compliance board of the national recovery administration to restore nearly $200,000 in wages to its employes or face the loss of its Blue Eagle and possible prosecution, the G. & H. Clothing company closed its factory here.

Five hundred workers were thrown out of employment. Plant officials said that the factory, a unit of L. Greif & Bros., Inc., of Baltimore, would remain closed indefinitely. It is the first time the plant has suspended operations in twenty-one years.

Two other Greif units at Staunton, Va., had not received orders to close down.

Ten plants, located in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, constitute the Greif holdings. The central office is in Baltimore.

The order from NRA instructed the company to pay to its employes sums representing the "differential" between the rate paid and the minimum of the code authority. The firm was given until July 19 to make the restitution or be deprived of its Blue Eagle. In addition, the compliance board said it was prepared to ask prosecution by the department of justice.

FARM WALKOUT IS ENDED.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Employes of the 3,000-acre Seabrooke Farms here ended a two-weeks' strike when they agreed to accept a peace plan under which a board of adjustment will review all grievances and make final decisions. Twenty-two persons, arrested during a clash with police and charged with disorderly conduct, were released following the strike settlement.

No goods nor service are "just as good" except they are guaranteed by a UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD.

MEAT CUTTERS AND BUTCHERS WIN STRIKES ALL OVER NATION

Chicago, July 19.—Thousands of members of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America have won union agreements, higher wages and better working conditions by strikes in recent weeks.

Beginning in the middle west, butchers, meat cutters and other employes of the packing plants and slaughter houses stopped work. Strikes spread to many packing house centers, the latest to be affected being New York City, where thousands of workers responded to a strike call by the union. Union officers said the walkout had stopped operations in plants of Armour & Co., Wilson & Co., Swift & Co. and Cudahy. Fifteen big slaughter houses in New York and nearby New Jersey were affected.

The B. H. Kroger company, which operates more than 5,000 stores, signed an agreement with local unions at Cincinnati, St. Louis and other cities. The agreement recognized the union and established wage increases.

Agreements were won by the union in Piqua, Akron and other Ohio cities. In California, the workers won the union shop, the 40-hour week and better pay.

Broad Social Welfare Program Is Planned for Next Congress

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, Reveals President's Four-Point Plan Which Is Expected to Have Far-Reaching Effect on America of Future.

Washington, July 12.—President Roosevelt is expected to place before the next session of congress a four-point social welfare program likely to have far-reaching effect on the people of the America of the future, according to Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator.

Decentralization of industry, with a general spread of manufacturing to all communities, appears to be the basis of the plan, in which officials of the administration are reported to be in accord.

Broad Scope.

According to Mr. Hopkins, the four points might be enumerated as follows:

1—Enactment of unemployment insurance legislation.

2—Payment of benefits and pensions to the aged and those physically unable to work.

3—Continuation and a readjustment of public works construction to meet the needs of the people.

4—Decentralization of industry.

The fourth point in the program—redistribution of industry—is believed by Mr. Hopkins to be an economic consequence as revealed by the general trend of business, but could be speeded up to some extent by a "little encouragement" by the federal government.

"The legislation to carry out the program is expected to be offered at the outset of the next session of congress, the first step being that of establishing a system of unemployment insurance to be contributed to by industry and labor. Continuance of public works construction on a permanent basis, but made flexible enough to meet changing conditions, would then follow.

He said that public works construction programs "will be here for a long time" and must be continued whether financed by the federal or state governments.

"But," he added, "public works must be integrated with the needs of the people. I can see a plan that will meet the requirements of a million people at one time and two million at another time."

Mr. Hopkins said that a plan of unemployment insurance would have to be enacted to carry out the program and added that the chances are 20 to 1 that it would be put into legislation. Under the insurance plan, he said, outright pensions will have to be paid to those who are physically unable to work.

Unemployment insurance legislation has been under consideration in congress for the past several years and through the Lewis bill of the last session which would permit employers to deduct from their taxes amounts contributed pursuant to unemployment insurance laws had the support of President Roosevelt, the measure was lost in the legislative jam at the close of the session.

Newspaper Plant Is Picketed By Guild Members

For First Time, Editorial Workers Demonstrate in Union Style Before Long Island Daily—Vote Ordered in Philadelphia.

New York City, July 19.—For the first time in the United States, a newspaper office was picketed by editorial workers when officers of the American Newspaper Guild and New York Newspaper Guild began picketing the plant of the Long Island Press, which the guilds charge has opposed organization of editorial workers.

The pickets, headed by Heywood Broun, well-known columnist and president of the American Newspaper Guild, marched to and fro carrying militant banners.

Broun later headed a delegation which asked prosecution of the Long Island Press for alleged violation of the collective bargaining provisions of the recovery act. The United States attorney's office in Brooklyn received the delegation but made no public announcement of any action.

Philadelphia.—A subcommittee of the regional labor board ordered an election on July 24 of the editorial employes of the Evening Public Ledger to select representatives to negotiate with John C. Martin, the publisher, in collective bargaining.

The name of the Newspaper Guild of Philadelphia will appear on the ballot, together with that of any other organization or shop committee which may seek to represent the men.

Lilienthal Defends Vast T. V. A. Project Before Civic Leaders

"Powerful Forces" Oppose Progress of Great Effort Designed for Public Benefit.

Jackson, Tenn., July 19.—David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of power for the Tennessee Valley Authority, at a mass meeting of civic leaders from various cities, firmly defended the great TVA project against opponents' attacks and gave ample proof that it is designed and intended solely for public benefit.

"The first great test is in your hands here in Tennessee valley. Under the cover of various disguises, powerful forces are at work to destroy the long-time objectives of the Tennessee Valley Authority. In order to fill their own pockets, these powerful groups are ready at any cost to destroy the Tennessee Valley Authority's program and to keep the president's objectives from being fulfilled.

"The people of the country must choose whether to follow the leadership of the president or the leadership of the selfish and blind that brought us so close to destruction.

"It is part of a program for national development. It is not a local project. Its implications extend to the outermost reaches of this country. It is this objective that justifies the huge expenditure of federal funds in one section of the country."

Hosiery Workers Will Strike Only During Rush Periods

Philadelphia, Pa.—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers are expected to call strikes as necessary only in the future "during the busiest seasons when immediate deliveries are being demanded by all buyers," according to plans reported under consideration by officials.

It is stated that speedy action is being taken by all branches of the federation on the referendum ballot submitted to the membership of the union by the convention held in Reading, which would place authority for calling strikes in the hands of the national executive board.

Under the resolution the board will be empowered to call either a general or sectional strike. A union spokesman said:

"The fact is, of course, understood in the trade that federation officials do not propose to be stampeded into any strike action at a time that might suit employers to have a stoppage of production. The union will not permit itself to be used merely as an instrument to raise prices."

LONGSHOREMEN STRIKE.

Mobile, Ala.—Members of the International Longshoremen's union here went on strike following refusal of their demands for wage raises to the New Orleans scale of 75 cents an hour and $1.10 an hour for overtime. Labor officials estimated that 1,000 workers were affected. Ship operators planned to employ strikebreakers.

It takes HOT WEATHER to prove how delightfully C-O-O-L an ELECTRIC RANGE is An Electric Range is a wonderful convenience the year round, but it's a special blessing now in this blazing July weather.

Why? Because there's no flaming heat to escape from an Electric Range and make the kitchen stifling. An Electric Range concentrates its heat 100 per cent on the food. It cooks the food, instead of cooking the cook.

It's the same way with the electric oven—insulated so perfectly that none of the concentrated heat escapes into the room.

The result is not only a marvelously cool kitchen—but much better food. For concentrated electric heat is scientifically even. Foods go to your table with an appetizing goodness known to no other stove.

Just ask any woman who COOKS ELECTRICALLY.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the Syrup."

OIL REFINERS FORCE ACTION ON DEMANDS

Wilson Employes in Three-Day Strike.

LABOR BOARD WILL TAKE UP MATTER

Walkout Brings Attention to Patient Effort for Relief.

After trying patiently, but vainly, to get the ear of the management of the local plant of the Wilson Packing company to protest certain working conditions, 110 employes of that concern, solidly organized several months ago into an Oil Refiners' union, this week succeeded in focusing attention upon their case and having it referred to the regional labor board at Atlanta.

Finally concluding that a demonstration of their solidarity was the only manner in which they could obtain their rights under the national recovery act, a strike was called Wednesday, and for three days the plant was closed while representatives of the parent company, a government conciliator and union officials conferred and endeavored to work out a solution of the problem. Result, as stated, was that a suggestion by the government official that the matter be referred to the labor board was accepted, and the strikers returned to work Saturday morning.

The Oil Refiners had for weeks attempted to secure some action on demands for an increase in wages and other concessions, and it appeared that a nice game of "buck-passing" was being indulged in by company officials. Despite all the weeks of appealing for a hearing, however, local management of the Wilson company was quoted by a daily newspaper Thursday morning as stating, in effect, he had just heard about the desire of the employes for increased pay, and had not had time to take the matter up with his Chicago superiors.

President Peek, of the new union, expressed regret that the strike had to be resorted to, but stated he believed a satisfactory solution of the controversy would be finally worked out.

Labor Demands Full Justice In Tollett Murder

Central Body Calls on Gen. Lively to Prosecute Chain-gang Outrage.

What appeared by newspaper accounts to be the cold-blooded murder of Harry Lee Tollett, member of Carpenters' Local 74, by a guard at the Silverdale workouse last Saturday, is keenly resented by organized labor in Hamilton county, and at an adjourned meeting of Central Body Wednesday night bitter condemnation of the outrage was voiced by several delegates. Secretary Cuthbert was instructed to write Atty.-Gen. John J. Lively, demanding vigorous prosecution of the workhouse guard.

Young Tollett, described by friends as being an inoffensive, quiet man, whose only weakness was drink, was serving a term in the county workhouse for intoxication, and on last Saturday, three days before his term would have been finished, made a break for liberty. It was said that he had a job promised in the city, and, having been unemployed for a great length of time, could not resist the temptation to attempt escape.

One Fryar, a guard, fired upon the fleeing prisoner, it is said, without even an admonition to halt, killing him instantly.

Secretary Cuthbert, in his letter to Gen. Lively, interpreted the feelings of the labor delegates as follows:

Dear Mr. Lively:

On Saturday, July 21, Harry Lee Tollett, human being, was serving time on the chaingang at Silverdale as punishment for being intoxicated. His sentence was no doubt just, and it lacked only three days of expiration, when his debt to society would have been paid.

This chaingang, according to newspaper reports, was guarded by one Sevier Fryar, who was armed with a shotgun.

Harry Lee Tollett, still a human being even though he had erred against society, temporarily lost his judgment, even though his sentence had but three more short days to run, and, possibly under stress of the hot sun and the fact that a job was waiting for him if he could only get to it, started running away.

This guard Fryar, according to reports, then premeditatedly and maliciously, fired into the back of Tollett, killing him instantly.

Members of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council knew Mr. Tollett, and are aware that he was absolutely harmless aside from his weakness for drink, and we want to know that his murderer will be punished, not by a reprimand, but with the electric chair or the penitentiary, if the proof shall bear out the facts as they have been made public.

We call upon you to prosecute this case with all the power which the people of Hamilton county have conferred upon you, to the end that full justice shall be done and the bereaved family of Harry Tollett be offered the consolation that the laws of the land refuse to tolerate cold-blooded and deliberate murder on the part of those charged with the duty of protecting society, even though they be guards hired to assure that misdemeanor cases be expiated to the satisfaction of society.

We will watch with interest developments in this outrage.

Very truly yours,
T. R. CUTHBERT, Secy.

LABOR BOARD DECISION ENDS 9-WEEK FIGHT

Seniority Rights and Increased Pay Said to Be Included in Contract—Officers of Local Express Appreciation to Labor and Public for Wonderful Support During "Unpleasantness"—Details Not Known as Labor World Goes to Press.

Ending a walkout which had practically closed the local plant of the American Bakeries company for nine weeks, news was received from Atlanta Friday night that agreement had been reached through the regional labor board, and that Bakers and Salesmen employed by the bakeries company would probably return to work Sunday morning.

Under the agreement which will be signed between the company and the union, full recognition is granted the organization, and wage increases and other concessions are made, it was understood. Other provisions of the contract were not known at presstime Friday night, but in a long-distance phone conversation with The Labor World Herman J. Schad, representative of the workers, stated he believed the agreement would be ratified at the regular meeting of the local Saturday night.

From the day the walkout occurred the business people and public generally of the Chattanooga territory gave remarkable support to the strikers. Although there was a complete absence of violence of any character, the company went into federal court seeking injunction against various and sundry possibilities originated and visioned by a labor-hating lawyer. Although the order was handed down, the services of the attorney were to all appearances worthless, as no act "prohibited" was ever contemplated by the strikers.

Some seventy-five or eighty strikers stood loyally by the organization, not one single desertion taking place, and the members stolidly patroling the picket lines, in shifts, for twenty-four hours each day.

Picketing activities were climaxed last Saturday, when a large number of the wives, mothers, sisters and children of the strikers massed in front of the bakery and carried the "unfair" sign. This unusual occurrence was noted in the Chattanooga News of that day by a three-column picture of the "women folks," and a splendid news story quoting various of the ladies as stating they were backing their "men folks" to the limit.

Officials of the local union, while not thoroughly familiar with the details of the settlement Friday night, expressed gratification at the news that an agreement had been reached, and were high in their praises of Representative Schad and of the Atlanta labor board.

"One of the most heartening features of the unfortunate occurrence," a spokesman for the organization told The Labor World, "was the unqualified support accorded us by the organized labor movement and the public generally. We cannot find words to express our appreciation to all those who stood so loyally by us, and we hope the time may come when we are in position to show that this confidence was not misplaced.

"Although, as stated, we do not know the exact details of the agreement, we are informed it provides for full recognition of the union, seniority rights and pay increases. When all information is in, and final action is taken to end the struggle, we will issue a formal statement through the daily press, and also through next week's issue of our Labor World—to which paper, incidentally, we shall be always grateful for its fearless and effective presentation of our case to our fellow trades unionists and the general public."

Textile Workers Urged to Send Delegates to Convention in New York.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, has issued a letter to all locals calling attention to the fact that by special authority given the emergency board, the convention of his organization set for Sept. 10 has been moved up to Monday, Aug. 13, and urging that all locals be represented.

"Never before in the history of the country have conditions been as critical as they are today," Mr. McMahon declares, and "every effort should be made by the locals to see that full representation is possible."

The letter, dated July 20, follows:

To All Local Unions, Greetings:

By special authority given our Emergency Board, composed of the officers of the international union, by the executive council during its regular session held recently in New York, I am notifying you that the date of the convention has been set ahead from Sept. 10 to Monday, Aug. 13.

Johnson Transfer Company Signs Union Agreement

Employes of Freight Line Secure Benefits Through Organization of Union.

Employes of the Johnson Transfer and Freight Lines are today enjoying improved working conditions and better wages by reason of the fact that some thirty-five of these workers recently affiliated with Local 594, Taxi Drivers and Teamsters, and a closed shop union agreement was signed this week with the company.

The Johnson company operates freight lines between Chattanooga and Louisville, Nashville and Atlanta, and the agreement covers all employes of the company or its subsidiaries. Increased pay is placed in effect all along the line, it was reported, and code hours will be the rule.

E. E. McDaniels, who assisted the Johnson company employes in organizing, this week paid a high tribute to President Johnson, whom he said was unusually fair in the negotiations for a contract with the employes. "Mr. Johnson was courteous and fair throughout the series of conferences," Mr. McDaniels said, "and showed a disposition to be reasonable at all times during the negotiations."

Insurance Company Points New Way To Prevent Complaints

Protesting Agents Are Answered by Summary Dismissal from Work.

Local agency of the Life and Casualty Insurance company, with home offices in Nashville, has pointed a new way to prevent petitions from employes seeking adjustment of employment conditions, according to a group of men who told The Labor World this week they were summarily discharged when a request, signed by nineteen out of twenty-three local agents, was sent District Manager Helmick, seeking adjustments in their contracts, and making a dignified and friendly appeal for certain changes.

That the Life and Casualty company will "brook no interference with its business" by ordinary working men, however, is indicated in the reply, dated one day before the petition was presented, which it is declared was received by a majority of the protesting agents, and which might even have the approval of John Edgerton. It follows, in part:

Having learned that you are dissatisfied with your working conditions in this district, this is to notify you that your final is to be made for the week of Monday, July 23. . . . You are hereby notified not to collect any money for this company from this date on. . . .

Charter for a federal labor union under the American Federation of Labor has been applied for by the Life and Casualty agents, and it is believed a nucleus will be thus formed for a large and effective unit of the local labor movement.

Roy McDonald's Home-Store Sheet To Print 'Annual'

Cheap-Wage "Individualist" Announces Will Observe Anniversary of Paper.

First anniversary of Roy McDonald's nonunion Home Store advertiser will be observed with a "special number," according to information furnished The Labor World this week, and certain citizens in various sections of the community may expect to have their front yards cluttered up with advertising matter for the so-called "Home Stores" and the Don Cherry Tire company.

One year ago McDonald announced his intention of printing a "throw-sheet," which was ballyhooed as an excellent advertising medium for local merchants and business houses. It was planned to print a miscellaneous lot of syndicated features and a comic sheet, and business men were told of the great value to them of advertising in its columns.

Then came the question of a working force, and although several local printers were unemployed at the time, McDonald sent out of town and employed an operator. Efforts of Typographical union and Central Body officials to induce the grocer-baker-tire dealer - dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist to alter his policies were met with the most arrogant expression of philosophy in the experience of the oldest committeeman, and McDonald informed them that he was an "individualist," that powerful corporations had attempted to force him out of business and failed; that any man who worked for him would come to work at whatever hour he (the boss) chose, and would quit by the same sign. Further, he averred, if he chose for a printer or other employe to sweep the floor, keep the books or deliver the papers, such duty would be performed by said employe.

Mr. Hoover, he said, made a mistake in 1929 when he pledged industrial leaders to maintain wages, and added that had workers' pay been cut in half at that time, "we would now be out of the depression."

McDonald's entrance into the publishing field, however, was unquestionably not exactly as he had "dreamed." When local merchants and business people were informed of his attitude toward working people, they unanimously deserted his throw-sheet, and it has since been used as an "advertising medium" for McDonald's chain stores and affiliated businesses.

When the codes went into effect providing a minimum of $35 per week for executives, McDonald "sold" his stores to the individual managers, stating that he had no intention of violating the spirit of the recovery act, but was merely carrying out a "dream of years" in making the boys sole owners of their particular units in the chain. After the grocery code was put into effect, however, which eliminated the $35 per week requirement, McDonald "bought back" the businesses from the boys, and is again in charge of the entire chain.

Shoe Repairers Gain Six Members

Local 620, Shoe Repairers, is rapidly approaching the "100 per cent" membership mark, according to officials of the organization, who stated that regular meeting of the local Thursday night was one of the most enthusiastic and interesting held since its formation. Six new members were obligated, and it was stated four more applications were received, to be acted upon at the next regular meeting.

Green Charges Labor "Sold Down River."

HARRIMAN FARCE STIRS HORNET NEST

Authority of Former General Motors Executive Is Challenged.

"Down the River"

In its issue of May 4, 1934, The Labor World said editorially:

The issue at Harriman, therefore, is not altogether a case of union or non-union, but the immediate task of Gen. Johnson is to decide whether a country lawyer who parts his name in the middle and a board of small-town mill barons, drunk with an unbroken reign of master-and-man power over employes in the mill, can successfully defy the government of the United States, thus opening the way for a complete collapse of the Recovery Program instituted by one of the greatest presidents the country ever had, and backed by practically every real American, whatever section he may reside in, or whatever may be his political inclinations.

From the "decision" of one Glancy, who is said to be a former executive of General Motors corporation, it would appear that the Harriman mill barons are bigger than the government.

Washington, July 26.—Labor was sold down the river by A. R. Glancy, NRA assistant administrator, when the Blue Eagle was restored to the notorious Harriman Hosiery mills of Harriman, Tenn., and labor leaders associated with the NRA are out after Glancy's scalp.

On July 23 the mills reopened. About 400 men and women returned to work. The strikers voted to reject the agreement "as worse than no settlement at all," but their attorney said they would approve it if General Johnson did.

President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, commended the strikers for rejecting the terms and attacked the decision. He said:

"The striking employes of the Harriman Hosiery company very properly rejected the terms of settlement. Labor regards the action taken as a betrayal of labor's interests and a complete surrender on the part of the government to a corporation which has publicly flouted the collective bargaining section of the national recovery act.

Glancy's Authority Challenged.

"Furthermore, labor challenges the authority of Mr. Glancy to negotiate a settlement or to order the restoration of the Blue Eagle to the Harriman Hosiery company. This challenge is based upon the fact that Gen. Johnson, in a letter addressed to Divisional Administrator Major George L. Berry, clothed him with full authority to deal with the Harriman Hosiery mills situation. This authority conferred upon Maj. Berry has never been changed nor withdrawn. Obviously, Gen. Johnson mlst decide.

Major George L. Berry, in whose hands settlement of the Harriman case had apparently been left by Gen. Johnson, returned to Washington with blood in his eye. Gen. Johnson was reported returning to Washington to put Glancy on the carpet. Reverberations of protest came from the Pacific coast, where Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady is settling the Pacific Coast strike. Mem-

LABOR QUERIES

Q—Is the San Francisco strike the most galling defeat in the United States?

A—No. There was a general strike in Seattle in 1919.

Q—When did the longshoremen's walkout on the Pacific Coast begin?

A—On May 9.

Q—What is the meaning of the term "blanket tax" often used in connection with strikes?

A—This is Federal tax "not to exceed" 10 cents per month on each employee of a company, to be used for the purpose of defraying the expenses of administering the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

What Next!

An amphibian automobile designed to carry passengers and freight over land and rivers at speeds of 30 miles an hour has been constructed in Moscow. The vehicle will carry twenty-five persons in passenger seats. It is estimated it will be able to travel 500 miles without refueling.

Wife—Are all men as stupid as you are?

Husband—No, my dear. Some of them are still bachelors.

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

American newspapers in general are noted for poise in time of crisis or popular excitement. At such times they have a strong tendency toward hysteria and almost complete loss of poise, which was well exemplified by San Francisco and other California newspapers when the general strike was called. The papers made a number of statements that will look even more foolish in the future than they do now.

The San Francisco Call-Bulletin, the Chronicle and the Examiner indulged in the ridiculous charge that communism and radicalism had gained control of trade unionism in the San Francisco district.

There was no basis for the charge. The general strike was called by vote of rank and file made up of as patriotic men as good citizens as those in any other San Francisco organization. There are a few communists in San Francisco, as there are in any other large city, but they had almost no influence in the ranks of organized labor, a fact that is doubtless well known to the San Francisco press.

The attitude of union labor toward communism was shown by the summary treatment given communists during the strike. The police recognized that there was nothing in common between trade unionists and communists by accepting a union card as evidence that the bearer had no connection with the "reds."

Of the papers outside of San Francisco, the notorious Los Angeles Times was the worst in its comment on the strike. The Times rose to a climax of utter foolishness by its assertion that the San Francisco strike was an "insurrection," a "communist-inspired and led revolt against organized government." Of course the Times did not believe any such thing and neither in all probability did many of its readers.

Studies made by the New York state department of labor to ascertain the fundamental causes within the individual that tend toward industrial injuries, particularly in machine operation, show that age, intelligence, experience, general health and fatigue are the ranking factors in the worker's tendency to be injured in machine operation.

Statistics show that persons under 20 years are more subject to injury than older employes. The age of 32 years seems to mark the time of greatest resistance. This resistance holds nearly steady until the fifty-sixth year is reached, when the resistance curve declines.

Age and experience curves of resistance run closely together. It is fair to assume that lack of experience largely explains the inability of youth to resist. Thorough preliminary instruction would lessen this handicap.

Worker fatigue clearly explains the fact that accidents usually occur toward the end of the morning and afternoon working periods and more often toward the end of the week. Short rest periods during work hours tend to offset fatigue, according to investigators, and to increase production. The remedy is simple and easily applied, and there is no reason why it should not be in general use.

Messenger Boys Strike.

New Orleans.—Almost the entire force of messenger boys employed by the Postal-Cable company went on strike when new city zone maps affecting the wages of the messengers were put into effect by the company. According to the boys, the new zoning system curtailed their wages considerably. Working messengers averages about $4 per week and bicycle messengers $1 to $2 under the old plan. The new system would decrease salaries approximately $1 per week they assert, since commissions are paid on a mileage basis and the new zones cover greater areas.

Mayor Bacharach's Brainstorm

The International Association of Fire Fighters and the New Jersey State Federation of Labor are endeavoring to organize the firemen of Atlantic City into a bona fide American Federation of Labor union.

This action arouses the belligerent opposition of Mayor Harry Bacharach, who declares his firm conviction that "firemen of any municipality as such have no right to be affiliated with any union."

It is regrettable that the mayor of Atlantic City should take such a reactionary position. Municipal firemen, like other workers, are confronted with the economic questions of wages, hours and work conditions generally. Individually they can achieve but little in maintaining and improving their living standards. Organized in a bona fide union, with competent officials to represent them, they can achieve much in this direction. Moreover, their organization, their consciousness of the fact that they are a part of the organized labor movement, furnishes a stimulus to the work of protecting the public from devastating fires which is absent when they are under the dictatorship of fire department chiefs with no organization to speak effectually for them.

Evidently Mayor Bacharach does not know that municipal firemen are organized in locals of the International Association of Fire Fighters in 227 cities in the United States and Canada. Practically all of the fire department officials in these cities speak in the highest terms of the co-operation which the fire fighters' locals give the officials in the work of the fire departments.

Mayor Bacharach should rescue himself from the embrace of Rip Van Winkle, get in touch with the changed world of the New Deal, and tell the Atlantic City firemen that if they know what is for their own best interests they will enroll as a body in the Atlantic City Local of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

Labor Discipline in San Francisco

San Francisco organized workers gave a fine demonstration of labor discipline and unity during the general strike. In the face of great provocation from hysterical newspapers and fire-eating antiunion employers, who would crush out all labor organization if they had the power, the striking workers kept cool heads and assisted in maintaining the peace.

Contrary to some reports, they did not try to "starve out" San Francisco, which at no time was even in the remotest danger of starvation.

Wage earners would do well to take with several grains of salt sensational reports coming out of San Francisco. The workers there were not stampeded into striking by "red" agitators, as some newspaper correspondents would have the nation believe. They took the action that they thought best in the circumstances, after full consideration in the light of American traditions of liberty and democracy. They acted within their rights as American citizens, a fact that many of their critics forget.

Federal Relief for Destitute Strikers

Bourbon employers in industrial regions where working men and women strike to preserve their economic liberties and maintain decent living standards howl their heads off because local relief agencies use Federal relief funds to keep destitute strikers and their families alive.

A number of months ago Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, announced in unmistakable language the policy of the Relief Administration on this question. He said:

"The Federal and State Emergency Relief Administrations are concerned with providing relief to the unemployed who are in need.

"It is not their responsibility to decide the merits of any wage controversy in which strikers may be involved.

"Federal and State courts and labor departments exist to arbitrate such disputes. During any strikes counties administering Federal funds are expected to provide relief to families of the unemployed regardless of whether they are on strike or not until such time as the National Labor Board of the National Recovery Administration has passed upon the merits of the strikers' claims."

This statement is based on sound reasoning. Starving the workers and their families is the favorite method used by anti-union employers, still animated by the principles of the "Old Deal," to bring to their knees those who do practically all of the useful work in industry. The suffering caused by hunger, these employers say, will crush any strike and compel the desperate workers to beg for jobs at any price.

The inhuman policy of these reactionaries is materially crimped by the declaration of the Government that it will not be a party to such barbarism, and that destitute men, women and children, wherever found, will be given relief from Federal funds regardless of the means by which their distress has become acute.

Costs of Industrial Deaths

According to reports issued by the New York State Department of Labor, about one per cent of the industrial accidents for which workmen's compensation is paid are fatal. Yet these deaths represent nearly one quarter of the cost of all industrial accidents.

In a recent year, the average cost of a fatality amounted to $6,147 but the range was from one thousand to more than ten thousand dollars in instances where a widow was left with more than three children under 18 years of age.

The impressive fact revealed by department records is that all fatal accidents are results of the same causes as minor accidents. Prevent minor accidents and fatal accidents will become a rarity.

Asks Candidates Pointed Questio

Editor The Labor World:

I was an interested listener Monday night while the various candidates for office told the organized workers of Hamilton county how fair they have been to our movement. They almost invariably explained how sympathetic and close they have been to us in the past, and how they would assist us in the future. Practically every one stated that when any building work was done by them, union labor would be employed.

Which was fine. But, as chairman of the Label committee of Central Body, I wondered how many of the speakers wore union-labeled clothing or patronized a union barber shop, bakery, or shoe shop, or other crafts.

It was noted, however, that all printed matter used by the candidates bore the union label. So the building trades and the printers are all set, but what about the other trades which the candidates spend their money?

This is not written in a spirit of criticism, but rather in the hope that our friends may also remember that there are many articles which bear the union label, and which are just as easily secured as printing or building trades crafts.

E. E. CROSBY,
Chmn., Label Committee, Central Body.

LOUISIANA GOVERNOR VETOES LABOR BILLS

New Orleans.—House Bill No. 47[illegible] which passed both houses of the legislature, making it unlawful for contracts to be signed prohibiting employes from joining labor unions, was one of the first bills vetoed by Governor Allen. House Bill No. 490, introduced in the instance of labor organizations "to provide that employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively" was also vetoed by the governor, who made no explanation of his action.

HE STAYED ON THE JOB!

When the greatest economic program in all history was in the making, Senator Bachman stood by to uphold the hands of our great President.

He is recorded as voting "aye" in those last strenuous days on many major measures of vital importance to Labor, while his opponent, a member of Congress, was in Tennessee campaigning.

Let's give our neighbor and friend the greatest majority ever accorded a candidate for United States Senate in Tennessee.

NRA REJECTS PAY BOOST FOR TEXTILE WORKERS

Washington, July 12.—A denial of the demand of the United Textile Workers for an increase in wages was recorded by the national recovery administration in a preliminary report of Dr. Leon Henderson, chief of the research and planning division, as the result of a survey made under terms of the settlement of threatened strike in the cotton textile industry some weeks ago.

The report of Dr. Henderson, which carried the approval of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, held that under existing conditions there is no factual or statistical basis for a general increase in the rates of wages.

The report said, in part:

"The terms of settlement of the threatened strike in the cotton textile industry, as announced by NRA, required the division of research and planning to report upon the question that 'what increase, if any, in wage rates is possible?'

"The division has studied the question as it relates to possible increases in wage rates specified by the cotton textile code. This report is based entirely on presently available statistics of wages, prices, costs and margins and does not interpret the question in terms of wage theories. For this reason no completely conclusive answer can be given.

"Under existing conditions there is no factual or statistical basis for any general increase in cotton textile code wage rates.

"It does not at all follow that no wage adjustments would be great divergences exist, as among the various plants, with respect to wages in the higher brackets. It would improve the competitive conditions of the industry if these divergencies were smoothed out; and if they were thus smoothed out, a very considerable improvement in wage conditions would be secured for large numbers of workers. Furthermore, such an equalization of competitive conditions might properly be regarded as an appropriate first step toward a later consideration of the possibility of raising the general level of wages in the industry—or, less happily, of a general reduction if justified by later conditions."

Hon. Thomas S. Myers,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

My Dear Mr. Myers:

I feel it is only fair to you to express my appreciation, as legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, for your fine co-operation with us in endeavoring to pass laws for the benefit of the masses.

As a member of the Tennessee legislature of 1913 you evidenced a splendid spirit with reference to our problems and supported our program 100 per cent. My associations with you were most pleasant and satisfactory at all times.

May I wish for you continued success in your political aspirations, as well as heartiest personal greetings.

Yours very truly,
DAVID HANLY,
Legislative Chairman,
Tennessee Federation of Labor.

I appreciate beyond words the splendid assurances of co-operation from Chattanooga Unionists, and solicit your continued support and influence.

PENSION ACT AND WAGE RESTORATION BIG FORWARD STEPS FOR RAIL LABOR

Washington, July 5.—Signing of the railroad pension bill by President Roosevelt and a 2½ per cent wage restoration made July 1 a day of rejoicing for more than a million railroad workers and their families.

The pension act and the wage restoration mean increased employment and increased purchasing power for many thousands of workers. The pension act will retire 100,000 men on pensions this year, giving jobs to 100,000 unemployed men, and the wage restoration means a $4,000,000 monthly pay increase.

The wage increase, affecting 1,300,000 men, was provided in an agreement reached between the railroad labor organizations and the managements in April. On Jan. 1 the workers will receive another 2½ per cent and on April 1, 1935, the remaining 5 per cent of the original 10 per cent pay reduction of two years ago will be restored.

The pension act was hailed by A. F. Whitney, retiring chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, as one of the finest pieces of railroad legislation since the eight-hour day was won in 1916.

"Railroad men feel that they have obtained two great concessions in the wage restoration and the pension legislation," Whitney said at Cleveland.

"The first increases our purchasing power of $4,000,000 a month," the labor executive continued. "On the basis of May payrolls, the increase will mean an increase of $16,000,000 monthly by next April.

"The pension law, which becomes effective in ninety days, will permit retirement of 100,000 men this year alone. Not only will this take care of the men who have broken down in railroad service, but it will help the unemployment problem by elevating the young man who is looking for the opportunity to work."

The pensions act provides for deduction of 2 per cent from workers' salaries and 4 per cent from carriers' payrolls to set up a fund which is expected to consist of at least $90,000,000 a year.

This fund will be administered by a three-man commission appointed by the president. One commissioner will be selected from railroad labor, one from management and the third will represent the public.

Men will be eligible for retirement on reaching 65, completion of thirty years' service with a carrier, or for disability.

In signing the railroad pension bill, the president said the measure was "in line with sound social policy," though he criticized it as "crudely drawn" and expressed the opinion that it would require amendment at the next session of congress.

Besides holding that the bill is "sound" socially, the president further approved it because he believes the actual burdens will be "far less" than estimated; because retirement will improve railroad "morale" and because the bill provides for the creation of a board to recommend changes looking to a permanent system.

After you've paid other people perfectly good money for their judgment, you have more respect for your own.

Don't let your enthusiasm cool because the weather gets hot.

One of the worst jolts that comes to an editor is when he runs a political candidate's announcement and says nice things about him during the campaign and then has the candidate turn down the bill for his advertising after the election is over.

Life always has its troubles,
And they never all relax;
The drink is mostly bubbles,
And the price is mostly tax.

Constipation Symptoms Soon Go Away After Use of Black-Draught

Mrs. S. G. Ramey, of Henryetta, Okla., writes that she has taken Thedford's Black-Draught about twenty-five years, when needed, and has "found it very good." "When I have a sour stomach and my mouth tastes bitter, and I feel bilious, sluggish and tired, I will very soon have a severe headache if I don't take something. I have learned to keep off these spells by taking Thedford's Black-Draught. Very soon I am feeling fine. I feel that Black-Draught can't be beaten as a family medicine." . . . HOSIERY CO. RULED GUILTY OF VIOLATING SECTION 7-A

Washington, July 5.—The national labor board has announced its decision to refer the case of the Bear Brand Hosiery company, Beaver Dam, Wis., to government enforcement agencies for appropriate action, following finding by the board that the company had violated Section 7-A of the national recovery act.

Since the hearing before the board, June 13, the board reported that the company has begun to move its machinery to the Kankakee, Ill., plant, and stated that the company's conduct "in this dispute suggests that the shut-down of the plant and its subsequent dismantling were designed to mobilize public opinion against the striking employes, to coerce them into abandoning their organization, and to intimidate employes in other plants from organizing."

The board's decision further stated that "the record reveals an unswerving hostility on the part of the company to union activity."

Action against the company was brought by Branch 66 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, which charged that the company, whose president is Henry Pope, had discharged employes for their union activity and had refused to bargain collectively with representatives of the employes. The original complaint was made early in March, and a hearing held by the Chicago regional labor board in Milwaukee, March 27. The company closed the plant March 20 to last May had merely forbidden the sale of goods manufactured "wholly or in part by convicts or prisoners," was amended by the last session of the legislature, making violation of its provisions a misdemeanor punishable by fine ir imprisonment.

The sale of products made in the state prisons has been the subject of controversy in several states. The law against such sale became fully effective last January with the adoption of the Hawes-Cooper act by congress, which permitted a state to determine definitely the manner in which prison-made products may be marketed or not be marketed within its own borders.

Prison-Made Goods Reported Being Sold

New York.—Extensive sale of prison-made goods, in violation of the law, it is claimed here, is keeping many free people out of jobs.

According to the information placed in the hands of the attorney-general and the Merchants' association, large quantities of cotton cloth manufactured in a southern state prison are sent to factories in other states and there manufactured into work shirts which the member declares are, in turn, shipped to wholesalers and retailers in the state of New York for distribution.

The sale of prison-made goods in New York state is in direct contravention of Section 69 of the general business law. This law, which prior

Padded CWA Payrolls Investigated by Jury

Rochester, N. Y.—Charges made by G. H. Miller, former paymaster in Buffalo, that CWA payrolls were padded and corrupted, will be investigated by a federal grand jury, according to Judge Grover M. Moscowitz.

Convicted by a federal jury after trial on charges of forging an indorsement to CWA payroll checks, Miller made the charges when urged by Judge Moscowitz to make a "clean breast" of his actions before being sentenced.

Justin C. Morgan, assistant United States attorney, who prosecuted Miller, and Edwin Manning, one of the arresting officers, were directed to obtain evidence for presentation before the grand jury at its final sitting next Tuesday.

Miller specifically charged that payrolls were padded in the Manhattan avenue project in Buffalo when he said he and another paymaster found twenty-four duplicate checks. He assured the court that he could present names and amounts and provide corroboration of his statements.

"Pains Gone," Says Lady, After She Had Taken CARDUI

In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. $1 a bottle, at drug stores.

Consider Amendments to Codes For Newspapers and Graphic Arts

Expect to Improve Child Labor Provisions, With 14-Year Age Limit for Carriers.

Washington, July 12.—Objections expressed by President Roosevelt to the child labor provisions of the daily newspaper code and the graphic arts code resulted in a hearing before the NRA to consider amendments.

The proposed amendments provide that no establishment shall employ persons under 16 years of age in mechanical or manufacturing duties, and that those between 14 and 16 may be employed in "other than mechanical or manufacturing duties" not to exceed three hours a day between 7 o'clock in the morning and 7 in the evening, without interfering with day school.

Provision is also made that girls under 18 or boys under 14 shall not be employed to sell or deliver newspapers, but that boys between 12 and 14, delivering newspapers on the date the amendment becomes effective, may continue.

Establishment may permit the sale or delivery of newspapers by boys under 16 who may be employed under the provisions of this paragraph under the following conditions:

1—To sell or deliver newspapers not more than three hours a day on school days and not more than four hours a day on other days, where such work may be done without impairment of health and without interference with the hours of day school.

2—To sell newspapers between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. from October 1 to March 31, and between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. from April to Sept. 30.

3—To deliver newspapers between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. from October 1 to March 31, and between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m. from April 1 to September 30.

4—Each boy shall obtain from a state of local official, designated by the secretary of labor, a permit or badge showing that the boy is qualified to sell an/or deliver newspapers under the provisions of this paragraph.

Lawes' Evidence of Ex-Newsboys.

In a statement on the child labor provisions of the newspaper code, made public by the national child labor committee, Warden Lewis E. Lawes said that 69 per cent of Sing Sing prisoners were newsboys in their youth.

"These figures support my contention, based on nearly thirty years' experience, that juvenile delinquency and so-called criminal tendencies are largely the result of detrimental influences and associations that can often be corrected," the warden stated.

"However, the use of youngsters between the age of 14 in selling newspapers, particularly in cities, is not at all calculated to correct such tendencies. The practice should be prohibited, with the millions unemployed today subsisting on relief payments.

"There is certainly enough labor available to the publishers at a wage he can afford to pay, so that the employment of children under the age of 14 for boys and 18 for girls may not be justified."

Women's Bureau Hails Gains In Minimum Wage Legislation

Washington, July 26.—"The case for a minimum wage for women workers has made important gains in various states during the past year and a half," according to Miss Mary Anderson, director of the women's bubeau of the U. S. department of labor. "Not only have new laws been enacted in important industrial states, but the administration of these laws in most cases has gone along at a most satisfactory pace.

"Of particular significance," says Miss Anderson, "is the interstate compact for establishing uniform standards for conditions of employment, particularly with regard to minimum wage, signed by the seven states of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island at a meeting at Concord, N. H., on May 29 of this year. Four og these states have already passed minimum wage legislation, three have not.

"This compact constitutes a new trend in the formulation of labor legislation. I believe that such co-operation on the part of neighboring states will work toward the elimination of competition between the states and remove the pressure toward long hours of work, low wages and unfavorable working conditions. States themselves are assuming responsibility for one another which is a very heartening development in our economic life.

"Another high spot in the history of the minimum wage," Miss Anderson continues, "is the replacement by the Massachusetts legislature of the former minimum-wage law for women by one which is essentially the same as that of the New York law based on the National Consumers' league model bill. In the former law wage orders could not be carried beyond what is now known as the 'directory stage,' that is, the old law depended entirely on public advertisement of names of offenders to bring compliance. With the new law, orders may be made mandatory after nine months.

"Three states whose minimum-wage laws were passed in the spring of 1933 have concentrated on setting up fair wage standards for women in the laundry industry. Of these, New York has set a minimum of 31 cents an hour in New York City and 27½ cents outside New York City. Ohio has set one of 27½ cents an hour, and the last statement available from New Hampshire indicated that 28 cents an hour would be the rate established there. In New York and New Hampshire the minimum rates set by the NRA code for the laundry industry range from 25 to 30 cents, in Ohio from 22½ to 25 cents an hour, for a 40-hour week, depending on location and size of city or community. This code has an interesting provision. It states that where the minimum set by the state law is higher than the code rate it shall take precedence over the code rate for men as well as for women."

MORE ABOUT HARRIMAN CASE

bers of the labor advisory board are grimly awaiting a showdown.

Working Is Ridiculed.

Even the wording of the agreement which Mr. Glancy "negotiated" with M. W. Walker, secretary of the corporation, is held up to scorn, not only as an arrogant and autocratic assumption of power which Mr. Glancy did not possess, but as a stupid administrative procedure. One newspaper suggested that President Roosevelt's only face-saving procedure in the situation would be to dismiss Mr. Glancy instantly. The "agreement," in which neither labor's representatives at Harriman nor labor leaders in the NRA administration participated, begins:

"The strike is hereby called off." The question is asked, when did an NRA administrator, or the head of a corporation, receive the right to call off a strike initiated by the workers in a plant? This is regarded by labor leaders as the first big laugh.

"All picketing, acts of intimidation and coercion shall 'cease immediately.' This is the second ex-parte judgment.

"To Dismiss" Pending Cases.

"The company will not prosecute any case growing out of the strike, including contempt cases, occurring prior to this date, and will dismiss all pending cases." Labor directs attention to the inference that the company owns the courts when it can thus dismiss contempt cases, and asks why Mr. Glancy concurs in this position in behalf of the NRA.

"All strikers agree not to institute any suit against Harriman Hosiery mills growing out of any occurrence of the strike." In short, it is said, the workers are to give up all their rights under NIRA with reference to wages and hours.

"The company will dismiss the injunction on or before the next term of chancery court, and pay all costs in connection with said dismissal." Interpreted, it means the company will tell the court to lay off the strikers and the company will pay its lawyers for doing its dirty work.

"To Call Off" Strike.

"Within sixty days after the strikers accept this settlement and call off the strike the company will employ twenty-five strikers." There are 300 strikers, twenty-five of whom will get work in two months, according to the agreement.

"Thereafter three out of every four hired shall be strikers. This clause to be considered fulfilled when twenty-five have been hired; and it will be considered as fulfilled on Jan. 1, 1934, regardless of whether or not twenty-five have been hired." In other words, only fifty of the 300 strikers will be taken back in any event. If the strike is not ended in thirty days, none of the strikers will be hired, the agreement reading that when any striker refuses to go back to work, he shall be counted in the fifty "as if he had accepted the employment."

JOHN MANNING'S LIFE DEVOTED TO SERVICE OF WAGE-EARNERS

Late Secretary-Treasurer of Union Label Trades Department Long Prominent in Promotion of Union Products and in Fight Against Unfair Prison Labor Competition.

Washington, July 26.—News of the death on July 17 of John J. Manning, veteran trades unionist, long a leading opponent of prison labor and outstanding advocate of the union label, came as a great shock to Mr. Manning's hosts of friends throughout the nation. He had been in ill health for some time but kept in close touch with his office until shortly before his passing.

Mr. Manning was perhaps best known through his work as secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, an office which he held for seventeen years. He did much to increase the membership, activities and prestige of the department. He worked early and late for the union label, shop card and union services, and it was recognized that he did more than anyone else in recent years to increase the demand for union products and services.

At all times, Mr. Manning advocated spending union earned money for the products and services of union members and his sincerity of purpose and love for the work won many to the cause. One of his outstanding achievements in behalf of the union label was his production of the motion picture, "Labor's Reward," which was shown all over the country in 1925.

While in the office of the United Garment Workers of America, before his association with the Union Label Trades Department, Mr. Manning was active in the fight against prison labor. He was an advocate of the state-use system of the products of convict labor and was instrumental in having several states adopt the system.

Mr. Manning continued the fight against prison labor products until the end of his life, serving prominently as a member of the national committee on prisons and prison labor and as labor member of the New York state advisory committee on prison industries. For his work on this latter committee he was warmly thanked by Franklin D. Roosevelt, then governor of New York.

Born in Troy, N. Y., Mr. Manning early became affiliated with the labor movement. He was secretary-treasurer of the Shirt, Waist and Laundry Workers' union and represented the organization at conventions of the the American Federation of Labor.

Later Mr. Manning became affiliated with the United Garment Workers of America, serving as an organizer and assistant editor of the Garment Worker, the union's official journal. He was elected secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department at the convention of the department held in Baltimore in June, 1917. He was a charter member of the department and one of its first vice-presidents.

Mr. Manning was a member of the national war labor board and devoted a great deal of his time to this work during the trying days of the World war.

The American labor movement honored Mr. Manning by sending him as fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor congress in 1910 and to the British Trades Union congress in 1930. He was a member of the social insurance committee of the A. F. of L. in 1919.

Despite his failing health and many activities, Mr. Manning served as labor adviser for several NRA codes since the enactment of the national industrial recovery act. He took a leading part at A. F. of L. conventions and in the affairs of local, state and national organizations. During his residence in Washington, he was a member of Local Union No. 11, United Garment Workers of America.

Mr. Manning is survived by his wife, Catherine A. Manning; a daughter, Mrs. John W. Dyer, Jr., of New York; two sisters, the Misses May and Agnes Manning; a brother, Martin F. Manning, of Troy, N. Y., and two grandchildren.

BLUE EAGLE RESTORED.

Washington.—Restoration of the Blue Eagle to the New Deal Dress company, Elizabeth, N. J., has been voted by the NRA compliance council. The firm was ordered on April 30 to surrender all NRA insignia for violation of the minimum wage provisions of the cotton garment industry code. The code authority has reported that the firm is now complying with the code and has made full restitution of back wages to its employes.

Hand Labor Authorized On Roads to Make Jobs

Trenton, N. J.—The state highway commission has authorized the use of hand labor instead of mechanical equipment on county road work where the arrangement can be advantageously made, as an aid to employment. The change in policy was adopted at the request of Henry Y. Clouting, freeholder of Cape May county, but the commission stipulated that the road projects must be completed within the estimates or the counties would have to contribute the additional funds.

EMPLOYES' POLL REJECTED.

Washington.—The new national labor relations board has rejected a request of the company union of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company for an election among the company's employes. An agreement to permit an arbitration board to settle disputed points recently ended a strike of the company's American Federation of Labor union employes.

Pay Tribute To Departed Brother

Local 219, Brotherhood of Papermakers, has adopted the following tribute to the memory of H. W. Embler, active worker and official of that organization, who passed away recently following a brief illness:

Whereas, Brother H. W. Embler passed from this life into life eternal, July 5, 1934, having been called by our Heavenly Father away from his family, his friends, his associates and his fellow workmen and members of Local 219, in which before his death he was honored by being vice-president and served with distinction and ability and credit to himself and family in this position for one year, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Local 219, Brotherhood of Papermakers, of Chattanooga, Tenn., ever cherish his memory and extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family; be it further

Resolved, That we dedicate a page of our record to his memory and send a copy of this resolution to The Labor World and the Papermakers' Journal, his wife and his father and mother; be it further

Resolved, That out of respect to Brother Embler our charter be draped for thirty days.

TEXTILE MEET

tion call, for Sept. 10, will hold good for this momentous convention called for Aug. 12.

Never before in the history of the textile industry of this country were conditions as critical as they are today, so far as workers are concerned. Every effort should be made by the membership of your local union to see to it that the full representation by delegates, is made possible. If textile workers are ever going to come into their own, now is the time for action. Action at this convention by a representative delegation from every locality, will demonstrate to employers that the rank and file of the workers are demanding redress, and are preparing themselves to see to it that the officers whom they select will carry out their wishes to the letter. There must be no slackers in this movement, to give encouragement and lend aid to employers and "open shoppers." Are you going to be with us at this most important convention of your international union?

With kind regards,

THOMAS F. McMAHON,
International President, United Textile Workers of America.

ALL HIS LIFE A STRONG FRIEND OF ORGANIZED LABOR

LET'S GO FORWARD, NOT BACKWARD!

That the administration of Judge Will Cummings has been approved by the working people of Hamilton County is clearly indicated in the following unsolicited letters expressing appreciation of the efforts of Judge Cummings to co-operate at all times with Organized Labor.

OPERATIVE ENGINEERS LOCAL UNION No. 914

Chattanooga, Tennessee, June 20, 1934.

Hon. Will Cummings,
County Judge of Hamilton County, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Dear Sir:

We, the officers and members of Local Union No. 914, of Operative Engineers, at our regular meeting held June 20, 1934, were presented the following letter by Jack Lindsey, Secretary, who made a motion, which was duly seconded, that the entire body take a ballot on same. It was passed without a dissenting vote:

"We take this opportunity to express to you our appreciation and thanks for your whole-hearted co-operation which you have extended to us. We appreciate the fact that you have given work to our members at all times as their services were needed, and to our knowledge and belief have been 100% for the ideals and objects for which organized labor strives.

"We are proud to call you our friend, and assure you that we value that friendship highly. It is a grand and glorious feeling to know one has a friend in a high and honorable position, especially so, when that friend is such a man as you.

"Please accept this expression of esteem from Local No. 914, Operative Engineers."

Yours truly,
JACK LINDSEY, Financial Secretary.

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF BOILER MAKERS, IRON SHIP BUILDERS AND HELPERS OF AMERICA

July 13, 1934.

We, the members of Lookout Lodge Local No. 14, International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America, at a regular meeting held July 13, 1934, unanimously endorsed the Hon. Will Cummings for County Judge, in the election to be held August 2, 1934.

We realize and appreciate his fairness in all his dealings with organized labor, and his high personal character and integrity, and take this opportunity to recommend him to the voters of Hamilton County for re-election.

(Signed) A. W. MARTIN.
SAM HARTMAN,
Corresponding and Financial Secretary.

Chattanooga, Tennessee, July 20, 1934.

Hon. Will Cummings, County Judge,
Hamilton County, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

We, the officers and members of Local No. 226, Painters' Union, wish to take this opportunity to express to you our appreciation and thanks for your co-operation which you have extended to us.

We appreciate the fact that you have given our members work as their services were needed, and to our knowledge have been for the ideals for which organized labor stands.

THE CHATTANOOGA MUSICAL SOCIETY

Hon. Will Cummings, County Judge,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 2, 1934.

Dear Judge:

At our regular monthly meeting of The Chattanooga Musical Society, Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, we went on record unanimously indorsing your administration of County Judge. We took the attitude that a vote for you would be a step forward instead of a step backward, and will unite in our efforts to re-elect you to the post of County Judge, as we know what your record toward labor and its affiliates are.

CENTRAL BODY ASKS SUPPORT FOR BURKS

Secretary T. R. Cuthbert, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council, was Monday night instructed to address a letter to all local unions affiliated with Central Body, urging support for J. G. Burks, candidate for the Lower House of the State Legislature.

Mr. Cuthbert wrote the following letter:

To the Working People of Chattanooga:

Mr. John G. Burks, who has announced as a candidate for the State Legislature, has been a member of this body for the past seventeen years as a delegate from Local 226, Painters, Decorators, Paperhangers and Signwriters. During all that time he has been loyal and faithful in his efforts to advance the cause.

He is a student of governmental affairs, having formerly been a school teacher, and will reflect credit on the Labor Movement as a member of the State Legislature.

We ask that you urge your friends to support Mr. Burks for membership on the Lower House delegation, and thus assure us of one member who will have a thorough understanding of our legislative problems.

Fraternally yours,
T. R. CUTHBERT, Secretary.

EDGERTON IN PATHETIC PLEA FOR MORE FUNDS

Union Hater Again Asks Employers' Help.

WOULD FORESTALL LABOR LEGISLATION

Chief of Bosses' Union Paints Weird Picture of Tennessee Worker.

While the workers of Tennessee are in all too many cases "asleep at the switch," floundering in a sea of uncertainty, or engaged in petty bickerings concerning who shall or shall not fill some picayunish political office, the union-hating manufacturers, under prodding of John E. Edgerton, Lebanon sock-mill owner, are raising funds to prevent organized action by labor and to forestall the passing of remedial labor legislation in the coming session of the state legislature.

Under date of July 24, a circular letter is issued over Edgerton's signature, containing a more or less pathetic appeal for funds to combat "agencies unfriendly to industry," which are proposing "retarding and hurtful legislation." The letter declares 600 manufacturers are to receive a copy, and although a vast majority of these employers are probably skeptical of Edgerton and his crowd of labor-hating agitators, unquestionably some will be so gullible as to contribute.

"The potential opportunities for labor union troubles are the same in Tennessee as to be found in other states," Edgerton declares, "and the reason we have not had any abnormal labor troubles or disturbances is largely because of the activities of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association in convincing employers and the public in general that the open shop is the best method for the employer, the employe and the public."

Edgerton's appeal is signed "Sincerely, cordially and faithfully yours," the chief of the Bosses' union having, possibly through error of some rat printer, failed to include "fraternally."

It follows, in part:

In reading the newspapers of the country, you will notice that many states are in the throes of labor union troubles, while industrial operation is being hampered and industrialists themselves are losing millions and millions of dollars. It is by no means "just an accident" that Tennessee is not having the same experience. The potential opportunities for labor union troubles are the same in Tennessee as to be found in other states, and the reason we have not had any abnormal labor troubles or disturbances is largely because of the activities of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association in convincing employers and the public, in general, that the open shop plan of employment is the best method for the employer, the employe and the public, consequently Tennessee is relatively free from public troubles which are giving industry in other states so much worry and concern at the present time.

As long as the Tennessee Manufacturers' association is in existence and it receives the support and co-operation of the manufacturers of the state, this condition will probably prevail.

I am addressing you today on an important subject, and one which I am asking my fellow-manufacturers throughout the state to help me with. This association has suffered during the year through the falling off of collections because manufacturers have considered that their trade organizations and their code authorities should come first, consequently, the association is needing funds, not only for immediate expenses, but to carry on through the year.

This letter, which you are now reading, is being mailed to 600 concerns which have in every way evidenced their interest in

Says Labor World In Error About Home Store Sheet

Attention Called to Misunderstanding Concerning "Anniversary."

Last week's issue of The Labor World was in error in stating that Roy McDonald's "Home Store Advertiser" would celebrate its anniversary with a "big edition", according to a correspondent, who recalls that McDonald announced that the big occasion would mark the anniversary of his "Home Stores," and not of his cheap-wage throw-sheet.

However, one error more or less with respect to McDonald's business matters little, the correspondent opines, as "it seems to be generally conceded that the entire McDonald organization is one big error."

Attention is called to the fact that Brown & Williamson products which have been included along with other articles which McDonald dispenses in his grocery department, were not advertised in the throw-sheet last week, and it is possible someone called attention to the 100 per cent union tobacco concern that the "individualist" was using space in his Home Stores advertiser attempting to "boost" B. &. W. products.

It was held that no criticism should be aimed at the tobacco firm, for the double reason that perhaps they knew nothing of the fact that their name was being used in the throw-sheet, and further that McDonald, of course, is not known outside of the territory where his stores operate, although the local public is well aware of his antiquated philosophy relating both to business ethics and to the workers.

The communication follows:

Aug. 1, 1934

Editor The Labor World:

In last week's issue of The Labor World you informed your readers that Mr. McDonald's throw-sheet would publish this week a "special number" in observance of the first anniversary of the rag.

Our "friend" Roy informed his readers (?) last week that the "big edition" would be in comemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Home Stores organization, so evidently you were in error. However, I don't suppose an error more or less makes much difference in regard to the Home Stores, for it seems to be generally conceded that the entire McDonald organization is "one big error."

We've been hearing quite a bit of favorable comment this week on the fact that there was not an advertisement of Brown & Williamson tobacco products in our "friend's" throw-sheet last week. It seems to be generally hoped that the absence last week is an indication that B. & W. have decided to divert their advertising to fair channels.

As you know, B. & W.'s union-made products have become quite popular with union men, so it seems only fair that B. & W. should advertise their products in publications which are fair to labor.

Fear of the Law Enforces NRA Codes, Andrews Says

New York.—Fear of conviction for violating the labor provisions of codes is what prevents numbers of low-wage and long-hour employers from flouting the code laws, according to a statement by Elmer F. Andrews, New York state industrial commissioner, at a meeting here to celebrate the application of the NRA label to the undergarment and negligee industry. He said:

"This registered label can be of real assistance to the code authority in obtaining day by day compliance with the fair trade practices and labor provisions of the code.

"Our experience in the department of labor indicates that, while the majority of employers are upright, there are an important minority who must be compelled through fear of prosecution, and often prosecution itself, to obey laws which in no way impose a hardship on industry but which must be enforced vigorously to protect the fair employer against the unfair competition of the unscrupulous employer."

LABOR FIGHTS FOR RIGHTS THROUGHOUT NATION

Washington, Aug. 2.—As longshoremen and marine workers on the Pacific coast voted for arbitration and ended a walkout which culminated in the San Francisco general strike, labor continued to fight for its rights throughout the nation, with Minneapolis, Kohler, Wis., and Chicago furnishing the highlights.

In Minneapolis, where teamsters and truck drivers went on strike July 17, Gov. Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, declared martial law when the employers refused to accept without reservations a peace plan proposed by federal mediators. The workers, on the other hand, voted overwhelmingly to accept the plan in full and without reservations.

Gov. Olson scathingly criticized the employers, branding the anti-union Citizens' Alliance as a "small clique of men who hate organized labor and are determined to crush it."

"I do not agree with you that the plea of a living wage by a family man receiving only $12 a week is answered by calling that man a communist," he told the alliance.

At Kohler, deputy marshals fired ito a crowd gathered outside the Kohler Manufacturing company's plant, and killed two and wounded forty. Earlier, they had smashed a picket line around the plant. After the shooting, Gov. Schmedeman ordered military control in Kohler and national guardsmen took charge.

Employes of the Kohler plant, which is owned by former Gov. Walter J. Kohler, formed an A. F. of L. union and asked recognition.

In Chicago, a strike of 800 stock handlers tied up the stock yards and threatened to extend to the packing houses. Reports that the strikers had refused to permit the cattle coming into the yards to be watered were denied by the men.

Twelve thousand painters struck in New York City in protest against proposed wage reductions and increases in working hours. The walkout affected members of thirteen locals in Manhattan, Bronx and Richmond boroughs.

Textile workers throughout Alabama continued their strike, while the United Textile Workers of America completed arrangements for a special international convention that may call a nation-wide walkout. The convention will be held in New York City beginning Aug. 13.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's association, announced that he had called off the strike of longshoremen on the Great Lakes, which has been in progress for eight weeks.

"The men are returning to work," he said. "The employers have promised to continue negotiations when the men return to work."

Strikes and threatened strikes were reported in other parts of the nation, with the situation changing from hour to hour.

Hosiery Workers Win Union Pact With Short Strike

Some 700 employes of the Holston Manufacturing company, Knoxville, returned to work Monday morning following a brief shutdown of the mill as a protest against reduced wages, 'stretchouts" and other unfavorable working conditions.

E. C. Curtis, investigator for the regional labor board, and Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, following a series of conferences with the mill management, announced that an agreement satisfactory to all concerned had been reached, and operations were resumed.

The pact, signed for a period of one year from Sept. 1, 1934, provides for complete recognition of the union, elimination of speed-up systems and other unfavorable working conditions, and submits the question of wages to the Atlanta labor board for adjudication.

The agreement, signed by the president and secretary of the Holston company and accredited representatives of the union, follows:

"This agreement, made and entered into this, the 28th day of July, 1934, by and between Branch No.....of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and the Holston Manufacturing company, of Knoxville, Tennessee, does set forth and stipulate the following:

"1. There shall be no additional tasks placed upon any worker, in accordance with the federal hosiery code under which the Holston Manufacturing company is now operating, or may operate in future.

"2. It is agreed that the workers go back to work on the scale of wages as proposed by the Holston Manufacturing company, under date of July 26th, 1934, as shown by Exhibit 'A' hereto attached, until such time as the regional labor board takes up the wage question for adjudication, both parties concerned shall have the right to appeal the decision of the regional labor board to the national labor board. It is further agreed final decision shall be binding on both parties involved.

"3. The Holston Manufacturing company will agree to discuss any changes in the scale of wages and conditions at any time, with a committee appointed by the workers, and if an agreement can not be reached, to submit such disagreement to the Atlanta regional labor board for arbitration.

"4. There shall be no discrimination against any of the striking employes or for employes affiliating with a union of their own choosing.

"5. It is agreed that this agreement shall be in effect until September 1st, 1935, from date."

Controversy With Insurance Co. Ended

With respect to the controversy that has existed between the Life and Casualty Insurance company of Tennessee and some of its agents, it was stated today by W. H. Helmick, manager and representing the company, and P. D. Ragon, representing the men, that all differences had been amicably settled and that the men would resume work for the company immediately.

SAYS HOSIERY MILL BOSSES RUIN BUSINESS

Selfishness Demoralized Trade, Held Declares.

WAR ON WORKERS BALKS RECOVERY

Union Official Again Urges United Action as Only Hope for Relief.

Hosiery mill executives, bent upon forcing workers to starvation wages and speeding up production regardless of ultimate consequences, are demoralizing the business, according to Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Conditions which the recovery program was designed to alleviate, it is intimated, are being made worse than obtained before the codes went into effect, and employer and employe are suffering alike from short-sightedness and selfishness of those who control the industry.

Mr. Held again appeals to the workers to continue to organize and be in position to meet the situation in the best possible manner. In a statement on the situation prepared for The Labor World this week the hosiery workers' official said:

"The American Federation of Hosiery Workers have for years been trying to convince the hosiery manufacturers that some radical changes must be made in the industry as regards hours of productive operation to bring it out of the demoralized state in which it found itself due to overdevelopment. This effort on the union's part of course fell upon deaf ears, the manufacturers always contending that they know how to conduct their own business.

"The industry at the time of the formation of the hosiery code was in a deplorable condition and the manufacturers were in the mood to try anything to attempt to bring the industry out of the rut. With this thought in mind, they adopted the hosiery code, as regards the forty hours work shift, with very little opposition. They thought that at least through this reduction of productive hours that the industry would have some semblance of stabilization. But what was the result of this shortening of the work week? Something happened that the manufacturers did not figure on, and they found that the production increased instead of decreasing. This came about through various causes: Many mills had only operated one shift previous to the code, and after its adoption they found that to offset the cut in hours they must operate two shifts. Also it was found in many instances that due to the shorter work week the hourly production of the worker had increased. This was not only brought about by the often made assertion of union labor that the less hours the worker was forced to work, increase his or her efficiency; but in many instances the employer or management increased the speed of the machines

Ten Millon Workers Are Idle Green Reports

Washington, Aug. 2.—Over ten million adult men and women, able and willing to work, are still kept in the jobless army by the refusal of the industrial oligarchs who own and control industry, supported by the national recovery administration, to apply on a national basis the 30-hour week for all industry.

Because of this national lockout, unparalleled in modern history, over sixteen and one-half million persons are supported by relief agencies.

These are the two outstanding facts in the July report on unemployment issued by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Unemployment Increasing.

"June marked the end of employment gains for the spring busy season of 1934," Mr. Green said. "The first half of the year closed with 10,312,000 still unemployed in industry and agriculture, and unemployment again on the increase due to summer lay-offs.

"Now that there is no further prospect for new jobs in industry until the fall season, it is time to take account of progress made and see where we stand.

Unemployed for Two Years.

"The 10,312,000 now out of work compares with 10,122,000 in October, after the re-employment drive of 1933. Although business activity during the first six months this year averaged 7 per cent higher than last October, this was not enough to create jobs. Industrial unemployment has steadily been above the October level. Business firms have succeeded in increasing activity without making any important reduction in the great standing army of job seekers. Recent surveys show that a large proportion of this standing army has been without work for two years or more.

"The unemployment increase from May to June was not large. Over 100,000 wage-earners were laid off from factories and 25,000 from stores, but this was offset in part by 75,000 taken on by farmers for the busy June season, 15,000 for road building and 10,000 on railroads. In all trades, there was an increase in unemployment of 64,000 from May to June.

Trade Union Jobless Increase.

"Trade union figures for the first part of July show a larger unemployment increase than in June. Unions report considerable numbers laid off in building, clothing trades and manufacturing, with smaller lay-offs in other trades. Our weighted figures show 19.6 per cent unemployed in June and 20.4 per cent early July, with 24 per cent on part time work each month.

Public Works Employ 1,810,000.

"The government is endeavoring to meet this increasing unemployment with increased work on public works administration and emergency relief administration work programs. PWA added nearly 100,000 to its payrolls in June, and the number on the ERA program rose from 858,000 at the end of May to 893,000 on July 5. The number at conservation camps declined from 312,000 in May to 256,000 in June. Thus the average number at work on all three of these emergency programs rose from 1,671,000 in May to 1,813,000 in June, and the payroll increased from $79,143,000 (May) to $86,779,000 (June.) Although 10,312,000 had no work in industry in June, since 1,813,000 had work under government emergency programs, the total number without work of any sort was 8,499,000. This compares to 8,577,000 in May.

Millions on Relief Rolls.

"The latest relief figures published show relief payments at the highest level during the depression. In April, there were 4,447,503 cases on relief rolls, including 16,826,000 persons. Relief payment totaled $112,527,000 (including those on ERA work program); this compares with $73,000,000 in April, 1933."

Jobless Figures for Year.

Accompanying Mr. Green's statement was an estimate of the number of totally unemployed workers for the past year, which showed that 12,204,000 were in the jobless army in June, 1933. The unemployed decreased to 10,769,000 in December, increased to 11,755,000 in January, and then decreased slightly each month until May with 10,248,000 out of work, and rose to 10,312,000 in June.

Hundreds Enjoy Annual Outing Painters' Union

Crowds Visit Warner Park to Enjoy Picnic Sponsored by Local Workers.

A crowd estimated at considerably more than 1,000 participated in the fourteenth annual outing of Local 226, Painters, Decorators, Paperhangers and Signwriters, staged last Friday at Warner Park, and the occasion was declared a huge success.

The morning program consisting of athletic and field events, was participated in by scores of men, women, boys and girls, and the prizes were keenly contested.

The barbecue at noon was a feature of the day, and the toothsome meal was enjoyed to the fullest.

Rain interfered with the afternoon feature, a baseball game between the Painters and Carpenters, which was interrupted in the third inning, with the score standing two-all.

P. P. Thurston was general chairman for the outing. The entertainment committee was composed of J. Paul Sanders, chairman; M. H. Ortwein, C. F. Weidner, G. D. Floyd and George Good.

POSTAL CLERKS EARLY VICTIMS OF POLITICIANS

Workers' Independence Came Through Union.

STATE SECRETARY DIGS INTO HISTORY

Hatcher Points Benefits of Organization for Uncle Sam's Employes.

Editor The Labor World.

At the recent convention of the Tennessee Federation of Postoffice Clerks, it was decided that we send weekly contributions to the leading labor papers of the state. As secretary-treasurer of this organization, I am sending herewith the first of a series of articles. It is my purpose to give an account of the early struggles of the various postal organizations in their efforts to organize and the very valuable assistance rendered them by organized labor, along with certain facts pertaining to the work in the postal service.

It will be greatly appreciated if you will give these articles space in your papers.

Thanking you, I am,

Fraternally yours,

E. R. HATCHER,

Secretary-Treasurer.

By E. R. HATCHER

Secretary-Treasurer Tennessee Federation Postal Clerks.

It was not until after congress had taken the first steps toward eliminating some of the worst abuses of postal employment that a definite and nation-wide organized movement for the improvement of working conditions was begun among postal employes. There had been social and mutual benefit associations, local in scope, among some of the employes since 1863. Although it is true these groups occasionally interested themselves in legislation or improved working conditions, such interest was but informal, and always secondary to their main purpose. Too often when seeking to better the lot of the force, these societies would enlist the aid of local politicians and thus they often became tied to the local political machine and in a way that was more to the benefit of the machine than to the employes.

Down almost to the nineties favoritism and petty politics were the rule of the postal service. A change in party or even faction, local or national, usually meant a change in the postoffice personnel from the postmaster down to the humblest employe. But this was taken much as a matter of course. Men got their jobs through political influence, and they lost them when that influence changed.

The system under which the service was run placed the employe at the mercy of the postmaster. Working conditions, even to his pay, were fixed by him and not by law. Postoffice clerks had no standing at Washington. Their position was more nearly that of their local offices than the United States government. The local postmaster paid them what he willed from an allotment made him by the department for that purpose from a lump sum appropriation. The postal officials naturally had their particular friends and supporters, and those employes with the best friends got the best jobs and the best pay. No man was ever certain of his pay or sure of his job. If something happened to his political friend, something was almost certain to happen to him. Not infrequently an employe was threatened with extra work, reduction in pay, or even dismissal if he failed to do what he was told. Employes often had their pay reduced to make funds for new men or provide increases for more favored. There was no such thing as an eight-hour law. Employes worked as long as the supervisors saw fit, without compensatory time or additional pay. There were orders for those who were to be off on Sundays to report for duty that day. All this caused a great deal of grumbling, dissatisfaction, and ineffective protest, but this condition continued for almost twenty years.

Yet the employes made practically no attempt to improve these condi-

What Next!

A new X-ray observation device, showing the anatomy of the least substantial body organs and even the blood vessels in their natural color, has been perfected by Luther G. Simjin, former director of the photographic department of the Yale Medical school. The invention, it is said, will show the structure and density of barely opaque parts that appear on present X-ray plates as shadowy forms.

36-HOUR WEEK CONSIDERED.

New York.—Members of the groups making up the cotton garment code authority met here to discuss the practicability of the 36-hour week. The meeting was attended by directors and alternates of all industries that make cotton garments.

A Good Job

The national recovery administration did a good job when it "cracked down" on L. Greif & Bro. of Baltimore, second largest clothing manufacturers in the United States, with an order instructing the men's clothing code authority to withhold labels from the concern, which operates ten factories in three states.

This drastic action was taken shortly after Federal Judge Coleman, of Baltimore, had continued until September an injunction restraining the NRA from withdrawing the Blue Eagle from the company. In his decision Judge Coleman indicated a friendly feeling for the most notorious wage chiselers who have been uncovered by NRA representatives.

It is claimed by the national compliance board by the men's clothing code authority and the national compliance board that the Greif company in three months paid its employes over $35,000 less than required by the code, and that the total short-wage payments approach $100,000.

It is predicted that unless the firm capitulates the action of the NRA will drive it out of business, which is the reward its anti-labor policy deserves. This prediction is sustained by the fact that it is a code violation, punishable with $500-a-day fines under the recovery act and also punishable under the federal trade commission act, for a manufacturer to make or distribute garments not containing an NRA label, and a similar violation for a retailer to purchase such clothing.

In addition, it is illegal for the company to make its own labels or to purchase them from anyone else but the code authority, so the company's source of supply is stopped, and it must retire from business.

It was a good day's work for the NRA.

Labor Not Taken for Ride

Preposterous statements are now being made about the San Francisco general strike. It is being asserted that communists took San Francisco labor for a ride and that labor made no effective resistance. Nothing could be further from the truth. San Francisco labor decided on the strike by vote of its membership and called it off by vote of its representatives.

The charge that San Francisco labor's action was due to "Red" domination seems part of a plan to spread the impression that labor had no grievance. Organized workers do not strike because some "agitator" urges a walkout. Labor knows the cost of strikes and does not call one except as a last resort to secure justice.

The pent-up resentment of years against exploitation was expressed by the San Francisco strike. Labor felt that it had just grievances that imperatively demanded redress. Anti-labor employers would like to have this important fact forgotten or ignored, hence they welcome and spread the suggestion that "Red" agitation was responsible for the walkout.

Dollfuss Doomed Himself

Chancellor Dollfuss doomed himself when in February he ruthlessly crushed the socialist workers' movement, chief support of democracy in Austria. With the help of the workers, he might have successfully fought the Nazis. But he took the advice of his reactionary backers, stamped out the socialist movement in blood and established a fascist government, only a little less autocratic than that of Hitler.

The inevitable result, which even a child could have foreseen, was the strengthening of Dollfuss' nazi opponents. Many of the embittered socialists entered the nazi ranks and just before the nazi putsch in which Dollfuss was murdered, his political police announced that socialists, communists and nazis had merged into a common front.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, protested in February against the "murderous attack" of Dollfuss on the peaceful socialist workers of Vienna. Now Dollfuss has fallen victim to a "murderous attack" from his nazi foes. He might have saved Austria for democracy and civilization, preventing the war which many fear threatens Europe. But instead he took the path which led to destruction and death.

Another Test of U. S. Mettle

The great drought now covering more than half of the United States is assuming the proportions of a major catastrophe. It is increasing the tax burden through federal spending on a big scale for the relief of the drought sufferers. It is lowering farm purchasing power, despite higher prices for farm products due to short crops. It is spreading despair among millions of farmers, victims of more than ten years of agricultural depression.

The drought seems certain to retard recovery, a fact that it will do no good to ignore. The situation is another test of the mettle of the American people. It calls for continued devotion to the general welfare and renewed effort on the part of all in the recovery program.

"Rights" That Need Denial

Under the NRA codes the right to employ child labor is denied employers. Decent employers do not want to handicap children by premature work. The NRA code merely compels the unscrupulous to refrain from doing what the honorable majority would not do.

So, too, in the matter of minimum wages. The codes restrain the heartless and the irresponsible from creating competitive conditions which destroy all decent standards of life.

In a word, the Government was asked to prevent a reckless minority from practices which injure the majority. Liberty creating a condition which drives children into factories when they should be at school, or which compels men and women to work at starvation wages, can profitably be curbed.

Would Help Transition

Labor saving devices should be a blessing to labor. The continuous greedy demand for profits and more profits has changed them to a curse. This has led to a heavy burden upon the consuming public for prices do not fall with cheaper machine production—on the contrary the price trend on machine manufactured goods has been upward. Profit grabbers have caused that.

Mechanization of industry will work revolutionary changes in the next few years. Millions of "white collar" men will go into the ranks of manual labor. Professional and small business men are already in the press. They are being starved out of their places and drop a peg as they take up whatever job may present—that is if they are fortunate enough to get a job. Labor sufferers equally for millions of disemployed are doomed never to return to their former trades.

The 30-hour week would be of tremendous help and would make the transition easier. It will lessen the shock of the tremendous change that is just ahead. This makes it all the more strange that the stupid industrialist persists in fighting the shorter day and shorter week. It would save him and stave off the day of his complete expropriation which he is hastening by his greed and utter lack of understanding of what is going on about him.

Organized labor stands consistently advocating the 30-hour week. It recognizes the necessity of the shorter hour, the more jobs, the better wages—in short, it recognizes the fact that without re-establishing the purchasing power for the millions of workers there can be no recovery no matter what methods of bootstrapping, ballyhooing and bellringing may be adopted.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Public officials could learn a lot about the unemployed by making a personal investigation of their plight, as Commissioner George E. Allen, of the District of Columbia, recently did. Allen put on old clothes, let his beard grow and lived among the unemployed in Chicago, Milwaukee and other mid-western cities for a week. In this short time he learned something of how it feels to be without a job in these times.

Commissioner Allen discovered that above everything else the unemployed want work, that "snooty" people run federal job agencies and that the reason communists have influence among the unemployed is because they will listen to them and fight for them.

"I found out beyond question that, as to 98 per cent of the people you find around relief stations and employment agencies, all they want is a job," Allen said. "And, furthermore, all of them hope they are going to get one. Tomorrow, perhaps, or the next day. How long this hope will hold out I don't know. But it's there now."

Many persons have suspected that government employment agencies were not so hot when it came to digging up jobs for the idle. Allen's investigation tends to confirm this suspicion. He evidently thinks that people charged with finding jobs for the unemployed must be shocked into real action, as he advocated "setting dynamite" under case workers and social workers to make them use their brains and imagination in finding work for the idle, or making work for them.

But even the best efforts of the job agencies would fail at finding work for all. There are simply not enough jobs to go around, as Allen discovered. He bore personal testimony to the effect that his bread line companions could not get a job—he tried many times and failed.

Labor Party Asks Drastic Changes In Social System

Immediate Public Ownership and Control of Key Industries Demanded in Program Submitted to British Electorate.

London.—Immediate public ownership of many key industries is demanded by the British labor party in a "program of action" issued under the title, "For Socialism and Peace."

The program, which was accompanied by an appeal to the nation, was prepared in anticipation of the next general election.

The program provides for drastic reorganization "and for the most part nothing short of immediate public ownership and control" of many key industries; nationalization of banks and other financial institutions; revision of parliamentary procedure to permit the speedy approval of various measures of socialist reconstruction and in certain circumstances abolition of the house of lords.

"The pivot of any economic and social system loes in the control of its currency, its banking institutions and its methods of investment," the program says.

The Bank of England, therefore, and joint stock banks, it continues, should be brought under public ownership, and as "no policy of economic reconstruction can succeed unless there is control of new capital issues" it is apparent the direction of capital investment is also to be controlled.

The manifesto says the control of primary industries and services is an "essential foundation step" and drastic reorganization with, in most cases, immediate public ownership and control is stipulated regarding transport, electricity, water, iron, coal, steel, gas, agriculture, textiles, shipping, ship-building and engineering.

"The labor party," it adds, "is essentially a democratic party. It seeks to attain its purposes by persuasion, not violence, and to maintain the right to full freedom of criticism and association, without which human life is deprived of dignity and fullness.

"Fascism provides no remedy for our economic and social troubles. It would deepen and aggravate them. Fascism is merely capitalism in its worst and most brutal form."

TEXTILE WORKERS' CONVENTION TO CALL BIG WALKOUT UNLESS EMPLOYERS CHANGE ATTITUDE

Critical Situation Exists in Textile Industries and Only Co-operation by Managements With Union to Adjust Grievances Can Avert Nation-wide Strike, President McMahon Says.

New York City, Aug. 2.—Arrangements for a special convention of the United Textile Workers of America which may call a nation-wide strike have been completed by the emergency committee of the union. The convention will meet here beginning Aug. 13.

President Thomas F. McMahon announced that a most critical situation exists in the cotton, woolen and worsted, silk and rayon industries that a number of employers are taking advantage of the low level of employment by using methods of discrimination and reducing the working standard of those employed.

He said that the organization will most certainly support an active movement for the 30-hour work week, and unless the employers in the textile industry show some inclination to co-operate with labor in the adjustment of grievances, the convention will vote in favor of strike.

Vice-President Francis J. Gorman was authorized to return to Washington to continue the conferences with administration officials in an endeavor to secure an adjustment of existing difficulties on the question of wages, hours and machine load before the convention.

Reports from Alabama representatives, according to the leaders of the United Textile Workers of America, show an utter disregard for the principles of NRA and a most shameful situation caused by extremely low wages and excessive machine load. The strike in Alabama is one of the main reasons for the special convention.

Speakers invited to address the convention include Secretary of Labor Perkins; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, with officials of the state and city federations of labor.

Biggest Convention Expected.

It is expected that credentials of over 700 local unions will be turned in and the attendance will be larger than any previous convention.

The executive council of the union will meet the week prior to the convention for the purpose of examining reports of organizers and officials.

Delegates from North Carolina have been granted permission to attend the convention of the North Carolina State Federation of Labor opening on the same date as the textile convention with the understanding that no definite action will be taken in the cotton situation until they arrive in New York.

FEDERAL RELIEF SURVEY SEEKS SPECIFIC UNEMPLOYMENT FACTS

Study Expected to Show How Many Persons Are Likely to Be Permanently Dependent on Relief.

Washington, Aug. 2.—A survey determining how many persons on relief rolls are capable of being gainfully employed, and how many are likely to be permanently dependent upon some type of relief, is now being conducted in eighty key areas throughout the country by the federal emergency relief administration.

Other factual information being collected at the same time is expected to be highly useful, not only in developing work programs and formulation of relief policies, but in the weeding from relief rolls of persons not entitled to such aid.

Girrington Gill, acting federal emergency relief administrator, in making this announcement pointed out that this is the first time that such a survey and analysis ever has been made on a large scale. Total numbers of persons and families on relief had been obtained, but there has been no answer, previously, to such vital questions as "who are these recipients, why are they on relief and what can be done, if anything, about getting them off, etc."

Results Ready in Fall.

A total of 2,625 interviewers, clerks and supervisors are gathering and compiling data. The results of the survey will be available in the early fall.

Special grants, over and above all other allotments, were made to the state relief administrations for the survey, the total cost of which, including final completion of the report, will be about $300,000.

In addition to ascertaining the number and proportion of persons on relief rolls who are capable of employment in industry, and those who will, presumably, be permanent charges upon some type of relief activity, the survey purposes are as follows:

To secure a distribution by occupation, industry, sex, age, color, nativity, etc., of employable persons receiving relief, to throw light on the problems faced in returning these persons to a self-supporting basis, and to aid in the planning of work relief programs.

To determine how many families receiving relief contain employable persons, and may therefore be expected to leave the relief rolls as jobs become available.

To throw light on the problems of what disposition should be made of non-employable persons and families, and the types of relief which should be provided for them.

To determine how many relief persons are able to receive work relief.

To throw light on local administrative standards and practices, indicating the degree to which local administrators have adhered to the policy expressed in federal relief legislation—that the funds supplied are emergency in character and are to be used for the relief of need due to unemployment.

To indicate the extent to which relief has demoralized the unemployed—whether relief is developing a class disinclined to work although physically able to do so.

To throw light on the question of occupational shifts in industry.

It is expected the facts revealed by the survey will be the basis of the administration's great social program and the study is being watched with deep interest in government circles. The survey will give the first accurate picture of the actual condition of the nation today, it is believed.

HUNDREDS OF FOUNDRY WORKERS GO ON STRIKE

Union Shop, Check-Off Dues System, and Higher Wages Demanded.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—About 850 union employes of the Central Foundry company here walked out after company officials refused the demand of the shop committee for the union shop and check-off system whereby union dues are deducted from pay checks by the employer and turned over to union officials. The shop committee specifically demanded that the superintendent advance union initiation dues for several new members.

Rome, Ga.—The work of four stove foundries here was materially checked when about 550 employes struck for higher wages. The foundries affected are the Southern Co-operative Stove company, Rome Stove and Range company, Shanks Stove and Range company and the Standard Stove and Range company.

Black-Draught Brings Refreshing Relief of Constipation Troubles

Constipation produces many disagreeable sensations, several of which are mentioned by Mr. T. E. Stith, of Boonville, Ind., who writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught many years when needed for biliousness and other minor ills when a laxative was needed. I have a tight feeling in my chest when I get bilious. I get dizzy and feel very tired, just don't feel like doing my work. After taking Black-Draught, I feel much better. This is why I continue to use it when needed." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught is a good, purely vegetable laxative, obtainable for 25¢ a package.

MORE ABOUT MILL BOSSES

or force the employe under duress to increase their output. Therefore, now the manufacturers find themselves in the same, if not worse, condition than at the time the code was first adopted.

"We find most hosiery mills working under curtailment while others are closed entirely. Due to this condition, the hosiery code authority recommended to the industry, several weeks ago, that the industry as a whole shut down for two weeks, and upon reopening adopt the 35-hour workweek with an increase or the same minimum of wages to the workers. Did the manufacturers adopt this sane policy? They certainly did not. They made such a howl against it that the code authority withdrew the proposal. They turned this proposal down even though, due to the stocks on hand, that the bottom of the hosiery market is again falling out and the manufacturers find themselves at the mercy of the buyer. How will the hosiery manufacturer meet this old situation? By the only method he knows, and that is, take it out of the wages of the worker, of course.

"This is not only supposition on the writer's part. It is being brought to his attention every day where the management is either hinting at wage cuts or is putting them into effect. Only last week in Knoxville the workers of the Holston Manufacturing company walked out on strike in protest against a drastic cut in their wage rate. This week the workers at the Nick-a-Jack are faced with the same situation. If this thing is allowed to continue there is no telling where it will end. It is the same old story that these so-called captains of industry try to put over on the worker. If they will agree to a cut in rates they will be in a better position to get orders. They still believe that they are the only ones with this bright thought in mind. The net result is that a cycle of wage cutting begins and in a short time they find themselves in the same competitive position, but the worker finds herself or himself the loser in earning power. I have tried to point these things out to the hosiery workers in this section for a year, and still they will not believe it until it hits home.

"Therefore, once again I am appealing to the hosiery worker to awaken and band themselves together into strong labor unions to offset these wage cuts.

"If the manufacturers have not the intelligence to adopt a more sane policy as regards a shorter workweek the worker, by a strong concerted effort must bring it about. This is the only way that they will bring about a more stable condition in the industry and not always be facing wage cuts."

EMPLOYER CAMPAIGN OF MURDER, SPYING, COERCION, SOWED SEED OF GREAT PACIFIC COAST STRIKE

Organizations of big business have let loose their fire at the Pacific coast strikers. It has even been charged that the strike in San Francisco constituted revolution.

Let's look at some history and see what is there revealed.

Center of the employers' line of attack in San Francisco is the industrial association. The San Francisco Industrial association is a part of the State Industrial association.

Working along lines planned out during the World war, the industrial association emerged from that conflict determined to smash union labor and with a war chest into which banks and industries of San Francisco has poured enormous piles of ready cash. Contributions to the war chest for the fight to smash labor ran $10,000 and $15,000 each. Standard Oil and Southern Pacific gave $30,000. There were some 1,800 contributors. That's the outfit that has been directing the war against labor on the Pacific coast in the last few weeks.

The history, going back through the years, is filled with stories of intrigue, murder of union men, use of spies within unions and the throttling of interstate commerce.

It was Atty.-Gen. A. Mitchell Palmer who sought to enjoin the industrial association from interference with interstate commerce under the anti-trust laws. The Higher courts turned Palmer down, but plenty of interference was proved. The courts held, somewhat in accord with the "rule of reason" idea, that the thing hadn't gone far enough to warrant a permanent injunction.

Here was the industrial association plan: No union work was to be allowed where it could possibly be stopped. Building materials were kept out of the state by the power of this business gang, unless they were non-union. Union contractors found themselves absolutely unable to buy material.

The industrial association built great storage yards for all manner of building material and contractors were forced to buy from these yards or go without. A regular permit system was in use. Union contractors could get no permits to buy materials. Likewise an air-tight system was in use for the employment of mechanics. Each mechanic signed a contract to work when and where ordered. The man who refused to work when and where the association ordered him to work was fired and without any chance for another job.

The International Molders' union counts at least two members murdered in that conflict.

The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International union went to the expense of building a brick plant in El Paso, Tex., in order that union employers in San Francisco might be able to get brick for their jobs.

Union contractors and union foundrymen found themselves unable to borrow money from the banks, most of which had given $10,000 or more each to the industrial association's war chest.

The State Industrial association sought to smash labor all along the line. It was the Harrison Gray Otis idea made state-wide. But labor in San Francisco never was smashed. It survived every attack. It survived, but the employers' attack never ceased. That is the background upon which the strike of the last few weeks rests. It is a background of employer hatred, spy operations, murder, coercion and the determination that unionism has no right to exist.

tions through organized pressure. Their action was not concerted, but individual political "pull." Men with the "right friend" always stood a good chance to have their conditions improved and their grievances adjusted. But in 1883 congress passed the Pendleton civil service act. From then on things began to change. Political influence in the service was reduced, and although it still continued to play its part, and does so even today, its role became irregular

Gradually, as the patronage of these lower positions disappeared, congressmen and politicians generally began to lose interest in the postoffice clerks and carriers, and these workers, thrown on their own resources, soon found it necessary to unite among themselves in order to protect their interests and improve their lot. Besides, with their positions made permanent, postal employes saw that they had a stake in the service and in good working conditions which they had not had before. Previously a man was in a government job one year and out of it the next, and it did not make much difference if working conditions were not so good. But now these men began to feel that they were in the service to stay, much as printers and machinists were in their crafts to stay. The organized movement among postal workers was the natural outcome of this changed condition.

Boxing Bouts To Feature Champions

Tuesday night at the Rossville arena Matchmaker Bob Bumpus will stage his Chattanooga vs. Knoxville boxing bouts, featuring many champions of the Knoxville and Chattanooga Golden Glove tournaments. The Chattanooga boys are "out for blood" this time, Bumpus stated, as the Lookout boys were soundly whipped by the Knoxvillians a few weeks ago when they invaded the Smoky city.

The matchmaker announced there would be ten bouts, each billed for three three-minute rounds. Fenton Gentry will be the referee, Bumpus said.

The card follows:

Bill Brown, 195, Chattanooga, vs. Eddie Crawford, 210, Knoxville.

Herman Davis, 170, Chattanooga, vs. Roswell Terry, 175, Knoxville.

Ray Peace, 158, Chattanooga, vs. Vernon Transil, 160, Knoxville.

Joe Williams, 147, Chattanooga, vs. Joe Gullo, 147, Knoxville.

Jack Lively, 137, Chattanooga, vs. Lonnie Alexander, 136, Knoxville.

Izzy Pearlman, 125, Chattanooga, vs. Ben Underwood, 126, Knoxville.

H. P. Davis, 115, Chattanooga, vs. Eddie Knowling, 118, Knoxville.

There will be three other bouts, the promoter stated, to be announced later.

the work of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association. They have, for the most part, contributed regularly to the work of the association and most of them have given the association every other assistance which has been asked for or expected.

The Lebanon Woolen mills, of which I am president, sent the association a check for $100 on Jan. 5 of this year, as they have done regularly for nineteen years. The officers and directors of that mill feel that this is one of the best investments the mill is making, particularly this year. I believe the association deserves this additional financial support and because I know funds are needed badly enough to warrant this request, I am today having the mill send the association another check for $25.00.

I am going to personally ask each of the 600 concerns receiving this letter to immediately mail the association a check, ranging from $10.00 to $25.00, according to the "ability to pay" condition of the member, and I hope this will be done at once. If the response is as ready and as generous as I believe it will be, the money received will take care of the current bills and will enable the association to carry on through this year.

Agencies unfriendly to industry are organizing and campaigning in this state and retarding, and otherwise hurtful legislation, is being proposed and advocated. Industry must guard its own destinies and do it now, or the time will come when industries in Tennessee will find themselves surrounded by the same conditions which are confronting those in adjoining and other states.

Sincerely, cordially and faithfully yours,

JOHN E. EDGERTON,
President.

COAL MINERS LOSE JOBS

Philadelphia, Pa.—Operators of anthracite mines in Pennsylvania slashed the number of employes 10 per cent and reduced the amount of wages paid 17 per cent from May to June, according to figures compiled by the Philadelphia Reserve bank from original reports received by the Anthracite Institute from thirty-four companies.

The companies operate 137 collieries, which employed about 80,000 workers. Their weekly earnings amount to $2,156,000. In the past eight years employment in this period has registered decreases.

Operating time, as measured by employe-hours actually worked in June in the collieries of thirty companies, decreased 20 per cent as compared with May.

GREEN ISSUES HOT CHALLENGE TO INDUSTRY

Must Provide Jobs or Quit, Says Labor Head.

SEES URGENT NEED FOR DECISIVE ACTION

Intimates Society Must Take Over Problem If Not Solved.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 9.—Work is what the idle crave, work is what they must have and if private industry cannot give them work, society must take over the means of production and provide employment, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, warned as the federation's executive council met here.

Industry has virtually abdicated in the face of the unemployment crisis, Mr. Green charged, declaring that unemployment was still the outstanding problem before the nation and that labor stands for complete utilization of our productive capacity to furnish essential goods and services.

President Green said that the discussions of the executive council would emphasize the need for prompt and decisive action in dealing with the unemployment problem. He added that the latest figures indicate there are still more than ten million unemployed.

Men Must Have Work.

"Despite the increase of employment due to NRA and to the expenditure of vast relief funds," Mr. Green continued, "the slack in unemployment is not being taken up rapidly enough. Many millions are on public relief rolls. While relief is a necessity, continued dependence upon public funds for food and shelter is sapping the initiative, morale and sturdy qualities of our American manhood. Work is what men crave and work is what they must have."

Indicting private industry for its failure to deal with the unemployment problem and declaring that if private industry does not act, the nation will, Mr. Green said:

"Private industry has lagged in the task of increasing employment. There is a steady demand for goods. Prices are going up. Profits for private industry are in sight. The banks are bulging with deposits and credits are ample and available to prime the pump of business activity.

Is Industry Beaten?

"Why then the delay? Surely industry is not imbued with a feeling of defeat at a time when it can swiftly carry our nation to the beginning of a decided revival.

"With our vast resources, our unbounding technique, our efficient management and our tremendous home market, surely industry would not sell America short.

"Are our captains of industry only fair-weather leaders? Have they, too, been affected by public relief? Has the RFC dole and the other subsidies to industry so broken down their much-vaunted initiative that our industrialists are without enough ambition to plan how to fight ther way out?

Leaders Show Incapacity.

"Are the sons of the pioneers who constructed the American railroads, who harnessed the waterfalls and who built up the greatest productive machine in the history of the world ready to capitulate to the absentee ownership and control of bankers far removed from the honest sweat of factory, mill and mine management?

"Surely our industrialists cannot confess that the problem of unemployment has them licked. If they capitulate, now that the bankers, too, have shown their incapacity, who will keep our industrial machines going? Who will turn out the shoes, clothing and goods required to keep our population alive and comfortable? Our workers in the mills, stores and places of employment can be depended upon to stick to their tasks if they are permitted access to the machines. But who will direct them if their business men capitulate?

Action by Society Foreseen.

"Will it be necessary for society to take over the means of production? Will the government be forced, because of industry's failure to invite the eager and willing workers to march into the idle shops and throw the levers of the machines that will again pour out the endless amount of goods our people require? And will the government muster into service the alert technical and managerial brains that formerly directed the flow of these goods on behalf of the owners of industry?

"If the owners of industry default in their approach to these problems, abdicate in the presence of this economic crisis, will they not then forfeit their prerogatives and be compelled to stand aside while society itself, for good or evil, makes an attempt to cope with the task?

"These are questions which industry must ponder now before it is too late. The crisis is on us. A few months more and the opportunity may be lost to it, perhaps forever. Whatever may come, labor will stand on the side of complete utilization of our productive capacities in order that the whole of society may be furnished with essential goods and services."

Knights of Labor Forced 8-Hour Day For Letter Carriers

Affiliation With National Body Brought Results for Federal Workers.

By E. R. HATCHER
Secretary-Treasurer Tennessee Federation Postal Clerks.

(This is No. 2 in a series of articles written for The Labor World by Mr. Hatcher.)

While the carriers were winning their little success through their temporary organization, events began happening among workers outside. The Noble Order of Knights of Labor, which but a few years before had been a secret organization, was now looked upon by the workers, especially those outside the skilled crafts, as their all-powerful supporter and liberator. At this time the movement for the eight-hour day was rapidly gaining interest of all classes of workers.

The letter carriers, whose daily tours lasted from nine to eleven hours and in some cases longer, were as interested in the eight-hour movement as other classes of wage-earners. Since 1868 eight hours had constituted a day's work for laborers, workmen and mechanics in federal employ. When the carriers had asked that this act be enforced in their service, the department ruled that they were neither laborers, workmen or mechanics and therefore the law did not apply to them. The need for new legislation was apparent and the employes turned to the Knights of Labor as the agency most likely to get them what they wanted.

The movement to join the Knights began first in New York City in 1886 and about the same time in Brooklyn and Chicago and shortly afterwards in Omaha, Buffalo and a few other places. The legislative committee of the Knights of Labor drafted an eight-hour bill which was introduced in congress in 1886.

The department opposed the measure strongly, but that did not slacken the workers' efforts in its behalf. After much agitation their efforts began to show results. The bill, which now contained an overtime feature, was reported out and in spite of the protest of some of the members from the south and west, went on the statute books in May, 1888.

For some time prior to the eight-hour law there had been a growing realization among the men for the need of some form of national organization. The first real efforts toward this national organization came a year later when the carriers of Milwaukee issued a call for a gathering of carriers from all over the country to meet at their city in August, 1889. This meeting was not very successful, but soon afterwards the Milwaukee carriers again set their movement on foot and another call was sent out to the carriers of the nation to send delegates to a national convention in Boston the following year. So after several conferences delegates met in Boston in September, 1890, at which time a real national association of letter carriers was formed.

Following this convention fifty-three cities received branch charters from the national association. These included New York, Brooklyn, Chicago, Buffalo and the other cities which had previously established local assemblies of the Knights of Labor. Affiliation with the labor order had already proved to be a great asset.

ICE DELIVERY DRIVERS NOT OFFICIALLY TOLD REINSTATEMENT ORDER

No Official Confirmation of Press Stories Received Up to Friday Morning—Labor Board Decision Reported to Have Instructed Company to Re-Employ Five Union Leaders Allegedly Discharged for Organization Activities.

Five victims of the labor policies of the Chattanooga Ice Delivery company, discharged allegedly for activities in connection with the formation of a union of ice-wagon drivers several weeks ago, Friday morning had no formal notification of action by the Atlanta regional labor board, which press dispatches stated Wednesday had ordered reinstatement of the quintet, according to J. H. Peele, chairman of the group which appeared before the board together with officials of the delivery company a short time ago.

According to stories in the daily papers, management of the company denied having received official notice of the board's action, and continued to contend, even in face of the reported decision, that the workers were not discharged for union activities, but for "inefficiency."

In reference to this statement, Mr. Peele recalled Friday morning that the union was chartered June 6, and on the same afternoon he was discharged. Within approximately one week, he pointed out, four more of the most active members of the union were "let out," various reasons for their being discharged including "talking too much," "not attending a company meeting," "not greasing delivery wagon," etc., etc.

The ice delivery company delivers the product of the Atlantic Ice and Coal company, and maintains offices in the same building with that company on East Thirteenth street.

Five active members in the union who were discharged were Mr. Peele, Otis Cooper, John Davis, M. L. Trotter, Ray Patterson.

In view of stories concerning the "princely salaries" paid by the corporation to its employes, some citizens are wondering why the discharged men should desire reinstatement, unless, indeed, they hope through the organization to force something approaching a living wage.

Two pay envelopes of the company furnished The Labor World some time ago, said to be for a full week's work, show that one driver finished the week "all square" with the company, earning $11.94 and having exactly the same amount of "take-outs." A second, according to these envelopes, was not so fortunate, and although evening the score as to his weekly pay of $10.44, after "take-outs" were deducted, was indebted to the company, apparently, for a payment of 75 cents on a refrigerator. It was not stated whether purchase of the refrigerator was a requirement of the company. Neither was it explained whether the company "pulled" the refrigerator for failure to pay the weekly installment.

In the meantime, it was stated, the five former employes of the company are awaiting formal notification which has been promised by the board when a decision was reached.

The price of ice to the householder, which has remained at 50 cents per hundred pounds since the "war," is still unchanged.

BUSINESS ATTACKS ON NRA FALL FLAT IN FACE OF BIG 1934 EARNING GAINS

Great Corporations Continue to Pile Up Huge Profits Despite Pessimistic Darts Aimed at Recovery Program—Widespread Benefits Shown During First Six Months of Present Year.

New York City, Aug. 9.—Business and Wall Street attacks on the NRA and the whole recovery program fall flat when contrasted with current reports showing widespread business recovery the first six months of 1934.

In the face of profitable results revealed by the half year reports, it is difficult to understand the present pessimism and spirit of defeatism prevading part of the business world. There seems to be only one explanation: That business is still grouchy over what it considers to be curtailment of its rights under the recovery program and is again doing its best to discredit the program, despite the fact that it has benefited more by it than any other element of the nation.

Business has loudly squawked over paying the higher wages demanded by codes and has opposed organization of the workers to advance their standards of living. But payment of higher wages and the steady organization of its employes which has gone on has not prevented business from making remarkable gains in profits over the first six months of 1933.

Outstanding is the report of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet company, which showed a 215 per cent gain in net profits, a total of $2,416,887 for the first half of this year as compared with a net of $765,120 for the same period last year. Among other firms showing big gains were E. I. du Pont, Hershey Chocolte, Tide Water Oil, National Cash Register, Curtis Publishing company and Proctor & Gamble company.

Here are the figures, which tell their own story of recovery program benefits:

American Rolling Mills: Six months ending June 30, net profit $2,018,148 as compared with net loss of $659,325 in first half of 1933.

Tide Water Associated Oil company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, $2,678,385 net profit as compared with the net profit of $174,854 same period last year.

Atlas Powder company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, net profit, $677,107, as compared with $129,258 same period last year.

General Printing Ink corporation: Six months ending June 30, net profit, $356,326, as compared with $155,744 same period last year.

Loose-Wiles Biscuit company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, net profit, $725,314, against $764,910 for same period last year.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.: Six months ending June 30, net income, $23,553,598, as compared with $11,277,550 for same period last year.

United States Industrial Alcohol company: Six months ending June 30, net income, $957,378, against $299,155 first half of 1933.

Hercules Powder company: Six months ending June 30, net income of $1,801,481, compared with a net of $893,050 first half of 1933.

Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company: Six months ending June 30, net profit of $2,532,319, against $2,157,083 in first half of 1933.

Hershey Chocolate corporation and affiliated corporations: Six months ending June 30, net income of $2,493,250, compared with $1,991,023 same period last year.

National Cash Register company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, net profit of $1,002,947, compared with a net loss of $599,772 same period last year.

Wheeling Steel corporation and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, net profit of $1,076,178, contrasted with net loss of $320,276 same period last year.

Curtis Publishing company: First six months ending June 30, net earnings, $3,731,871, as compared with $1,500,726 same period last year.

Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc.: Six months ending June 30, net income, $258,351, compared with net profit of $82,619 same period last year.

United States Playing Card company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, net profit of $371,095 as compared with $50,400 same period last year.

Proctor & Gamble company and subsidiaries: Six months ending June 30, profit of $14,870,066, compared with $10,811,325 same period last year.

National Distillers Products corporation and subsidiaries: First six months, net profit of $5,798,163, as compared with $476,384 same period last year.

BRONX PRINTERS O. K. CODE.

New York City.—A group of employing printers in the Bronx, differing from the views of some seventy similar small shops which recently sent back the Blue Eagles distributed to them under the graphic arts code on the ground that wage provisions were unfair, has presented to local NRA officials a resolution deploring the action of the first group and indorsing the code. A spokesman for the group said it employed a majority of the mechanical workers in small print shops in the Bronx.

Hosiery Workers Plan Big Outing For August 25

All-Day Picnic and Barbecue To Be Staged at Lookout Lake by Branch 53.

An all-day picnic and barbecue, with athletic contests and sports events, is being planned by Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, to be staged at Lookout lake on Saturday, Aug. 25, and a committee consisting of C. M. Morrison, Leonard Lowe and R. V. Jester is busy preparing for a program which will be of interest to all ages.

The crowds will begin to gather, said Mr. Lowe, about 10 a.m., and thereafter the events will take place in approximately the following order: Girls' soft ball game, 10 a.m.; rifle matches, 11 a.m.; barbecue plate lunch, 12 m.; speaking and awarding of prizes, 12:30 p.m.; boys' ball game, 2 p.m.; footraces, 3 p.m. Swimming and aquatic contests will be held throughout the day, Mr. Lowe declared.

"Every hosiery worker in and around Chattanooga is urged to come and bring his or her friends and spend the day with us," the committee chairman explained. "Tickets, which will be 25 cents each, will entitle the holders to one barbecue plate, lemonade and participation in any of the activities. Progressive merchants are donating valuable prizes to be given winners of the contests, and a great crowd is expected to gather at the lake for this occasion.

"The picnic-barbecue is the climax of a most successful organizing campaign, and is in the nature of a celebration of this success. We hope to have many of our friends from other crafts spend the day with us also, and from present indications the outing will be most enjoyable for all."

Model Shoe Shop On "Unfair List"

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, through its executive board, Friday morning concurred in the action of Local 620, Shoe Repairers, in declaring the Model Shoe Rebuilders, at 19 East Eighth street, "unfair to organized labor," and pickets were patroling the vicinity of the Model shop Friday announcing the fact to the public.

The Model shop has apparently been a bone of contention for some weeks, to both the local members and the master repairers' organization, and placards announcing the firm as "unfair to the NRA" have been paraded in front of the shop.

Some time ago it was announced that the management of the shop, which is a branch of a chain with headquarters in Nashville, discharged a union repairer and replaced him with a non-union worker. All efforts to adjust the matter, and appeals to the Nashville operators to sign the same agreement with the local which other shoe repairers signed, it is said, were unavailing, and after several weeks' effort on the part of union officials and Central Body representatives to adjust the difficulty, the result was as announced above.

It was declared the Nashville operator of the shop refused point-blank to deal with the organization, and that the union committee had no other course than to declare the shop "unfair."

Bakers Celebrate First Anniversary

Local Bakers and Salesmen celebrated the first anniversary of their organization on Wednesday, Aug. 1, with an all-day picnic at Pan Gap. Hundreds of friends of the "boys" spent the day at the popular resort, and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

Committee on arrangements was George Hattenback, R. J. Gentry, J. E. Payne, Bob Rogers and C. E. Bales.

Members of the local declared their intention of making the outing an annual affair, and inviting all trades unionists and their friends to participate.

First Bum—I'm looking for the president of this railroad.

Second Bum—Well, you don't expect to find him here, do you?

First Bum—Oh, I don't know, I'm on his track.

MILL OWNERS SADDLE DEBT ON UNEMPLOYED

Relief Agencies Used to Enslave Labor.

HOSIERY WORKERS' OFFICIAL PROTESTS

Declares System "Most Vicious Form of Industrial Peonage."

Washington, Aug. 9.—Relief officials in the south are aiding and abetting a system which produces the most vicious form of industrial peonage. This charge was made by Lawrence Hogan, representative of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in North Carolina, to the F. E. R. A. officials here yesterday. Hogan asserts that he has headed delegations of mill workers to local relief officials, who, instead of giving aid, have insisted upon arranging with mill owners that these workers accept credit at company stores. This practice burdens poorly paid mill workers with a load of debt too heavy to carry, Hogan says.

Hogan gave F. E. R. A. officials the names of certain cotton mill owners in North Carolina who are forcing employes to sign chattel mortgages on their furniture as security for food bills at company stores while they are unemployed.

"Prices at the company stores are usually 20 per cent higher than at the so-called cash stores," Hogan pointed out. "The company stores carry no fresh vegetables and as a rule their stock is inferior to that carried by the merchants outside the mill villages. I have also complained to F. E. R. A. about certain cases where local relief officials insist that aid extended to starving seamless hosiery or textile workers are 'loans' and must be repaid to the state. Relief should be issued with no strings attached or entirely withheld. The federal authorities are providing virtually all the funds for relief in the southern states and must act more vigorously in forcing state officials to maintain standards of relief comparable to those in the north. Relief grants in the south are at best bad enough and always pitifully small.

"N. R. A. should investigate the misuse of credit at 'company stores' which multiplies all the evils of industrial feudalism which the new deal was supposed to eliminate. The worker who is obligated to run up a big bill to his employer through a twelve to fourteen-week shut-down, perhaps cannot catch up quickly enough to be out of debt before the next layoff or curtailment comes. Few workers who are in debt to their employers dare join a union or even demand that the mill owner abide by the rules and regulations of the textile code. Freedom of movement is prevented and the worker is tied to his job just as securely as the slave was tied. Relief officials must be specifically forbidden to have anything to do with evil practices of this sort and F. E. R. A. must be prepared to deny funds to those states where economic vice is perpetrated or countenanced," Hogan said.

Dairy Workers Hold An Enjoyable Outing

Approximately 100 members of Local 428, Dairy Workers, their families and friends enoyed an outing at Lake Winnepesaukah last Friday night, spreading a picnic lunch and enjoying refreshments furnished by a committee. Burkett Carr was in charge of arrangements, and it is said the unionists and their friends were unanimous in the opinion that Mr. Carr had done a good job of it.

ARBITRATION AWARD BOOSTS MAILERS' PAY

Cleveland, O.—Through an arbitration award by Judge Manuel Levine, of the Ohio court of appeals, Cleveland Mailers' Union No. 12 has been granted a wage increase of $3.50 per week. Hours continue at 48 for day and 42 for night work, the union's request for a 40-hour week being denied. The award was retroactive to Oct. 1, 1933.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Has labor indorsed the candidacy of Josephine Roche for governor of Colorado?

A.—Miss Roche's candidacy has been indorsed by Colorado labor.

Q.—Has the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers always been so named?

A.—No. The union was organized as the Western Federation of Miners. The present name was adopted in 1916.

Q.—Have powder workers a union?

A.—Yes. The United Powder and High Explosive Workers of America.

CREOSOTE WORKERS STRIKE.

Hattiesburg, Miss.—One hundred and fifty employes of the Gulf States Creosoting company are on strike here. The union workers voted unanimously to walk out. Labor leaders are negotiating with company officials regarding settlement of the strike, called in protest against discrimination against members of the local creosoting plant union organized in June as an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

Cardui Helped Lady For Nervousness and Run-Down Condition

"I have taken Cardui several times for weak, run-down condition and it has helped me," writes Mrs. Walter M. Coulon, of Forsyth, Ga. "I was nervous and suffering from a weak condition. There were days when I had to lie down during the day. I sent for six bottles of Cardui, as it had helped me before. Cardui gave me strength, stopped the nervousness and helped me in every way." . . . Cardui may be just what you need. It can't do you any harm, so why not try it? Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Fights for Rights Will Continue

Pointing out that the problem of labor relations still seems far from a satisfactory solution, the American Federation of Labor says in its current survey of business:

"Since the administration has not yet secured for workers their legal rights to organize, strikes have become necessary in very many localities to enforce the recovery act. These cannot help retarding business, but unless the law can be otherwise enforced, we cannot expect them to cease until workers have won recognition."

"Labor as an organized group," the Federation adds, "is emerging to perform its function in American society. This is a necessary part of the reorganization for economic control; without it we could not hope to keep the balance between producing and consuming power."

There is a great deal of hubbub in the air about strikes and some of the more robust souls among the dinosaurs are extremely angry because wage earners have the temerity to go out and actually tie up the works.

Of course it has been perfectly proper for whole cities full of business interests to band together, to raise huge funds and to enter into conspiracies not to employ union men. That has been a mere matter of stern conviction, backed by something like a religious conviction. Yes, for bosses it is O. K.—but for workers to band together, that's terrible. So they say.

This is prediction: There will be more strikes before there are fewer. Plenty more. The reason for this is not so much that workers are battling over wages and hours as it is that they are determined to enforce the law which guarantees the right to organize and bargain collectively.

Bosses are trying by every trick they know to nullify this law. They are the supreme nullificationists—a term by no means new in relation to reaction and the law.

So what? So the blame for the disturbance goes mostly on the shoulders of greed, personified by corporations and their retainers.

It all comes down to a battle over powers and rights. Rights mean power. Free and complete exercise of the right to bargain collectively will do a lot of things to the industrial structure. Bosses don't want those things done. They want dictatorial power, as of old. Conflict is inevitable and inescapable. Don't think otherwise.

As long as employers deny the right of the workers to organize there will be strikes. The moment the right of organization is granted, one big cause of strikes is removed. These are self-evident facts, plain to all, yet some employers do not see them.

Labor Board Makes Good Start

The first decision of the new national labor relations board was a good start in asserting one fundamental right of working men and women. It declared that under the national industrial recovery act employers do not have the legal right to discriminate against trade union members because of their union activities.

The decision was made in the case of the Jersey City-Lyndhurst Bus company, which was charged by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen with dismissing two of the brotherhood's members because of their work in the field of labor organization. The Newark regional labor board found the company guilty of the charge, and ordered the reinstatement of the men. The company bucked the order. The old national labor board sustained the ruling of the regional labor board. The company bucked that order.

The first decision of the new board was to confirm the ruling of the old board. The decision declared that unless the order for the reinstatement of the men was promptly complied with the company would be cited to the national recovery administration for withdrawal of the Blue Eagle and to the department of justice for prosecution under the national industrial recovery act.

Organized labor hopes and expects the board will continue to hew to the line in these cases involving the determination of subversive employers to deprive the workers of their clearly defined rights set forth in the labor section of the recovery act and the codes established by its authority.

It is also hoped that the department of justice will act promptly in prosecuting the cases cited to it by the board, and thus establish definitely that section 7-A of the recovery act means what it says about the right of the workers to organize and carry on trade union work without interference from employers.

Unsound Drought Proposal

Talk of moving tens of thousands of persons from the drought-stricken western half of the Dakotas and the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains is premature and smacks of the hysterical. The proposal was made without consideration of the way men behave and it is not strange that officials of South and North Dakota should scoff at it.

South Dakota's reaction to the proposal was made by Gov. Tom Berry, who said: "In my opinion the spirit of the people of South Dakota is still loyal to the soil of the state and investigation of drought-stricken families disclosed determination to fight it out." And Dr. H. L. Walster, dean of the North Dakota Agricultural college, observed: "I think we are becoming too excited about this drought. The evidence of history is that it has been dry before."

It has been dry before and there have been great crop failures in the region now suffering from the drought. But the men who settled the west stuck, and provided that the national economy can be managed so that they can make a living, they will stick now. Talk of transplanting whole populations from their chosen and hard-won homes is absurd unless their extremity is manifestly permanent. One season of crop failure, bad as it is this year, does not constitute such an extremity.

Ignoring Federal Court Order, NRA Takes Greif Firm's Eagle

Washington, Aug. 9.—Exercising what it believes is an administrative right under the law and the president's order, the national recovery administration has directed the men's clothing code authority to withhold Blue Eagle labels from the L. Greif & Bros., Inc., Baltimore, for violation of a labor provision of the code. The NRA action was taken despite a federal district court restraining order directed against the code authority.

At the same time, the NRA withdrew the Blue Eagle from the Bear Brand Hosiery company, because of discrimination against union workers by the company at its plant in Beaver Dam, Wis.

The NRA announced that the Greif firm, one of the largest in the industry, operating ten plants in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, has "been found in violation of a labor provision of the men's clothing code protecting wages of workers receiving less than $30 a week but in excess of the average of the lowest wage."

It was explained that this is the type of provision appearing in all codes, designed to prevent cutting all wages to code minimums. The action withdrawing the Blue Eagle followed a hearing July 5 before the NRA compliance division. The company was given two weeks in which to make restitution of back wages, said to amount to more than $100,000, or obtain an exemption from the code provisions. The company's application for exemption was denied by the code authority and the latter's action was upheld by the NRA.

Gratification over the NRA action was expressed by Sidney Hillman, NRA labor advisory board member and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in a statement in which he flayed the Greif concern as a leader among the few in the industry who are seeking to destroy the purposes of the code by instituting a system where the minimum wage becomes the maximum.

Marriage may be terrible, but surely single life can't be so full of charm and happiness. If it were don't you suppose many more people would surely stick to it?

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Despicable tactics used by some employers to cheat workers out of their just wages were revealed by Elmer F. Andrews, New York state industrial commissioner, in issuing a mandatory order affecting the wages of women and minors employed in laundries throughout the state. The order brings into force the law's penalties against laundry owners who fail to pay the wage rates established under New York's minimum fair wage law.

Promising "prompt and drastic action" to compel chiseling employers to obey the law, Commissioner Andrews told how underpaid workers are victimized.

"In view of the cunning, deceit and industrial terrorism existing in many of the non-complying plants," Andrews said, "I feel justified in authorizing resolute and, when necessary, ruthless action to wipe out the chiselers. As was brought out abundantly at public hearings, workers have been forced, under threat of being fired, to become accomplices in persistent evasion of the law.

"Their time clocks have been set forward in the morning and backward at night; they have been forced to sign payrolls for two, three and four dollars more than they received in wages; under the eyes of the employer they have been compelled to tell investigators that false records of working hours were correct; they have been paid the minimum wage and then forced to 'kick back' from two to four dollars of the wages received. Many workers have given us information and evidence of these practices."

The chiseling described by Commissioner Andrews is not confined to New York. A small minority of employers are seeking in every state to evade fair wage provisions of NRA codes and state laws. Strong trade unions are the best deterrent of such mean chiseling and is one of many good reasons why fair employers should support organization of their employes.

It was very clear that some of the opponents of the new deal need a brain trust of their own. One of them is now admitting the limitations of the "intellectual capacity of the individual."

Mr. George H. Houston, of the Baldwin Locomotive company and other corporations, is among those calling for "decentralization." He wants a reversal of the process which has organized the big corporations and monopolies, under the leadership of the Morgans, Rockefellers, et al. He asks for something which shall give us "unit enterprises sufficiently small to come within the scope of intellectual capacity of the individual."

Does Mr. Houston refer in this to the "rugged" individual?

It appears that what had gone before was as far as Mr. Houston could follow. But when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson put the whole darn caboodle into one big NRA, it was a trifle beyond Mr. Houston.

He goes a little farther than one would have exepcted the head of the Baldwin Locomotive works to go. Unless we remember what has been happening to the motive power on railways: Curiously enough, it was a company which has been making street cars which turned out the streamline train. The big locomotive engineers didn't seem to have registered in a field which one would think to be peculiarly their own.

Doubtless Mr. Houston thinks the "world is going to the dogs"—but they are the big dogs.

Queer thing about how TVA is affecting the economics of the country.

TVA got the electric companies to build low-priced things, like refrigerators and stoves. At first it "couldn't be done," then it was done for the Tennessee valley and now it is done for the whole country.

Of course the new things are not as fancy as the higher priced commodities. But they do the work and thousands and thousands of homes cannot have electric refrigerators. And a lot of folks can have jobs making them. Ditto for electric stoves.

Uncle Sam is doing a lot of queer things these days and nobody can tell where a lot of them will react on the lives of millions.

In the refrigerator and stove business the old structure is used. Regular manufacturers do the making, regular dealers do the selling. Friction is eliminated. Folks everywhere benefit.

STREET CAR WORKERS STRIKE IN TWO CITIES

Omaha, Neb.—Charging discrimination against them by the company, union employes of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company went on strike here early on the morning of July 26. H. N. Nelson, president of the union, said the workers were prepared to carry on "until a favorable agreement is reached or we are starved out."

The strike is the second in four months.

SAN FRANCISCO PRINTERS GET BACK '29 PAY SCALE

San Francisco, Aug. 9.—The wage scale of 1929 is restored by a new contract signed between San Francisco Typographical Union No. 21 and the San Francisco daily newspapers. A new contract with the same wage scale and terms was also signed by newspapers and union heads in Oakland. The contract, which restores the previous wage cut of 10 per cent, covers a one-year period expiring July 15, 1935.

The new agreement restores the wage scale written in the 1929 contract, which expired in April, 1933, and was succeeded by a one-year agreement making a 10 per cent salary cut. This contract expired April 9, 1934, but its terms remained in effect temporarily pending negotiations on a new agreement.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, took part in the negotiations. The new agreement was approved by the union by a 3-to-1 vote.

PAY INCREASE FOR NEWARK PRINTERS

Newark, N. J.—Wages of newspaper compositors will be $51.65 for a five-day week under an agreement reached by the wage scale committee of Newark Typographical union and the Newark Evening News, Newark Star-Eagle, Newark Morning Ledger and Newark Sunday Call. This represents an increase of $6.65 a week. The contract signed is on a six-day basis as provided in International Typographical union rules, the worker nominating a substitute for the sixth day as a means of distributing employment.

The new scale equals the 1929 scale. It is operative from July 6 at daily wages of $10.33, with 50 cents additional for the night shift and $1 additional for the third shift. The new contract will run for one year.

NOVA SCOTIA MINERS STRIKE.

Florence, N. S.—Six hundred miners employed by the Florence colliery here struck. The walkout completely tied up the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal company's biggest producer. The full force walked out after a brief discussion in the washhouse at the pithead. While the men issued no statement, the tie-up was believed to have been the outcome of a controversy over the status of men employed on the bankhead.

Canadian Bell Telephone Co. Restores Wages of Employes

Montreal. — The Bell Telephone company of Canada has now restored wages of its employes to pre-depression levels. The depression cuts amounted to 10 per cent, half of which was restored on April 1. In some of the exchanges the rotation day off, for which the employes are not paid, still remains in effect.

Staten Island Bus Men Strike for Higher Pay

New York.—One hundred bus drivers of the Staten Island Coach company struck when officials of the company refused their demand for a pay increase of 12½ cents an hour. The six lines of the company were completely tied up and 20,000 commuters from Manhattan traveled home by other transportation services.

The drivers have been receiving 50 cents an hour for an eight-hour day. Originally, the operators demanded an increase of 25 cents an hour. After this demand had been rejected by the company, the drivers appealed to the regional labor board, whose executive secretary, Benjamin Golden, suggested an increase of 12½ cents an hour. This compromise was acceptable to the drivers, but it was rejected by Samuel H. Serena, president of the company.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

DIVIDENDS SOAR AS STRIKES SPREAD

Payments by Big Canadian Corporations Make Highest Record in Years, Only Exceeded in December of 1930.

Montreal, Aug. 9.—While strikes spread, dividend payments of Canadian corporations in June established a new high record for that month. Aggregate dividend payments were more than double those in June last year; they have only been exceeded in the month of December, 1930.

While the big corporations have been making hay it does not appear that small business is prosperous. Current bank loans have been shrinking for some months and in June were considerably less than in the same month last year.

New Agreement Establishes 5-Day Week for Philadelphia Printers

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—Philadelphia Typographical Union No. 2 has signed a new wage agreement with the publishers of three Philadelphia newspapers establishing a five-day week with the old rate of pay. The agreement, retroactive to July 1, will extend to June 30, 1935. It was reached after several months of arbitration.

A proposal of a $37.80 minimum pay for a 37½-hour five-day week, lunch periods of a half hour not included, was accepted by the union scale committee after it rejected an offer of $40 for a 40-hour week, exclusive of lunch periods. The night scale was set at $40.30 with the understanding that negotiations for establishing of a lobster trick rate will be opened in October.

The agreement affects about 400 men on the Philadelphia Record, the Philadelphia Evening Ledger and the Philadelphia Daily News.

Building Code Agency Studies Southern Minimum Pay Protest

Washington, Aug. 9.—Sullivan W. Jones, chairman of the national construction planning and adjustment board, has begun a trip to North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, to make a study, at first hand, of the wage problem which has arisen in connection with the construction code as applying to construction work in these southern states. Jones' trip is being made by direction of his board.

During May, general contractors and others engaged in construction in these states protested the minimum wage of 40 cents per hour for common labor employed upon construction. They submitted petitions for a stay of this wage provision of the code. Subsequently a public hearing on the petition was held in Washington. The petitions for the stay and the statements made and briefs submitted at the public hearing contained little or no factual information. There was no proof that construction had been curtailed because of the allegedly high wage. No one in NRA felt competent to make an intelligent decision as to what should be done.

Under the construction industry code there has been established the national construction planning and adjustment board, intended to tackle just such problems as this one of the southern minimum wage. Following the appointment of the chairman by the president, the board began to function early in July, and this southern wage problem was promptly turned over to it by NRA.

In connection with his forthcoming trip, Mr. Jones stated that an early settlement of this difficult southern wage question is imperative if a return to ruthless, cut-throat competition and the starvation wage is to be avoided. A retrogression of that kind to conditions which the code abolished as unthinkable, and as reasonable human beings, the members of the industry will prevent it, Jones is confident.

Molders' Convention To Meet on Aug. 13

Delegates to Chicago Meeting Will Represent United States, Canada, Hawaii and Canal Zone.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—It is expected more than 300 persons will attend the twenty-eighth convention of the International Molders' Union of North America, to be held here beginning Monday, Aug. 13.

Delegates from Canada, Hawaii and Canal Zone, as well as from all parts of the United States, representing the broad jurisdiction of the union, will be present.

The I. M. N. of N. A. was the first American trade union to extend its jurisdiction to Canadian workers. This was done in 1863. Canadian locals, however, had been represented at the organization's convention two years earlier.

Molders working in Honlulu, Hawaii, were first granted a charter by the I. M. U. of N. A. executive board in 1901. The next year the charter was withdrawn because of difficulties in administration encountered in so remote a point. The I. M. N. of N. A. retained jurisdiction in Hawaii, however, and molders working there deposited their cards in the San Francisco local union. In 1919 the Honolulu molders again were granted a charter. Their local union, No. 350, has been functioning ever since.

In 1906 the molders working in Balboa (then called Gorgona), Canal Zone, were granted a charter. Local Union No. 131 has been in existence ever since that time.

This is the fourth time in the history of the International Molders' union that this organization has held its convention in Chicago. Chicago was the scene of the 1865, 1879 and 1895 conventions.

Hard Coal Employment Drop.

Philadelphia. — The number of workers employed in the Pennsylvania anthracite coal industry declined 10 per cent and the amount of wages dropped 17 per cent from May to June, following increases in the previous month, the Philadelphia Federal Reserve bank reports. In the last eight years employment in this period has registered decreases. On the basis of current reports and the figures of the bureau of mines, it appears that the entire Pennsylvania anthracite industry about the middle of June eployed 114,000 workers, or 45 per cent more than in June of last year. The total amount of wage payments was 55 per cont larger than a year ago.

Bosses Defy Textile Board on Union Issue

Mississippi Mills Refuse to Reinstate Discharged Workers and Regional Labor Board Is Asked to Intervene.

New Orleans.—Declaring that present federal officials are unable to cope with the threatening situation, W. G. Byars, Jackson, Miss., has appealed to the United States regional labor board here to take charge of labor difficulties expected to involve about 50,000 Mississippi cotton mill workers.

The Mississippi state cotton textile industrial relations board, of which Byars is a member, has decided in favor of the workers in four disputes involving plants at Magnolia, Tupelo, Kosciusko and Corinth, Miss., he reported, calling for the return of workers fired for union affiliation. The board has, however, been unable to enforce its decisions, and he believes that the New Orleans group has greater power, he said.

Holt Ross, American Federation of Labor representative, conferred on the situation with Charles H. Logan, secretary of the board at New Orleans. Ross, a native of Mississippi, whose jurisdiction covers that section, is expected to aid federal officials in bringing about settlement of the difficulty.

FIRE UNION BANNED.

Atlantic City.—Ignoring the fact that the laws of the land guarantee workers the right to organize, Atlantic City authorities have forbidden city firemen to form a union. Firemen who join the Uniformed Firemen's association, Local 189, International Association of Fire Fighters, now being organized here, will face charges of insubordination, an order issued by Chief Joseph Leeds says. Those who have already joined the union are ordered to give up their membership.

Arrest of Pickets Asked.

New York.—S. Belchman & Sons, Inc., wholesale dry goods merchants here, asked Supreme Court Justice William H. Black to issue warrants for the arrest of striking employes for contempt of court because the pickets carry signs asserting the firm is violating the labor provisions of the NRA code for wholesalers. Company officials contended the picketing was in violation of a court decree, and asserted that many orders have been canceled by customers throughout the country who have been led to believe that the company is unfair to its employes and has not complied with NRA rules.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Whereas, on the 1st day of July, 1930, Margaret W. Saunders (widow), of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, executed a deed of trust, conveying the property hereinafter described and advertised for sale, to me as Trustee, which deed of trust is found of record in Book C, Vol. 25, page 574 et seq., of the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee; and,

Whereas, said deed of trust was executed for the purpose of securing the payment of a certain indebtedness, fully described in said deed of trust, to which reference is made for a complete description; and default has been made in the payment of the indebtedness so secured and interest thereon; and the said Margaret W. Saunders has failed to perform covenants in the said deed of trust and has remained in default for more than thirty days and the holder of the indebtedness has made demand upon me, as Trustee, to sell the property conveyed by the said deed of trust, as therein provided, to satisfy the payment of said indebtedness and interest, as said holder has a right to do under the terms of said deed of trust;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by said deed of trust, I, C. W. K. Meacham, Trustee, will, sell, within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, at public outcry to the highest and best bidder for cash, in bar of all equities of redemption, dower and homestead, and all other exemptions of every kind, the following described real estate in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, to-wit:

ON THE 7th DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1934,

The south 100 feet of the north 200 feet of the west 100 feet of Lot 2, Map of Property, Revised Subdivision of St. Elmo, in the former Second Civil District, present City of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, as shown by plat of record in Plat Book No. 1, page 6, in the Register's office of said County, and being the same property conveyed to Margaret W. Saunders by said deeds of record in Hixson, Key et al, respectively, Book V, page 599, and the same property conveyed by W. R. Smith, single, reserved in Book C, Vol. 9, page 538, in said Register's office, which has been dedicated to the public as a part of West 42nd Street.

Subject to requirements of Zoning Ordinance No. 1843 of the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and any amendments thereto.

Said deed of trust recites that the title to the said property is clear, free and unencumbered, and title to the same is believed to be good, but the sale will be made as Trustee only.

C. W. K. MEACHAM, Trustee.

Delegates Off To Textile Meet

Delegates from several local textile unions will leave Saturday for New York City, where a special convention of the United Textile Workers of America will be held beginning Monday and probably lasting throughout next week.

The extraordinary session of the international union was called by the executive council to consider serious problems faced by the workers, and is expected to prove one of the most important in the entire history of the organization.

Local delegates which have been reported to The Labor World are: From Local 1744, Charles Puckett; Local 1785, W. T. McKenna; Local 1833, Chickamauga, J. T. Compton; Local 1898, Dalton, Tom Crowe.

SENATE COMMITTEE REPORT FLAYS INVESTMENT BANKERS FOR "SHOCKING" BOND SALES

Washington, Aug. 9.—Scorching criticism of practices of American investment bankers is made by the senate committee on banking and currency in the second instalment of its report on its investigation of stock exchanges and banking.

"Shocking" and "scandalous" are some of the terms used in the report to describe inbestment banking practices.

The sale of foreign securities, the report declares, "was characterized by practices and abuses which were violative of the most elementary principles of business ethics."

Activities in the flotation of foreign securities was further declared to constitute "one of the most scandalous chapters in the history of American investment banking."

In the sale of domestic issues, the report asserts, the incenttive to fair dealing with the client corporation was "generally absent" when there was no prospect of recurrent financing. In such case, the report proceeds, "the bankers readily forfeited the good will of the corporation to swell their profits."

"Sell-outs," by which securities of closed corporations were sold to the public, were condemned.

The uses of "preferred lists" by which prominent persons received special favors in the flotation of securities, were discussed from various angles with respect to their evils. The names of many prominent persons who had "preferred list" status are mentioned.

Leading bankers of the country are singled out for specific criticism.

It is declared that legislation enacted recently was needed to safeguard the investor "against the negligent and fraudulent practices perpetrated upon him in the past by incompetent and unscrupulous bankers, underwriters, dealers and issuers."

"Colossal loss sustained by the public" is cited, with the comment:

"The record of activities in the investment banking field and of the methods by which security issues were originated and sold to the American public, when disclosed at the hearings, were so shocking as to place beyond controversy the urgent need for legislation such as the banking act and the securities act of 1933."

SHOP WORKERS TAKE OVER COMPANY UNION CONTRACT

Boston, Aug. 9.—The System Federation, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and embracing the shop crafts on the Boston & Maine railroad, with base at Boston, has taken over the contract existing between the rail company and the "independent" allied crafts. This change follows a referendum submitted to the employes of the railroad shops and which resulted in favor of the System Federation by a wide margin.

The first subject discussed under the new arrangement was that of a protest lodged with the railroad heads by the federation against the cutting of working hours and layoffs at the Billerica, Mass., shops of the B. & M. This protest is being given close attention in conferences between the System Federation and executives of the B. & M. at Boston.

Johnson Is Again Asked To Act In Harriman Dispute

Mills Still Operating in Defiance of Federal Collective Bargaining Statute, Hosiery Workers Tell NRA Head.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Refused information at NRA headquarters as to the status of the case of the Harriman Hosiery company, Harriman, Tenn., the American Federation of Hosiery Workers made another demand to National Recovery Administrator Johnson for action in the case. The Harriman mills, it was pointed out, are still operating in defiance of federal statute.

The demand was telegraphed to General Johnson by John W. Edelman, representing the hosiery workers organization and the striking workers at the Harriman plant.

In his message, Edelman said George A. Lynch, NRA executive officer, "has had other instructions" aside from Johnson's telegram that the Harriman Blue Eagle should be removed a second time unless fifty strikers were re-employed immediately and collective bargaining assured.

Edelman also said Maj. George L. Berry, division administrator, opposed to the agreement signed by A. R. Glancy, another administrator, had informed him Lynch did not wish to reopen the case.

Edelman's telegram said:

"Newspapers report you as having ordered NRA officials to revise Glancy's pact with Harriman Hosiery mills. Dr. Peck, chairman labor advisory board, informs me his understanding of your conversation with him was stated thoroughly in newspaper report quoted here.

"Now Peck tells me Col. Lynch states he has had other instructions from you. Maj. Berry tells me Col. Lynch does not wish to go into the case at all.

"Meanwhile, Harriman mills continues to sell hosiery, much of it to relief agencies using federal funds, while operating in defiance of federal statute relating to collective bargaining with labor.

"The Harriman strikers have, as you know, been kicked around for more than nine months now. It's not funny to kick them some more in view of your admission that Deputy Commissioner Glancy broke promises you make to strikers regarding reinstatements.

"What is going to happen? I'm asking your office to wire this to you and am simultaneously releasing message to press. Forced to do this by Glancy's instructions to me to find out about his arrangements with Harriman company from newspapers."

Deputy Administrator Glancy, who refused to give Edelman information on the case, restored the Blue Eagle to the Harriman mills after it had been withdrawn for violation of the collective bargaining provision of the recovery act. Glancy acted in the absence of Gen. Johnson from Washington. Organized labor roundly criticized Glancy and challenged his authority to act. Protest was also made by the NRA labor advisory board and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Georgia Unions Score Road Pay

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 9.—The executive board of the Georgia Federation of Labor has condemned Gov. Talmadge and the state highway board for a "brutal and inexcusable effort to reduce Georgia laborers and their families to virtual peonage" and has appealed to "fair-minded citizens of Georgia" to help save labor from being forced "to the verge of starvation."

The labor representatives charged the highway board has refused to fix wage scales and hours of labor on state projects similar to the federal code provisions.

The resolution cited the more recent action of the highway board in requiring contractors on state projects to obtain labor at wages not higher than the rate prevailing in the communities in which the work is done, and said this requirement in some rural sections would force men to work for as low as 5 cents an hour.

Baggett-Knowles Bout Features Card

Monday night at the Rossville arena Berry Baggett meets Carl Knowles, one of the best lightweight boxers in the south, in the 10-round feature bout.

Baggett has developed into a great drawing card here and a crowd of more than 3,000 is expected.

In the semi-final bout Grady Gentry will meet Frankie Minor, of Cincinnati. They are billed to fight eight rounds. Smoke Walston will meet Shaw Skipper in a six-rounder, and Sailor Williams will meet Jack Johnson in the six-round opener.

NEW UNION IN METAL TRADES DEPT.

Washington. — The International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union of America has just affiliated with the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

Announcing the action of the union, the Metal Trades Department said: "The close affiliation of the Hod Carriers with metal tradesmen throughout the far-flung industrial field, and the common problems affecting the members of metal trades organizations and common laborers, presented a situation that could best be met by unity of action—hence the affiliation."

Tragic Death Of Tollett Deplored

E. J. Renie, H. C. Prince and H. Pratt, a committee appointed by Carpenters' Local 74 to express the sentiment of its members on the untimely and tragic death of Harry Tollett, who was shot down by a workhouse guard recently, prepared the following resolution of sympathy for the relatives of the deceased brother:

"Whereas, Harry Tollett, loyal member of Local 74, Carpenters and Joiners, met a tragic death recently; and,

"Whereas, Brother Tollett was a quiet and inoffensive citizen, true to his convictions and his friends; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this local union deplores his untimely taking away, and we express our heartfelt sympathy to surviving members of his family; be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be spread upon our minutes, furnished the family of Brother Tollett and The Labor World for publication."

OSSES GIVE EDGERTON PLEA COLD SHOULDER

ppeal for Funds Ignored by 491 of 600.

NION HATER TRIES IT AGAIN

mployers Receive Second Call for Money to Fight Workers.

Frantic appeal of John Edgerton, esident of the Tennessee Manufac- ers' association, for funds to "pro- t" members of the bosses' union ainst the encroachments of organ- d labor, published in these columns veral weeks ago, apparently has not en heeded by Tennessee employ- , many of whom are fair-minded ough to recognize the rights of ir employes and patriotic enough endeavor to co-operate with the ited States government in its pro- m to bring the nation safely ough its greatest crisis.

A follow-up letter from Edgerton, plied The Labor World this week a friendly member of the associa- n, calls attention to the fact that of the 600 members appealed to failed even to reply to the first ter soliciting funds.

Edgerton again reminds the em- yers that his sockmill, the Leba- n Woolen mills, contributed $25 to "cause," and urges his members "ante up" that much or more.

There will be general agreement h the union-hating official's state- nt that "the time has now come en industry must do some safe, e and sound thinking," and it s been suggested that failure of the employers to reply to Edgerton's peal for money to fight labor is an dication in itself that Tennessee nufacturers have possibly been do- just that.

Edgerton's second epistle follows in :

On July 24 I addressed a com- unication to 600 members of the Tennessee Manufacturers' asso- iation explaining in detail con- itions surrounding industry in Tennessee at the present time. n that letter I made a personal ppeal to the 600 members ask- ng that they do for the Tennes- ee Manufacturers' association he same as the Lebanon Woolen ills, stating "I am going to per- onally ask each of the 600 mem- ers receiving this letter to im- ediately mail the association a heck, ranging from $10 to $25, ccording to the 'ability to pay' ondition of the member, and I ope this will be done at once."

I am back this morning from Washington, where I have been or the past ten days, and I am rank enough to say to you that onditions today warrant co-op- rative efforts on the part of in- stry more than at any time nce I have been in the manu- acturing business. I am not an larmist, neither am I easily ayed by unwarranted tenden- es, but I do want to say to my llow-manufacturers that the me has now come when indus- y must do some safe, sane and und thinking and the Tennessee anufacturers' association is dicating its efforts and influ- ce in behalf of industry more an it has ever done before.

I am appealing, therefore, the cond time to 491 manufacturing ncerns not replying to my let- r, to send the Tennessee Man- facturers' association a check r as much as $25, if that nount can be spared; if not, en a lesser amount will be atefully accepted.

Thanking you for the splendid lp you have given in the past, am,

. E. EDGERTON, President.

FIGHTS COMPANY UNION.

ew Orleans.—Charges that a com- union had been formed, given a d contract and then used to lower es, were made by employes of the can Gulf Packing company and G. H. Pelham Packing company, goula, Miss., to the regional la- board. It was also charged that under 16 were being employed olation of NRA code provisions.

Ice Delivery Co. Employes Restored To Former Jobs

Order of Regional Board Accepted by Management and Unionists Back at Work.

Five former employes of the Chattanooga Ice Delivery company, discharged shortly after drivers for that concern had formed a local union, returned to work this week following an order from the Atlanta regional labor board, to which body the case was appealed, the management having informed the group, it was reported, that the company was "willing to let bygones be bygones" and restore the men to the payroll.

Several weeks ago a charter was received for the ice delivery concern's drivers, and within a few days five leading members of the new local were discharged, various reasons being given for cutting them off the payroll.

Decision of the labor board said:

"Careful consideration of the evidence presented convinces the board that these discharges would not have occurred had it not been for the union affiliation of the complainants. It is therefore recommended that the company immediately reinstate the complainants."

The new organization is thus given a boost, and organization activities, interrupted by the discharge of the union leaders, has been resumed, with prospect, it is said, of a 100 per cent membership in the near future.

Machinists Note Passing Veteran Officer-Member

Officers of Lodge 1450, Machinists, have named a committee to draw up suitable resolutions expressing regret of the membership in the loss of a loyal and faithful member and former officer, B. A. Arledge, who passed away at his home, 903 Highland Park avenue, following a long illness.

Mr. Arledge had served the organization in various official capacities, and was at one time a delegate to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. He was an employe of the Southern railroad here for some fifteen years, and numbered his friends by the hundreds.

Brown Writes Again For The Labor World

H. F. "Handsome Hal" Brown, aged bachelor and veteran member of Local 43, Plumbers and Steamfitters, this week emerged from his seclusion and announced his purpose of again writing on various topics for the entertainment of Labor World readers.

Brown left the first installment on the desk of the editor—a short squib—and handwriting experts are now endeavoring to decipher the effusion. If and when the efforts of these experts are successful, The Labor World's brain trust will be put to work in an effort to determine what (if anything) the old-timer is talking about, following which the article will be published in these columns.

Seriously, Mr. Brown has written reams of interesting and informative "copy" for this paper, and his efforts are appreciated, whether we can decipher his manuscript or not.

Chamber of Commerce Denies Ten Millions Are Unemployed

Calls American Federation Figures "Exaggerated" and "Unsettling Influence"—Employers' Statement Regarded as Smoke Screen to Conceal Fight on President's Recovery Program—Labor Bureau Will Investigate.

Washington, Aug. 16. — Special study of all available unemployment data, in an effort to determine more exactly the number of unemployed persons in the United States, has been started by the bureau of labor statistics. The work will include developing methods for making more reliable estimates, and give due consideration to all factors.

Action of the bureau comes as a result of a statement by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States declaring that only 7,300,000 persons are jobless in the country, and that the estimate of the American Federation of Labor that 10,300,000 persons are without jobs is excessive by 3,000,000. The Benjamin Franklin Institute of Philadelphia has estimated the volume of unemployment at 12,000,000.

Statement of Chamber Inaccurate.

Statement by the United States Chamber was in the nature of an assault upon the American Federation of Labor, and charging in effect that its unemployment estimate of 10,300,000 is inflated and excessive. At the same time, the chamber insisted that industry has done well if it has put 1,000,000 persons back to work in the last year. President Green recently asserted that industry is not playing its part in bringing about recovery.

"Current exaggeration of the number of unemployed has been an unsettling influence," asserted the chamber. No proposal was put forth, however, for providing jobs for any of the 7,300,000 which the chamber admitted are actually idle.

No formula of how the chamber arrived at its estimate was made public, except that temporary workers now engaged on CWA and PWA projects were not included.

The sweeping statement of the chamber, coupled with indefiniteness as to how estimates of unemployed are arrived at, led the bureau of statistics to undertake a study of the whole subject, and with the intention first of all of laying down a formula of how estimates are to be reached.

Need for Formula Stressed.

It was pointed out that in the absence of a formula for estimate, different organizations are unlikely to reach similar figures in determining the volume of unemployment, and that such figures may be expected to lead to controversy, and furnish the means of unwarranted attack upon employe groups.

There is no denial in governmental and administration circles in Washington that the volume of re-employment in the last year has been disappointingly small, and has fallen far below the expectations of both Gen. Johnson and the president. While no governmental estimate of existing unemployment has been made, the disposition has been to accept the figures of the American Federation of Labor as fair and unbiased, and reflecting as nearly an accurate estimate as can be reached.

In some governmental quarters the statement of the United States Chamber of Commerce is looked upon as more or less a "smoke screen," designed to conceal and deflect attention from the manifestly unsympathetic attitude which much of the industry has maintained toward the president's basic program of restoring jobs and livelihoods to the men and women thrown into idleness as a result of the depression.

Rumored Home Store At Chickamauga, Ga., To Close Doors Soon

Trades Unionists Hear Another Unit of McDonald's Chain Ready to Fold Up.

Chattanooga trades unionists were informed this week that a persistent rumor at Chickamauga, Ga., insists that the unit of Roy McDonald's "Home Stores" operated in the North Georgia city is about to "fold up."

Workers in Chickamauga declare that prior to the organization of a splendid textile local McDonald's so-called "Home Store" enjoyed a splendid business there, but after the workers learned of the position taken by McDonald with regard to his employes many chose to spend their money with merchants who believe a working man or woman is a human being entitled to a fair "break" from business interests who employ them.

It is not surprising locally that McDonald's Chickamauga unit is reported as having "hard sledding," when it is recalled that he expressed the opinion to Chattanooga workers that President Hoover made a mistake in 1928 when he pledged industrial leaders to maintain wages. "If wages had been cut in half at that time," the grocer-baker-dairyman-tire dealer-printer-publisher - individualist declared, "we would have been out of the depression." He further declared that normalcy would not return until wages were cut deeper and deeper.

McDonald's amazing business philosophy has been the subject for much comment and condemnation both on the part of workers and business men of Chattanooga for the past year or more, and the "sale" of his various stores to his employes when the code required payment of $35 per week to executives is frequently recalled. However, it should be explained that the grocer, baker, etc., pointed out that the alleged sale was not an effort to dodge the code, but was the result of a philanthropic "dream of years" on his part to turn the business over to his hard-working employes. Further, it is recalled that the dream faded when the code was lightened up and the pay for executives was reduced under the NRA.

Should the rumor of impending closing of the Chickamauga unit prove correct, it will mark the passing of another of McDonald's ventures, quite a few of the grocery stores having been "consolidated" during the past year.

A woman is a person who hates her furniture if it isn't like her neighbor's, and hates her hat if it is.

Grocery Clerks' Appeal for Union May Be Heeded

Will Give Every Assistance Desired by Workers, Organizer Declares.

Insistent appeals for an organization of local grocery clerks will be heeded if the clerks really desire to form a union, according to T. R. Cuthbert, voluntary organizer for the American Federation of Labor, and every possible assistance will be rendered these workers if and when their preference is indicated in a substantial manner.

Mr. Cuthbert recalled Friday morning that frequent queries have been received from individuals asking that a local union be formed, and in a statement to The Labor World he puts the question squarely up to the clerks themselves.

"For many months inquiries have come in to the organizing committee of the council asking why a grocery clerks' union is not started," he said. "We have waited, expecting some clerk to step forth and start something, but for some reason—possibly lack of experience—nothing has been done except to 'bawl out' the organizer for not doing it himself.

"If the grocery clerks really want a union let each clerk send in a card to The Labor World, 310 West Eighth street, saying: 'Yes, I want a union,' and then sign the card. If sufficient interest is shown, a meeting will be set and due notice made in both daily papers of the time and place.

"It is up to the grocery clerks now. We have no desire to force them into a union if they do not want one. And if a meeting is called, be there, or forever hold your peace."

Personal Notes Of Members Local 1785

The Labor World is indebted to Miss Edith Nucholls, active member of Local 1785, United Textile Workers of America, for the following personal notes:

We are glad to see Ina Green back at work after several weeks' absence, occasioned by an attack of appendicitis.

Mrs. R. E. Davis, wife of an active member of this local, is still confined to her home by illness.

W. T. McKenna and James Markwood are in New York attending the convention of the United Textile Workers of America.

Clerks Traveled Uncharted Course To Organization

Postal Employes Found Many Setbacks in Efforts to Form Union.

By E. R. HATCHER

(Secretary-Treasurer Tennessee Federation Postal Clerks)

(This is No. 3 in a series of articles written for The Labor World by Mr. Hatcher.)

The organized movement among the carriers was rather easy as compared to the postoffice clerks. After settlement of its early difficulties, the National Association of Letter Carriers grew into a strong and united organization and was able to hold together in spite of strong differences, while the ranks of the clerks had been split and their organization torn by internal strife.

Perhaps the main cause for this contrast is the different nature of the two services. The carriers all do practically the same work, while the clerks are engaged in a great variety of occupations, which vary from hard manual labor to that of highly trained distributors of mail, accountants and postal specialists of various kinds. There are the possibilities of special assignments at desirable windows and choice places in executive offices. There is work which is easy and work which is hard, assignments which are desirable and those which are not. When all this is considered it can be readily understood why there would be jealousies and rivalries among these workers which naturally led to rival factions.

Several attempts were made to bring the clerks together but without success until a group from various offices met in Washington, D. C., in 1884. Two years later another convention met, but were not successful in getting any legislation through congress. Meetings up to this time were not composed of delegates from permanent organizations but groups of workers who would send some of their number to Washington to look after their interests. This arrangement was not very satisfactory, so as in the carriers' organization it became apparent that there was great need for a national organization. A call was sent out to all first class offices to send delegates to Washingotn in February, 1890. Delegates from all parts of the union assembled and there formed the National Association of Post Office Clerks of the United States. Eight-hour day, 15-day vacation and classification bills were drawn and introduced in congress. In October the vacation bill became a law, but the other two measures failed.

The next congress these bills again failed of passage and soon this failure began to lead to discontent and caused the clerks to look elsewhere for help. They turned to the Knights of Labor, who seemed in a large measure responsible for the legislative success of their brother employes, the carriers. This failure also led to dissatisfaction with some of the leaders of the national association. So, after various meetings, conventions and much bitter discussion, several locals withdrew and formed another clerks' organization, known as the United Association of Post Office Clerks.

Of course there was much bitter feeling between these two groups, and during the period from 1897-1899, practically nothing was accomplished in a legislative way. After two years members of both organizations had become tired and disgusted with quarreling, so without a great deal of difficulty a plan of merger was agreed upon in 1899. Neither group absorbed the other. A new organization was founded, whose title the United National Association of Post Office Clerks preserved the names of both the old groups.

(Another article in this series will appear in next week's issue of The Labor World.)

Committee Named To Secure Data On TVA Progress

Central Body Moves to Assemble and Publish Facts on Power Question.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night took initial steps in a campaign to assemble data on the progress of the T. V. A. and secure all available facts with reference to the question of power, for the information of workers and the general public.

E. E. McDaniels was named chairman of a committee which is charged with the duty of keeping labor and its friends in this territory informed as to developments in the movement for cheaper electric energy. Mr. McDaniels called attention to the work of the Authority, and stated as his opinion that the workers should be kept in full knowledge of the activities of those who are in the forefront of the movement, as well as to inform themselves to such extent that an intelligent grasp of the entire situation may be had generally.

Other members of the committee are Stanton E. Smith, Jack Lindsay and R. M. Cooke, and this body is empowered to "draft" additional members from any local union it sees fit.

Facts and figures are to be gathered, and report made to Central Body, to the end that publicity may be given each development in the movement.

Central Body Puts O. K. on Board's Model Shop Ruling

Ruling of the executive board of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council that Local 620, Shoe Repairers, was justified in declaring the Model Shoe Repair Shop, 19 East Eighth street, "unfair to organized labor," was upheld by Central Body Monday night, and picketing of that concern is continuing, under direction of the shoemakers.

Officials of Local 620 said Friday morning the publicity campaign respecting the attitude of the chain company, which has headquarters in Nashville, will be continued, and that the fine response to the unionists' appeal for co-operation is appreciated.

It was recalled that the management of the chain declined to sign an agreement with the organization such as other concerns had agreed to some time ago.

J. W. Fuller Takes Trip to Kansas City

J. W. Fuller, secretary of the local lodge, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, left Chattanooga Thursday morning for Kansas City headquarters of the Brotherhood. Mr. Fuller will confer with grand lodge officials on matters of interest to the local lodge. He will return in about a week.

RESTORATION OF BLUE EAGLE WAS "ILLEGAL"

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot Raps Glancy Farce.

DELIVERS SPEECH, LEAVES UNHARMED

Visitors to Mill Town Gratified at Peaceful Outcome of Meeting.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor of Pennsylvania, went into Harriman, Tenn., last Tuesday, delivered a fiery address, and left, unharmed. Citizens of this section breathed a sigh of relief when the lady was reported as having safely returned to Knoxville, and it was suggested that possibly the large number of trades unionists who accompanied her precluded any effort on the part of the town's rulers to make her regret her visit.

In fact, it was pointed out, even Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, was allowed to sit on the platform with the lady, and was permitted himself to make a few remarks. Mr. Held was given an ovation by the great crowd assembled for the meeting.

Turning in of a false fire alarm when the meeting was in progress was regarded as possibly a mild gesture on the part of the labor-haters, but if the intention was to disperse the crowd by such a crude bit of byplay it was doomed to dismal failure, as the speaking was not even interrupted.

A detail of state highway police, with drawn revolvers, accompanied the cars occupied by Mrs. Pinchot and Mr. Held, and despite rumors that six carloads of mill gunmen left Harriman ahead of the visitors, no untoward incident was encountered on the return trip, they reported.

Several Chattanoogans who attended were pleased with the peaceful outcome, and expressed gratification that the mill barons had decided to allow the gathering to proceed without interference.

Speaking under the auspices of the Central Labor union of Knoxville, Mrs. Pinchot charged restoration of the Blue Eagle to the mills by John Glancy, special assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and former executive of General Motors, was "illegal."

"It is unbelievable that Glancy, an anti-union man, should have been selected for the position he holds and then allowed to misuse the power of his official position to make a mockery of the law he had sworn to enforce," she asserted.

"It would be about as logical to put the administration of our criminal law into the hands of Al Capone, Dillinger and other such—with perhaps one honest citizen worked in somewhere as an observer but without power to make decisions."

Mrs. Pinchot said both she and Gov. Pinchot resented the fact that restoration of the Blue Eagle forced the state emergency relief board of Pennsylvania to keep its contract with the Harriman mills.

"You can imagine how Mr. Pinchot felt about that," she said. "Unfortunately there was nothing that he could do legally. If there had been, it would have been a very different story."

Mrs. Pinchot declared that the depression was not over "because few rich men can afford to use their yachts again."

She also asserted that "the conception behind the NRA was statesmanlike and realistic—a vision of what could be accomplished by a co-ordinated, stabilized business organized for the good of industry, workers and consumers." However, she added that the movement had worked out to the advantage of big business, rather than the workers.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Has the American Federation of Labor ever denounced capital punishment?

A.—The 1895 convention declared capital punishment a barbarous and "revolting practice" and demanded its abolition.

Q.—What is the meaning of the term, "black money," as used by British workers?

A.—In some British trades involving special unpleasantness or damage to clothing, this is an extra payment, usually stipulated in the working rules, made because of the nature of the work.

Q.—How long have private detectives been used to fight organized labor?

A.—It is probable that private detectives have been used as spies and disrupters of trade unions almost since the beginning of the labor movement.

What Next!

The Swedes have produced something new in tents, one of the oldest of human inventions. The new tent, shown at Stockholm at an exhibition of Swedish inventions, is said to be superior for camping and military use to anything of the kind hitherto used. The center pole is replaced by a contrivance which stretches the canvas in roof form, this affording more space and enabling the occupants of the tent to stand upright. The floor is of canvas. The tent can be moved without being taken down.

Wisdom

Liberty has its roots in the hearts of the people, as the tree in the heart of the earth; like the tree it raises and spreads its branches to heaven; like the tree it is ceaseless in its growth, and it covers generations with its shade.—Victor Hugo.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Heze, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, run-down condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains" . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The Labor Press

Once it was popular to refer to many daily newspapers as "the kept press." There is much good reason to revive the label and pin it on some of the biggest daily newspapers of the land.

The kept press pours forth its blah against the unionization of labor. It weeps crocodile tears for the "right" of the worker to keep out of the union and "bargain" for himself. It parades in mock mourning for the passing of those dear company unions in whose eyes the corporation could do no wrong. The kept press is making a holy spectacle of itself.

If the wage-earners had about the newspapers the good sense they are showing about most other things today we should have a great band of strong weekly labor newspapers and an adequate number of fighting daily newspapers. First, strong weeklies; then alert dailies ready and eager to be on the job in every phase of the struggle.

Every labor newspaper, The Labor World included, needs much more support than it is getting, needs more of the loyalty of the members of the organizations of its community. Newspapers are made good and then made better by and through the support of readers. Newspapers can fight battles when they are supported properly.

Tomorrow's battles will be bigger than those of today. The first thing every organization clamors for in a struggle is a voice—a newspaper. Newspapers can be strong for conflict only when they are made strong when there is no conflict.

Spread the great gospel of stronger labor newspapers—and more of them. Read The Labor World; pass it along to others.

Unions build up great reserves for the payment of benefits in time of struggle. The voice is as important as the commissary in time of struggle. The voice prevents deception. It holds the lines straight. The bitter fate of many a lost battle has been wrapped up in a package made out of the kept press. The tide of victory in many a struggle has been turned by a labor paper that had the strength and the courage to tell the truth.

And yet there are plenty of union men who give no thought to their press. The first thing tyrants do is to muzzle the press. That's how vital is the press. Tyrants now. The ranks of democracy are slow to learn their own needs. Tyrants muzzle the press because a free and fearless press is bad for tyranny—industrial as well as political.

It matters little how small a free newspaper may be. It is the freedom that counts. If there is a virility, size is a matter of mechanical expansion, easy, rapid. But if lack of size is due to utter lack of support, to a blank and woeful failure on the part of the rank and file to care about their voice, then when struggle comes it is usually too bad.

There needs to be some lash of scorpions to bring American labor to a realization of its need for a stronger press. Every labor newspaper in the land needs more support. Employers know what to do and thus we have the kept press. Labor wants not a kept press, but a supported press for the sake of human progress and human freedom.

Throttling Business Individualism

Many industrial oligarchs, bankers and railroad officials continue their silly ballyhoo that the only way to bring about prosperity is to restore the confidence of business leaders by repealing all laws which establish any form of social control over business affairs.

One of these reactionary types recently wrote President Roosevelt that to insure confidence the president should declare that "all supervision by all forms of government, federal and state, over all forms of human business activity should be forthwith abolished."

In his Green Bay speech the president delivered a paralyzing blow to the subversive get-rich-quick gentry who hold such reactionary views. In criticizing the man who suggested this laissez-faire scheme, the president said:

"In other words, he was frank enough to imply that he would repeal all laws, state or national, which regulate business—that a utility could henceforth charge any rate, reasonable or otherwise; that the railroads could go back to rebates and other secret agreements; that the processors of foodstuffs could disregard all rules of health and of good faith; that the unregulated wild-cat bankers of a century ago could be restored; that fraudulent securities and watered stock could be palmed off on the public; that stock manipulation which caused panics and enriched insiders could go unchecked. In fact, if we were to listen to him, the old law of the tooth and the claw could reign once more."

Nor did the president hesitate to speak plainly on the question of what constitutes genuine confidence. He declared:

"My friends, the people of the United States will not restore that ancient order. There is no lack of confidence on the part of business men, farmers and workers who clearly read the signs of the times. Sound economic improvements come from the improved conditions of the whole of the people and not a small fraction thereof.

"Those who would measure confidence in this country in the future must look first to the average citizen."

Greed at Its Worst

The record of the tobacco industry in this country is destined to become a classic in its perfect illustration of the unlimited greed of some American business men, and their practice of the business creed of "buy in the cheapest, and sell in the dearest market."

Tobacco growers received for their product in 1929 the sum of $286,000,000; in 1930 the sum of $212,000,000; in 1931 the sum of $131,000,000, and in 1932 this was reduced to $107,000,000.

Profits of tobacco manufacturers in 1929 amounted to $134,000,000; while in 1932 their profits were $146,000,000. In 1929 the number employed in tobacco manufactures was 116,119 persons; and their wages amounted to $94.5 million; while in 1931 the number employed was 99,769, and their wages amounted to $69.4 million.

In the growing of tobacco the whole family of the tobacco grower must work, and the average family income of tobacco growers in 1929 was $720; but by 1932 this had dropped to the pitiful sum of $250 average family income for the tobacco grower.

In the tobacco factories, the average wage was $815 in 1929; but in 1931 this had been cut to $695.

Foolish Atlantic City Policy

Atlantic City municipal authorities have apparently ranged themselves with the anti-union elements of the country in their opposition to the right of labor to organize. They seem to think they can stop the irresistible tide of organization and have forbidden city firemen to join the International Association of Fire Fighters. As a result, Atlantic City faces loss of the 1935 American Federation of Labor convention.

Informed of the action of the Atlantic City authorities, President Green, of the A. F. of L., expressed surprise that the mayor had taken the position "that any group of municipal employes should be denied the right to organize into a union of their choice and to enjoy the rights and privileges of Section 7-A the same as workers in private industry."

"The executive council was considering the advisability of holding the convention of the federation in Atlantic City in 1935 when this matter came to our attention," Mr. Green said.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Newspapers, business leaders and others who are decrying strikes and industrial discontent would give better service to the nation by seeking to remove the causes of unrest. Injustice is the root of all discontent and discontent will grow as long as injustice is permitted to flourish.

Clear out recognition of these facts was given by the Rev. Dr. Minot Simons in a sermon which deserves nation-wide circulation, particularly at this time. Dr. Simons is ministel of All Souls Unitarian church, New York City.

"There is a vast discontent all through our world today and the poison in it is the sense of injustice," Dr. Simons said. "The discontent of resentment is one of the deep- underlying currents of our modern life. The current gets deeper and stronger as the resentment becomes greater and more impatient. We must beware of this current for it is a current of feelings, feelings of grievance, of injury and of injustice."

Dr. Simons went on to say that the public resents troublemakers who are capitalizing discontent. "But," he asked, "why should they not capitalize it?" and proceeded to point out there is a reason for the discontent and there is only one thing to do.

"There is discontent," he said, "and a reason for it, and we have to realize that the troublemakers believe believe that they can improve the situation. They may or may not be mistaken, but why should they not make trouble?

"The thing to do is to remove the cause of the trouble. Take the poison out of the discontent by removing the injustice which causes it and the sense of grievance and of resentment will disappear. Then the troublemakers will make no more trouble because there will be no discontent to capitalize. Many leaders of industry and many leaders of labor realize what needs to be done. Others have got to realize it, or else there will be trouble."

Of the 109,848 compensated industrial injuries occurring in one year and tabulated in a recent New York state department of labor bulletin, 39,103 or more than 35 per cent were the result of mishaps in handling objects or using hand tools. The objects handled include anything from a pin to a steel girder and hand tools of every description.

In the manufacturing industries, which employ more workers and have more industrial accidents than any other industrial group in New York state, there were 40,823 accidents of all kinds in one year. They cost $10,793,278 in compensation. The average cost per case was $263, which was lower than in any other industry except mercantile establishments. Of these accidents, 14,793, or 35% per cent, were caused by handling objects and hand tools, not by machinery as is generally supposed.

The particular interest of the public should be the reduction of this production—cost tax of more than ten million dollars which it ultimately pays in the cost of every manufactured article that is purchased. The answer is to reduce the number of industrial accidents. Guarding the worker against industrial hazards is the only way.

GROCERY CHAIN ORDERED TO REINSTATE EMPLOYES

Washington, Aug. 9.—The national labor relations board has announced its findings of a violation of Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act by the C. F. Smith company, operator of a chain of grocery stores at Detroit, Mich. The company was informed that unless it reinstates three men who were discharged the violation will be referred to governmental enforcement agencies.

This case involves alleged discriminatory discharge of the three men in March. At the hearing July 26 before the national labor relations board testimony was introduced by the company showing the men were told their discharge was due to disloyalty to the company. The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers has contended that the men were discharged because of their union activity. The national labor board ruled June 21 that the men should be reinstated at once.

BARS LABOR JOURNAL.

New York City.—Advance, official monthly journal of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, has been banned from circulation in Germany by order of the Reich ministry of the interior, dispatches from Munich report. Union officials said they were surprised that the magazine had escaped prohibition in Germany so long, as it militantly championed trade union principles and had co-operated actively in the boycott of German goods declared by American labor in protest against Hitler's destruction of the German trade union movement.

LABOR SEES URGENT NEED FOR GENERAL BUSINESS EXPANSION

If Industry Cannot Function, Society Is Forced to Take Over Means of Production, A. F. of L. Survey Declares—Present Situation Declared Challenge to Administration.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Declaring that the need for a general business expansion is urgent, the American Federation of Labor warns in its current survey of business that "When private business is not able to resume its functions, then society is forced to take over the means of production."

Gains in employment and purchasing power under the NRA are important but they are not enough to restore business to pre-depression levels nor to put the unemployed to work, the Federation says, adding:

"The gains in buying power thus far have been due to two things: 1. The NRA program to reduce hours and raise wages. 2. Enormous expenditures of the government for emergency needs. There has yet been no corresponding increase in creation of wealth to pay all the cost of these gains. We cannot go on increasing buying power in this way, without a general expansion of production and consumption. Industry cannot pull itself up by its own boot straps.

Relief Bill Big Burden.

"The urgency of the present need for a general business expansion is shown by the statement of government expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934. The nation's total bill for federal relief alone to farmers, banks, business, unemployed—was more than $4,000,000,000. The total income of the government was $3,116,000,000, or just enough to pay its current running expenses of $3,101,000,000, leaving the entire relief bill to be met by borrowing.

"The government cannot go on borrowing more than its income for very long. The funds cannot be raised by taxation, for already, when state and local taxes are added to federal, the country is paying 20 per cent of its total income in taxation.

"We cannot go on taking one-fifth of the wealth we produce and in addition borrowing a like amount to support 16,000,000 persons who are creating no wealth. Over 12 per cent of our entire population are now on relief rolls. Unless immediate measures are taken to start business going on a nation-wide scale, we shall probably have to resort to currency inflation to meet the huge deficits accumulating. . .

Situation Is Challenge.

"Nothing in the business picture at present gives promise of substantial business improvement in the near future. . .

"The present situation is a challenge to the administration to give us a plan by which industry, labor and the government may co-operate to restroe business. When private business is not able to resume its functions, then society is forced to take over the means of production. It is essential to get the unemployed back to work producing wealth."

The federation says that workers' producing power has continued to increase in depression as it did before 1929 and that buying power must increase in proportion if industrial balance is to be maintained.

The present effort to control industry "cannot succeed unless we make the increase of workers' income a foundation stone of all our planning," it is pointed out.

The increase in workers' producing power is estimated at about 4 per cent per year.

"This 4 per cent increase in prolucing power which goes on steadily year after year," the federation continues, "means just one thing: The buying power of one hour's work must increase at the same rate as its producing power, that is, 4 per cent each year. Otherwise we cannot sell the products we create or keep the wheels of industry moving. These figures apply to manufacturing industry, but the increase in producing power in other industries has been so similar that they may be considered typical of industry as a whole.

"At present we are living through the results of a long period when balance was not kept between production and consuming power. For years before the depression, workers' buying power fell far behind their power to produce. We see the consequences on every side: Farmers plowing crops under and reducing crops because industrial wages fell so low, proportionately, that farm prices could not be kept up; industry running at half capacity or less because people cannot buy enough to keep mines, mills and railroads busy.

"Meanwhile, men out of work walk the streets when they should be creating wealth and buying goods, and millions live in poverty when there could be enough for all to live in comfort. We have attempted to restore the balance by stopping production and reducing the living standards of all."

GARMENT WORKERS VOTE 90 PER CENT FOR STRIKE

Montreal.—A 90 per cent vote for a strike to enforce demands has been taken by 3,000 local members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. The demands are a 40 hour week, union recognition, and the following wages: A flat rate of $30 per week for tailors, $1 per hour for cutters and $1.10 per hour for operators and pressers.

ORNBURN IS NAMED TO FILL MANNING'S UNEXPIRED TERM

Atlantic City, N. J.—The executive board of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, has selected I. M. Ornburn secretary-treasurer of the department to fill the unexpired term of the late John J. Manning. Mr. Ornburn has been serving by appointment of President Matthew Woll, of the department. He will serve until the annual convention of the department to be held in San Francisco just preceding the A. F. of L. convention, which opens Oct. 2.

BLUE EAGLES WITHDRAWN FOR VIOLATION OF CODE

Washington.—The NRA compliance council has announced that the Blue Eagle insignia has been ordered removed from the following firms for violations of code hour and wage provisions:

Plymouth hotel, Denver, Colo.; Chandler hotel, Los Angeles, Calif.; Blakeland Inn; Littleton, Colo.; Georgian Terrace hotel, Atlanta, Ga.; Atlanta Biltmore hotel, Atlanta, Ga.; Boston Lunch, Inc., Milwaukee, Wis.; General Felt Products company, Chicago, Ill.; Frank Sirota, Chicago, Ill.

Let's Get Together And Pull Together!

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

PACT WITH UNION MADE, REPUBLIC REOPENS MILLS

Warren, O., Aug. 9.—The Republic Steel corporation reopened thirteen tin plate mills here after a shutdown of a month, following refusal on June 30 to renew a contract with lodges of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The reopening resulted from a tentative agreement between the company and the union lodges. It was understood that both the Trumbull lodge here and the Deforest lodge of the Amalgamated at Niles, O., had ratified the agreement, the terms of which were not made public when the mills opened.

The accord was effected after the Amalgamated went before the steel industry's labor board with a protest to the decision of Republic in which Republic refused to renew a working agreement under which the tin workers had operated for twenty-one years.

Troops Raid Union Headquarters, Arrest Minneapolis Strike Heads

Minneapolis, Aug. 9. — Because striking truck drivers and their sympathizers exercised their right of free speech and assemblage to meet at a public playground, national guardsmen raided strike headquarters and arrested four of the strike leaders. The leaders were charged with meeting without a permit.

Later, the soldiers raided the headquarters of the Central Labor union, forcing out some 200 men and women in the offices. Guardsmen in twenty trucks lined the streets before the spectators and searched and questioned occupants of the building. Among them was State Representative Roy E. Wier, who is active in labor affairs.

Union representatives later were permitted to use their offices, though guards were maintained over the building as they were over strike headquarters.

The drive of the soldiers against the strikers began just before John Belor, a picket wounded July 20 when strikers clashed with police armed with shotguns, died in a hospital, bringing to two the number of men who have died in the present strike. Two men were killed and many hurt in the first strike, in May.

It's Just Simply "Hell."

Just what is meant by this word "Hell?"
They say sometimes "It's cold as Hell;"
Sometimes they say, "It's hot as Hell."
When it rains hard, "It's Hell," they cry.
It's also Hell when it's dry.

They "hate like Hell" to see it snow;
It's a "Hell of a wind" when it starts to blow;
Now "how in Hell" can anyone tell
"What in Hell" they mean by this word "Hell?"

"This married life is "Hell," they say;
When he comes home late, "there's Hell to pay;"
"It's Hell" when the kid you hate to tote,
When he starts to yell, it's a "Hell of a note."

"It's Hell" when the doctor sends his bill
For a "Hell of a lot" of trips and pills;
When you get this you will know real well
Just what is meant by this word "Hell."

"Hell, yes!" "Hell, no!" and "Oh, Hell," too,
"The Hell you don't" and "the Hell you do."
And "what in Hell?" and "the Hell it is?"
"The Hell with yours!" and "the Hell with his!"

"Now, who in Hell—" and "Oh, Hell, where!"
And "What in the Hell do you think I care!"
But "the Hell of it is"—it's sure as Hell
We don't know what in the Hell is Hell.

Everybody has big ideas, but only the man who masters the details can translate a big idea into a reality. . . If a married man learns to love another woman it is usually because his wife made the lessons easy. . . Today people are learning to do without many things their parents never dreamed of having. . . The father can't understand why a daughter need go to a business college to learn the touch system. . . In New York the law doesn't allow a man to drink standing up. And afterwards he isn't able to do so. . . Man can make a house but it takes a woman, a baby and a puppy to make a home. . . If you are useful, you don't have to be ornamental. . . A woman worries and gets wrinkles. Then she worries about the wrinkles. A woman will worry. . . A compromise is an agreement whereby both parties get what neither of them wanted.

In this family there was a large number of small children. Little Willie, aged 6, was taken in one morning to see his father, who happened to be laid up with influenza. Little Willie was very quiet, almost reverent, in the sickroom. When it was time for him to go, he went up to his father's bedside and said:

Little Willie—I bin good, ain't I, pop?

His Daddy—Yes, son.

Little Willie—Well, then, kin I see the baby?

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Whereas, on the 1st day of July, 1926, Margaret W. Saunders (widow), of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, executed a deed of trust, conveying the property hereinafter described and advertised for sale, to me as Trustee, which deed of trust is found of record in Book C, Vol. 25, page 574 et seq., of the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee; and,

Whereas, said deed of trust was executed for the purpose of securing the payment of a certain indebtedness, fully described in said deed of trust, to which reference is made for a complete description; and default has been made in the payment of the indebtedness so secured and interest thereon; and the said Margaret W. Saunders has failed to perform covenants in the said deed of trust and has remained in default for more than thirty days and the holder of the indebtedness has made demand upon me, as Trustee, to sell the property conveyed by the said deed of trust, as therein provided, to satisfy the payment of said indebtedness and interest, as said holder had a right to do under the terms of said deed of trust;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by said deed of trust, I, C. W. K. Meacham, Trustee, will,

ON THE 7th DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1934,

sell, within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, in bar of all equities of redemption, dower and homestead, and all other exemptions of every kind, the following described real estate in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, viz.:

The south 100 feet of the north 105 feet of the west 100 feet of Lot 21, Map of Johnson's Revised Subdivision of St. Elmo, in the former Second Civil District, present City of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, as shown by plat of record in Plat Book No. 5, page 5, in the Register's office of said county, and being the same property conveyed to Margaret W. Saunders by two deeds, one from Texas Dixon Key et al, registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 589, and one from Cridner W. Robinson (single), registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 588, in said Register's office.

The north five (5) feet of said Lot 21 has been dedicated to the public as a part of West 41st Street.

Subject to requirements of Zoning Ordinance No. 1843 of the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and any amendments thereto.

Said deed of trust recites that the title to the said property is clear, free and unencumbered, and title to the same is believed to be good, but the sale will be made as Trustee only.

MEETING OF UNEMPLOYMENT ISSUE WILL BE DEMANDED

A. F. of L. Convention to Smash All Records — Union Label Trades Department, Under New Leadership, to Launch Modern Campaign to Promote Wide Use of Union-Made, American-Made Commodities.

Atlantic City, Aug. 16.—First phases of the Executive Council's report to the coming annual convention are being drafted here by the American Federation of Labor's high directorate in the last session to be held before the gathering in San Francisco. It probably will contain several striking declarations, but there will be no departure from the long-established policy of the movement.

NRA will not be given a clean bill of health in the field of operations, but the principle will be supported. Demand for full labor representation on code authorities will be forthcoming and there will be a demand for a more vigorous enforcement of Section 7-A.

There may be a declaration regarding the general strike as a means of winning recognition of labor demands.

Complete support of the housing program is likely to be recommended, but labor is not losing its head over predictions of vast and hurried re-employment of building trades workers.

Re-employment Is Slow.

It will be shown that there has been little more than a creeping process in thus far bringing about re-employment and more drastic action in reduction of work hours is likely to be called for.

The "challenge" issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in which the chamber declared labor's figures on unemployment are three million too high, brought forth demands that the chamber produce proof of its charges. "The chamber of commerce makes a bald statement without any supporting evidence," said President Green. "It cannot be taken seriously until its evidence is laid before the public. That evidence, I am satisfied, it cannot produce because it doesn't exist."

The federation's latest estimate showed 10,400,000 unemployed. One strong indication of the accuracy of the federation's figures is the fact that New York now has on relief more than were on relief at this time last year. As a matter of fact a vast bulk of evidence can be mustered to show that the federation probably underestimates.

The convention which is to open in San Francisco on October 2 probably will smash all records, on the basis of careful statements by Secretary Frank Morrison.

Membership figures will not be known until the council reports to the convention and even then it is possible that real membership may exceed the official figures, perhaps by as many as a million, possibly by more than that. It can be said that there is an enormous "potential membership" in unions that have been established within the past twelve months.

Defection of a group of Detroit automobile workers is causing no great official concern. Undoubtedly new charters will be issued and in the process certain company and other influences will be eliminated. A sounder union structure is expected to result.

Launch Union Label Campaign.

Among other developments surrounding the session is the launching of a new and more vigorous union label campaign under the leadership of the new Union Label Trades Department officers, Matthew Woll, president, and I. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer. The board of the department elected Ornburn to fill the unexpired term and work will proceed at once in the direction of promoting the use of label goods on a new basis, with a wider and more vigorous effort to promote the use of label goods among trade unionists and their friends and with a campaign to promote a general public understanding of the significance of the union label and its guarantee of quality and American workmanship on commodities.

A number of new and striking methods of operation, in keeping with the times, are under consideration and it may be expected confidently that the union label will play a larger part in labor affairs and in the general merchandising world. There will be no conflict with the Blue Eagle, but the Blue Eagle will not be allowed to detract from the meaning of the union label.

Linder Indorsed By Chickamauga Union

CARL LINDER

Local 1883, United Textile Workers of America, located at Chickamauga, Ga., has indorsed the candidacy of Carl Linder, active member of that organization, for membership in the Georgia legislature, subject to the democratic primary of Sept. 2, and the membership is actively supporting the unionist for a place on the ticket from Walker county.

Mr. Linder was formerly a member of Lodge 56, Machinists, but has been employed in the Georgia city for some time. When the textile union at Chickamauga was formed Mr. Linder took a leading part in the organization, and his experience as a trades unionist was invaluable in helping the new local to get started and to reach the fine stage of perfection which it enjoys today.—(Advertisement.)

A Prophecy Fulfilled

Fifty years ago Bell prophesied that telephone lines would some day interconnect the cities of America. Today, the whole world is at your fingertips by telephone.

This remarkable achievement did not just happen. It was brought about through years of research and invention by a large group of Bell laboratory workers, scientists and others, aided by the army of 270,000 Bell System telephone workers and the 800,000 investors who supplied the money.

It is the united effort and support of these million or more people that makes possible a telephone service international in scope and unsurpassed in quality, dependability and low cost. And telephone service in America is low in cost. For example, in the evening after 8:30 you can make most station-to-station calls over a distance of 75 miles for about 35c; 150 miles, 50c; 275 miles, 75c; and the farther you talk the lower the cost per mile.

That more than twenty-five billion local and long distance calls are made every year by the American people is proof of the value and importance of the service in the every-day social and business life of the nation. Such wide-spread and general use is evidence also that the Bell System is rendering a service satisfactory to the public in quality and cost. This is in keeping with the Bell System policy of furnishing the most and the best service possible at the least possible cost.

Alabama Workers Seek State Recovery Act

Outline of Proposed Laws to Be Urged at Coming Session of Legislature Made by State Federation of Labor.

New Orleans.—The Alabama Federation of Labor will urge the next session of the Alabama legislature to adopt a state law similar to the national industrial recovery act, according to W. O. Hare, secretary. A complete legislative program for organized labor in the state, which includes the enactment of an old age pension bill, an unemployment insurance act, a new workmen's compensation law, and ratification of the federal child labor law is outlined by Hare. There is opposition to the proposal to establish a state printing plant to do state and county printing, and print school textbooks with convict labor. There are 115,000 members of trade unions in the state, as compared with 25,000 two years ago. It is predicted that the number of members would reach 160,000 within the next few months.

BROTHER EDGERTON FLAYED BY MASTER PRINTER FEDERATION

Efforts to Block Recovery Resented.

LETTERS FINALLY ARE GIVEN NOTICE

Major Unit of Employers' Organization Urges Disregard of Labor-Hater's Appeals to Buy Immunity From Provisions of President's Program.

John Edgerton's panicky efforts to wheedle money out of Tennessee manufacturers for the purpose of combatting the president's recovery program have at last gotten notice from one of the state's major group of employers, and the Southern Master Printers' Federation, one of the most active of such groups, in a letter to its members this week "takes the hide off" the labor-hating chief of the employers' union for his activities in trying to prevent the passage of a state law upholding the National Recovery Act.

Under date of Aug. 16, Edgerton addressed the third appeal to manufacturers' association members, imploring them to "put" the cash for the purpose of combatting progressive legislation by the coming general assembly. Calling attention to his own great and patriotic services, and the fact that his sock mill at Lebanon had already contributed $25 to the "cause," Edgerton has within the past few weeks addressed three communications to his membership, the first two admittedly having failed to interest employers of the state.

The Southern Master Printers' Federation, however, evidently considered the time had come to check the wild efforts of the labor-hater, and a letter was addressed to the membership of that organization which will doubtless tend to put Brother Edgerton somewhat "on the spot." The master printers, according to the letter furnished the Labor World this week, disagree sharply with the activities of the deacon, and say so in so many words.

The letter is sane, sound and dignified, and is free from any hint of bitter prejudice or antagonisms, and will doubtless prove very effective.

Quoting a paragraph from the letter sent out by the bosses' union head, the master printers appeal for support of the Recovery Program and for the enactment of a state law in support of same. "The code and operations have materially improved the printing business in Tennessee," the letter says. "None of us want to go back to conditions that existed prior to Feb. 26, 1934. * * * Five per cent. are recalcitrant. Shall the five per cent. control the ninety-five?"

The master printers' letter follows, in full:

"To All Members of the Southern Master Printers Federation in Tennessee:

"Under date of Aug. 17th the Tennessee Manufacturers association sent out a bulletin to its membership which contained the following paragraph:

"'One of the serious problems facing the association concern today is the attempt which will be made when the legislature meets in January to pass a state NRA law. Up to the present time, 13 states have passed a law modeled after the National Industrial Recovery Act. The association does not want such a law on the statute books of Tennessee. While there are commendable features in the Recovery Act yet there are certain things surrounding the act which would make a state law undesirable and objectionable. Consequently the association will oppose this, or any other piece of legislation which would have a tendency to further burden industry in Tennessee.'

"While it's true that our code has not accomplished all of the things that we expected of it, it is quite possible that we expected too much, but again the code and its operations have materially improved the printing business in Tennessee. None of us want to go back to the conditions that existed prior to February 26, 1934.

"Due to our contact with Washington authorities, we are firmly of the opinion that codes in some form will be with us for many years to come, so why not strengthen the National Industrial Recovery Act by a state law.

"You will note in Mr. Edgerton's bulletin, paragraph quoted above, that 13 states have already passed such a law. Such a law on the statute books of Tennessee would give to your Code authorities additional power and additional teeth with which to better enforce your code. Ninety-five per cent of our printers want it. Five per cent are recalcitrant. Shall the five per cent control the ninety-five?

"Help us to help you to more efficiently operate under NRA by seeing your duly elected representatives between now and the time that our legislature convenes and insist upon the passage of a state recovery act.

"We shall keep you informed from time to time.

"Yours for more efficient enforcement of the code. Sincerely,

SOUTHERN MASTER PRINTERS FEDERATION,
V. C. Garriott,
Exec. Vice-President.

Tragic Death Of A. T. McBrayer Shock To Friends

Veteran Member of Railway Carmen Had Been Active in Work of Union.

Tragic death of A. T. McBrayer, who was instantly killed on last Friday when his car, in which he was riding alone, skidded on the slick surface of the Walnut street bridge and crashed through the side rail, carrying its occupant to sudden death many feet below, was a shock to hundreds of warm friends of Mr. McBrayer.

Mr. McBrayer had been an employe of the Citico car shops of the Southern railroad since Dec. 18, 1909, and prior to consolidation of the Southern and C., N. O. & T. P., was a member of Lodge 414, Railway Carmen. He then transferred his membership to Lodge 211, in which he had been an active worker until his untimely demise.

Mr. McBrayer was 54 years old, and is survived by his widow; three children, Beatrice, 21, Henley, 19, and Gwendolyn, 11; one brother, E. R. McBrayer, of Cincinnati, and four sisters, Mrs. T. C. Jones, of Chattanooga; Mrs. J. W. Barrie, of Louisville; Mrs. B. F. Monroe, of Meridianville, Ala., and Mrs. Belle High, of Campobello, S. C.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at the Central Presbyterian church, the Rev. T. A. Allen officiating. Members of Lodge 211 served as pallbearers.

LABOR MEMBERS NAMED.

Washington.—Max Zaritsky, New York City,, president of the cap and millinery department of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, 245 Fifth avenue, and Sam Hershkowitz, manager of Local No. 1 of the same union, 1933 Second avenue, New York City, have been appointed labor members of the code authority for the cap and cloth hat industry, NRA announced.

Green Defends Jobless Estimate Of Federation

Says Figure of 10,300,000 Is Based on Facts, While Chamber of Commerce Estimate of 7,000,000 Is Guesswork.

By A. F. of L. Weekly News Service.

Atlantic City, N. J. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who is in Atlantic City attending the fall meeting of the federation's executive council, took prompt issue with the statement made by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States from its headquarters in Washington that the A. F. of L.'s estimate of 10,300,000 unemployed were "exaggerated."

The commerce chamber said that according to its own study of unemployment "there were less than 7,000,000 unemployed in July," but did not reveal either the scope or the source of its "study."

In reply to the chamber's statement, Mr. Green said that the figures of 10,300,000 unemployed as issued by the A. F. of L. was "based on figures and facts," while "the 7,000,000 estimated by the United States Chamber of Commerce was pure guesswork."

"Our figure is based on reports received monthly from practically every city and town in the United States," Mr. Green declared, "and the results are obtained after scientific mathematical calculations. Our figures are always recognized by the government, economic organizations and the members of congress as a portrayal of the true condition of unemployment in this country."

Mr. Green said the challenge of the chamber of commerce was the first time any organization or individual ever had questioned the veracity of the A. F. of L.

Housing Shortage 5,000,000, U. S. Survey Indicates

Washington, Aug. 16.—There is an apparent shortage of 5,000,000 habitable dwellings in the United States, construction of which would put a large number of men to work, Secretary of Commerce Roper said as the federal housing administration prepared to begin actual operation looking toward renovation of homes.

Construction of needed dwellings would result in an annual payroll of $6,000,000,000 and directly and indirectly affect some 12,000,000 persons, the secretary said.

In reference to the shortage of habitable homes, Roper declared:

"Millions of others are in need of minor and major repairs, and thousands of others are utterly unfit for human habitation."

Roper's statements were based on a department of commerce survey of sixty-four major cities. Comparatively few of the homes surveyed had modern devices to add to comfort. The shortage of dwellings was reflected in single-family quarters where dual families and additional persons were compelled to live in crowded quarters.

A hasty housing administration survey from records of other government departments indicates that 16,000,000 buildings need immediate repair. About 3,000,000 of these are said to be beyond hope of restoration. The remaining 13,000,000 require repairs averaging $300 each in cost.

Business Men Would Censure Labor News

Lynn, Mass.—Members of shoe workers' unions are offering strong resistance to the proposal sponsored by three business men of Lynn that a committee be created to censor all labor news in this city before it appears in the news columns of local newspapers. The claim is that the present method of handling this news is "harmful to the city."

Officials of labor unions take the position that such a committee, in effect, would be a news suppression or employer propaganda group, and through control of labor news material, create an effectual barrier against the presentation of any news reflecting the viewpoint of position of the employe groups.

It's before marriage that a young man has his girl constantly on his mind. Afterwards he has her on his hands.

Resigned

HON. J. COHEN

News dispatches this week reported the resignation of J. Cohen, elected president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor at the May convention in the Bluff City.

Mr. Cohen stepped down following his election as trustee for Shelby county, the duties of which office he will assume on Sept. 1. Backed by the Crump organization, Mr. Cohen was elected by a majority of some 30,000 over the incumbent, carrying every precinct in the county except one, which he lost by only six votes. He carried the National Cemetery by a large majority.

Hundreds of friends of "Jake" throughout the state will regret the necessity for his resignation, but will at the same time rejoice that he has been accorded the honor which has come to him through the citizens of Memphis. He has been an active worker in the state labor movement for many years, rendering loyal, faithful and intelligent service to the cause of the workers in Tennessee.

Successor to Mr. Cohen will be chosen by the executive council of the state federation. A. C. Kamin is the local member of the council.

CHICKAMAUGA MILL WORKERS FACE EVICTION

Union Members Ordered From Company Houses.

BLEACHERY SLAPS AT ORGANIZATION

North Georgia Concern Has Good Business in Flour Sacks, Etc.

Faced with eviction from their homes, as an apparent penalty for having joined the United Textile Workers of America, employes of the Crystal Springs Bleachery company, at Chickamauga, Ga., are preparing to appeal their case to the highest possible court in order to maintain their American rights and protect their families against suffering and want.

Notices were served on members of the union this week, without previous warning, to vacate the premises owned by the mill and occupied in many instances for years by employes of the concern.

Several months ago a local union was formed at Chickamauga, with a large majority of the mill employes enrolled, and a few weeks later the plant was closed and had remained so since. This week, however, operations were resumed in part, non-union workers being employed, and members of the organization were ignored, except for the notices to vacate their homes within five days.

Although the "lease" signed by employes on their living quarters has considerable to say as to the rights of "party of the first part" (the mill owners), the workers still believe they have certain rights in the matter, and according to The Labor World's informant they will invoke such rights, if any, prior to complying with the terms of the ukase.

Notice received by the union workers follows:

Dear Sir:

You are hereby notified that the contract for the rental of the premises at the above address is terminated, and you are hereby directed to vacate the premises within the five days provided by the said contract.

This 23rd day of August, 1934.

A. S. BOWEN,
Paymaster.

The Crystal Springs Bleachery company manufactures cloth for various purposes, and is said to do a good business through the sale of flour sacks.

George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, was expected to come to Chickamauga from Atlanta Friday in an effort to smooth the threatened trouble.

Brutal Police In Mill Strike Arouse Mayor

Quick Inquiry Starts Into Attack of Uniformed Men on Pickets for Strikers at Brooklyn Knitting Mill.

New York, Aug. 23.—Police brutality toward strike pickets in Brooklyn, and accompanied by the arrest of thirty-eight of them, is under investigation on the order of Mayor LaGuardia. The investigation follows charges made against the police by members of the unions of United Textile Workers, International Ladies' Garment Workers and the Knit Goods Workers.

The strikers were engaged in picketing the Commodore Knitting mills, when police appeared on the scene and are charged with having attacked and beaten the pickets. Mayor LaGuardia, after an immediate inquiry of his own, said:

"I find no justification for an attack by police. There was no violation of the law, and these people are entitled to peaceful picketing. Those responsible for brutality in this instance will be punished."

All but one of the pickets lacked funds to post required bail, and were sent to jail. Later, when called to testify before the police board of inquiry ordered by the mayor, they gave the shield numbers of the police striking and arresting them.

One 16-year-old boy, who had been sent by his mother with a message to his father in the picket line, told of being struck on the head twice by a policeman when he asked permission to speak to his father, who was then under arrest.

The mayor was informed that the police definitely took sides against the strikers and indulged in unusual brutality toward the pickets, several of whom were women and girls.

Hosiery Workers Expect Big Crowd

If the local weather man is a member of the Federal Employes' union (if not, he possibly ought to be), he may furnish fair weather, and Branch 53, Hosiery Workers, will have a "big day" Saturday at Lookout lake, where an all-day program of sports and picnicking is set for the enjoyment of the workers and their friends. Threatening rain Friday had sponsors of the event on the anxious seat, but it was hoped the weather would be clear for the outing. Committee in charge announced that preparations have been made to entertain all comers, and it is hoped that several hundred trades unionists and their friends will join the Hosiery Workers in this celebration of a successful organizing campaign.

Fight Promoters Promise Good Card

"Smoky" Maggard, Kentucky light heavyweight, will meet Berry Baggett at the Rossville arena Monday night in the ten-round feature bout of an all-star card being offered there. In the semi-final eight-round bout Brady Gentry will clash with Luis Capentero of Cincinnati. They are lightweights. Jimmie Fowler, of Trion, Ga., will meet Chief Potts in a six-rounder, and Bill Neison, of Rossville, will fight "Young" Coker, of Dalton, in the six-round opener. The Maggard-Baggett bout is creating lots of interest, and a large crowd is expected to witness this clash, according to the promoters.

'Gag Rule' Recalled In Union History Of Postal Clerks

Hatcher Continues Interesting Review of Workers' Early Struggles.

By E. R. HATHCER

(Secretary-Treasurer, Tennessee Federation Postoffice Clerks.)

This is the third in a series of articles on the early organization activities of the Postal service, written by Mr. Hatcher for The Labor World.

The formation of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks —or UNAPOCS as this organization is commonly known—failed to satisfy all the locals, several of which remained independent units.

In 1895 the postmaster-general issued an order prohibiting all postal employes, whether on leave or without pay, to visit Washington for the purpose of influencing legislation in congress. Other orders deprived the employes of the constitutional right to directly petition congress for the redress of grievances or to engage in any activity seeking to improve their working conditions.

The organization showed little disposition to oppose the department at Washington. On the contrary, it made every effort to work in complete harmony with it and to grow under its sheltering wing.

The Chicago local had remained an independent unit, but in 1898 they organized an assembly of the Knights of Labor. About this time conditions in this office were becoming unbearable. Long periods of uncompensated overtime were becoming a regular occurrence. Discontent among the men was great, and at times it was difficult for the officials to maintain discipline. On one occasion when the supervisors were unwilling to let them go after a stretch of 14 hours coming on top of a long period of overtime, 75 men in the mailing division rebelled, rang the bundy and quit work. This was really the beginning of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks.

By 1900 the Knights of Labor had yielded its place in the labor movement to the American Federation of Labor. The federation invited postal employes into its ranks; so, in October of that year this group of distributors in the mailing division, despairing of ever securing any improvement in their intolerable working conditions, through an isolated movement, organized the Chicago Post Office Clerks' union and affiliated with the American Federation of Labor as Federal Union No. 8703. This was the first charter ever issued to government employes by the American Federation of Labor.

Conference Fails To Adjust Dispute With Model Shop

Conference this week between officials of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, Local 620, Shoe Repairers, and the Nashville management of the Model Shoe Repair Shop, at 19 East Eighth street, failed to find a basis upon which an adjustment of the controversy with the chain concern could be reached.

Spokesmen for the local union stated Friday morning that the radio announcements, pickets and other means of publicity will be continued until the management of the chain shop agrees to sign the contract and meet the terms of the workers as have other shops in the city.

General Walkout Will Affect Half-Million.

OTHER INDUSTRIES MAY BE INCLUDED

Delegates to National Meeting Declare Workers Forced to Take Unusual and Drastic Action to Insure Success of President's Program.

A general strike in the cotton textile industry, affecting 500,000 workers, voted in the New York convention of the United Textile Workers of America, will be carried into effect in the first week in September, according to statements of delegates to the New York convention, who returned to Chattanooga this week. The strike is called as a result of refusal to accord representation to the workers on the industry's code authority. Union strike headquarters have been opened in the Carpenters' building with Vice-President Francis J. Gorman in charge.

Similar strike action is under consideration by workers in the silk, rayon, woolen, worsted and allied industries. Union leaders anticipate a complete shutdown in these industries, and declare that textile workers are determined to gain recognition of the right of collective bargaining granted under the national recovery act, without intimidation or interference by employers.

Green Makes Statement.

The strike will have the full support of the American Federation of Labor. Action of the Executive Council of the latter organization, in session in Atlantic City, to support the strike was taken as soon as the decision of the convention in New York became known. President William Green in an immediate statement, said:

"We are in full accord with their demands and still insist that representatives of labor should be members of all code authorities. The textile workers are entirely right, and we hope their request will be granted without having to resort to strike. The organization became very strong in the last year, having more than doubled its membership, particularly in the southern states.

"Neither the spirit nor the letter of Section 7-A of the national recovery act has been carried out by private industry and this is the reason for most of the strikes. Many of them could have been averted if the employers had bargained collectively with their organized employes."

Recovery officials of the administration are gravely concerned over the strike threat, and hope to conduct conferences before the end of the month through which a settlement can be reached. It is recognized that the threat of an epidemic of strikes during the fall months is becoming more serious, and has a vital and direct bearing upon the entire recovery program.

Union Demands 30-Hour Week.

The strike threat arises in the demand for a reopening of the Textile code and its revision along lines more in keeping with the interests of the workers. Some of the specific demands involved have to do with the irregular work of many of the workers during the summer, particularly during the "shut-down" in operation granted by NRA. To overcome this obstacle of partial employment, the union is demanding a 30-hour week for the industry, but with no reduction in pay from the present 40-hour earned income.

There is a further demand for a readjustment in minimum scales of pay, the elimination in every form of the "stretch-out" system, and a readjustment of machine loads. Still another demand is for a universal system of collective bargaining on the premise of the impartial and unhampered choice of representatives by the workers.

Some of these demands, particularly

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What state first had minimum wage legislation?

A.—Massachusetts was the first state (1912) to enact a minimum wage law covering women and children in private employment.

Q.—When was the first wage arbitration in the United States?

A.—The earliest wage arbitration in the United States of which the United States bureau of labor statistics has record was that of the iron puddlers of Pittsburgh in 1865. This resulted in a fairly substantial increase in wage rates and paved the way for the peaceable settlement of later disputes.

Q.—Who said: "When the scab comes down the street honest men turn their backs, the angels weep tears in heaven and the Devil shuts the gates of hell to keep him out?"

A.—Jack London, noted American author.

What Next!

One of the world's richest deposits of gold, situated in the Rand mining district of South Africa, promises to be unavailable for human purposes unless some means can be found for overcoming the intense heat of the tunnels as the workings are pushed deeper into the earth. The shafts are at a depth now of 8,000 feet, or more than a mile below sea level, and with a temperature range of 100 to 120 degrees and humidity almost at the saturation point. While rich veins of gold laden ore are in plain sight of miners, the heat is such that men can remain in the shafts for only short periods at a time, and are completely exhausted after a few minutes of work. Efforts are being made to find a means to dehumidify the air. One mine is installing machinery to pump 400,000 cubic feet of ice-cooled air a minute into the depths of its workings. About 2,000 tons of ice will be used in the cooling machinery at one time.

Black-Draught For Dizziness, Headache Due To Constipation

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught several years and find it splendid," writes Mr. G. W. Holley, of St. Paul, Va. "I take it for dizziness or headache (due to constipation). I have never found anything better. A short while ago, we began giving our children Syrup of Black-Draught as a laxative for colds and little stomach ailments, and have found it very satisfactory." . . . Millions of packages of Thedford's Black-Draught are required to satisfy the demand for this popular, old reliable, purely vegetable laxative. 25¢ a package. "Children like the Syrup."

HAIL SOUTHERN CHIVALRY!

"WORK OF ART"

The American hotel guest may filch the towels, leave the lights on and the water running, strike matches on the walls and open beer bottles on the corners of mahogany tables, but in a pinch he can be depended upon. Proof was recently advanced by a group of Spartan summer folk in a mountain hostelry not far from Chattanooga.

One morning the speaker of the housemaids informed the proprietor that she and her coworkers must have $2 per week added to their wages or they would strike. Very gently the employer explained that a $2 ante was impractical, nay, impossible. Regretfully the housemaids said that they must walk out, and they did.

Far from conquered, the resourceful hotel man telephoned an Atlanta employment agency and a new crew of maids was speeding to his aid. The only flaw in the expedient was that the new maids proved to be more than somewhat inexperienced and service fell far below par.

Did the guests—and summer guests are notoriously cranky—scarify the manager, or depart in dudgeon? They did not. One and all they turned in and showed the green help how this particular hotel had been, and should be, run. In a few days the rough spots in service were sanded down, and all again was serene. —Editorial in the Times.

What a picture! Imagine Mrs. Porky-Porky, creme-de-la-creme of society circles and one of the Georgia sock-mill Porkys, seeking retreat in the solitude of a mountain resort after a nerve-racking season of bridge and other entertainment duties, donning work-clothes, and in the name of Americanism clearing away the gin bottles after a high-brow debauch in a hotel room!

Anyhow, another honor has come to the Chattanooga territory. The silk-stockinged element has once again risen to the occasion and repelled the encroachments of the hoi-polloi. A group of probably half-starved hotel maids has been doomed to perhaps complete starvation. But the hotel management is happy. The editorial writer of the Times is highly pleased. The ends of Americanism have been served.

Three cheers for the silk-stockinged element.

Three cheers for the editorial writer of the Times, who used to be a sock-mill superintendent.

Three cheers for Americanism.

Let the congregation stand and sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which Brother Edgerton will render the pay-triotic theme song, "Sixteen Men on a Dead Man's Chest."

Hypocrisy and Delusion

There is something inherently heartless and cruel in the action of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in attempting to lull the country into a false understanding of its unemployment emergency. Of all organizations that should be interested in getting people back to work, and restoring the buying power of the country to its brimming level, the chamber is one of the foremost. To deprecate the volume of unemployment, and to charge that it is grossly exaggerated, and thus reduce the momentum of the movement that is being carried on through NRA to "put people back to work," is not merely an intimation that industry in this country is not doing its full share—it is a selfish stab at the very heart of the recovery movement. It is an invitation to industry to cease to give aid to the march of recovery.

The chamber's president, Henry I. Harriman, has been credited with the original "sale" of the idea of "industrial self-government" in lieu of the Sherman anti-trust act to this administration. If industrial self-government has not been set up along lines of removing the Sherman act from the statute books, and turning industry loose to indulge in whatever monopolistic and consumer-exploiting practices it could devise, it is still no reason why the chamber should turn in its tracks and undertake to scuttle the recovery movement—built around the idea of industrial self-government.

Statistics of every other agency, whether government or private, indicate that the volume of actual unemployment is far greater than the estimate of 7,300,000 made by the chamber. Some estimates, from just as reputable and responsible sources, are as high as 14,000,000. For the chamber to set up a figure so small at the approach of what promises to be another serious winter, without furnishing concrete proof of its integrity, smacks of the rankest hypocrisy and a deliberate attempt to delude the people of the nation. The ostrich does not escape the storm by hiding its head in the sand.

A Wise Policy

The Harriman Hosiery mills case can be thanked for one thing. It brought a decision from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, that hereafter, when the Blue Eagle is withdrawn from employers for violation of the labor section of the national industrial recovery act, the workers concerned shall be concerned before the Blue Eagle is restored.

In the Harriman case the national labor board publicly branded the company for dismissing union employes because of union activities and later for evidencing bad faith with the workers.

Gen. Johnson, on the board's recommendation, removed the Blue Eagle from the company last April. Some weeks later, after Gen. Johnson had conferred full authority on Major George L. Berry, division administrator, to adjust the controversy, A. R. Glancy, field compliance director of the NRA, usurped authority in the matter during Gen. Johnson's absence from Washington, effected a settlement with officials of the Harriman concern without consulting the workers and restored the Blue Eagle to the notorious anti-labor outfit.

The labor advisory board of the NRA, including in its membership William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made a test case of the dispute because of the principle involved in the recovery administration, signing an agreement involving a strike or other labor controversy without first putting the settlement plan up to the workers involved.

After a conference with the labor advisory board in Washington, Gen. Johnson announced that hereafter the workers in any labor controversy would be consulted prior to settlements which involved the restoration of the Blue Eagle.

The development of the new policy was a good day's work for both the labor advisory board and the recovery administrator, in spite of all the disquieting features of the Harriman farce.

Profiteering and Jails

Unblushing steps in some retail trades to boost prices of necessities of life to arbitrarily high levels is meeting with stern rebuke from federal and state officials. Gen. Johnson has indicated that fixed prices may be put into effect only when he approves them—and that he will not approve them unless clearly justified by business costs, including wages and hours.

One of the singular aspects of putting industry under codes was the pellmell rush a year ago with which retailers came to Washington with prospective codes, and their eagerness to get them approved. And practically every one of these codes contained provision for either price fixing or price stabilization—at the consumers' expense.

The most direct way for business interests to discredit themselves and stand forth in naked selfishness is to attempt an orgy of profiteering at this time in necessities of life. State anti-trust acts are not affected by the NRA, and state governments can still use these laws to put profiteers into jails. Conspiracy and unwarranted price fixing is still a crime, under federal laws and laws of most of the states.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Last March, when the NRA code authorities, representing the business of the country, met in Washington and turned down the administration's request for shorter hours and better pay as a means out of the depression, should not be quickly forgotten, said the Rev. R. A. McGowan, of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare council. That month, he says, was a turning point.

The idea behind the suggestion was that since business was moving along and profits were coming in faster, the time had come to spread a little more work and purchasing power around the country, so as to give business another boost. There was indication that the administration was not proud of those basic wages that had been stuffed into the codes in their initial stages, and that it knew they were not living wages at all. But in that March meeting, says the Rev. McGowan, it was thumbs, not hours, that went down. It was voices, and even eyebrows, not wages, that were raised. In fact, the whole hubub was for a jacking up of prices—and nothing for wages. And the Rev. McGowan adds:

"When you read about the 'oppressive powers of the government over American business,' remember that organized business refused that 10-10 proposition and got away with it. When you see a bread-line, remember it. When you learn that nine or ten million are still out of work, remember it. When you hear the howl that the tax burden will be too high, remember the 10-10 refusal.

"When you passingly doubt the need of labor to organize and think that the government alone will take care of social justice or that employers will do it, remember that the government asked and pleaded and argued and got in return words. When you wonder why all these strikes for union recognition and for wage and hour changes, drag the Ides of last March back into your mind. Don't forget it when you read of or perhaps see or are yourself a striker shot down on the picket line.

"If you are in comfortable circumstances, imagine a father and mother and their children buying food, clothing and shelter on $12. $16 or $20 a week. Perhaps you are part responsible. Then remember last March. And if you are yourself such a father or such a mother, then do your level, serious, best, not by yourself alone but organized and as a citizen, to overcome that sad month and start things going toward the time when you and everyone will get steady work and enough of this world's goods to live as human beings should.

"When you dread the coming of communism, remember last March. When you wonder why recovery is slow, remember that if recovery is to come and stay, incomes for work have to grow and incomes for property ownership have to decline, but that last March the organized business associations decided that they wanted the fool's paradise again, the same fool's paradise of pre-depression years when profits came first and fast, and prices were at what they could get and wages at what they had to pay, and there was no blue-sky law and the stock exchange boiled over every day.

"There they still want to sit. And not all the NRA's horses nor all the NRA's men can move them again save and except, I am convinced, by an organized labor movement fighting when necessary and co-operating all the time to sit in those code authorities which now are to rule American business, and by, as well, an organized system of farm co-operatives."

Woman Says Straw Boss Struck Her

Kosciusko, Miss.—Melton Higginbotham, straw boss in the Aponaug Manufacturing company spinning room, was arrested after Mrs. Margarie McBride, age 60 years, accused him of assaulting and cursing her after discharging her. Mrs. McBride, a union member, along with many other union members, was discharged. She protested against remarks made to her by Higginbotham, and charged that he cursed and struck her. Higginbotham is a non-union employe. The charges were substantiated by other workers. Mrs. McBride had been employed at the mill for many years.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

RFC ASKS BANKS TO MAKE INDUSTRIAL LOANS

Chairman Jones Says Board Has $300,000,000 at Hand to Assist Industry; Wants Loans Made Through Banks; Supported by RFC Guarantee.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The Reconstruction Finance corporation has asked banks to make loans to industry whenever possible, under a guarantee by the RFC, and to speed up the national recovery program in this way. The RFC has $300,000,000 available for loans of this character, and supplemented by $278,000,000 from the federal reserve banks.

Chairman Jones in announcing the request to the banks, said that under this plan, the RFC can guarantee up to 100 per cent of the loans. He asserted this puts the question of loaning and negotiating directly into the hands of the banks, and prospective borrowers will not have to come directly to the RFC in order to obtain such loans.

Banks in Strong Position.

He expressed doubt that the entire $300,000,000 will be exhausted by Jan. 31, which is the final date for which such loans are authorized. There is possibility, however, that congress will extend the life of the act to a later date, but Chairman Jones has not indicated he will ask for such extension.

It was pointed out in RFC circles that the banks are in a stronger position than last winter, and in far better shape to aid in industrial and commercial financing. This is expected to result in a more liberal policy generally in extensions of commercial bank credit to industries. With the RFC in position to assume loans to industries from the banks where desirable, and offering a guarantee to the banks in connection with industrial loans, it is the expectation of RFC officials that the banks will show a decided "loosening-up" policy in their extensions of credit to industry, and give fresh impetus to the recovery movement.

The RFC is offering bond issues based on its loans to industry and these note issues may extend up to $1,100,000,000.

The RFC has maintained an exceptionally close touch with the banking situation as it affects extension of credit to industry, and has stepped in—sometimes none too gently—to put a stop to moves that were manifestly intended to charge exorbitant or excessive rates for funds needed in industrial channels to cover production and to get people back to work.

NEW WAGE CONTRACT OF NEWS WRITERS FIXES 30-HOUR WEEK

Milwaukee Leader Enters Into Agreement With Editorial Workers Fixing Minimum Rates of Pay; Eliminates Students Working for Low Wages.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 23.—A new labor contract between the Milwaukee Leader and the Milwaukee Newswriters' Union No. 9, and containing the first award in the newspaper industry of the 5-day and 30-hour week, has been signed. This union is affiliated with the A. F. of L., but not with the Newspaper Guild, which was formed during the pendency of the publishers code.

For the first time this union includes a wage scale in its working agreement, which in this case is the result of arbitration of differences between the news workers and the publisher. The minimum weekly wage scales are: Experienced news men and women, weekly, $45 effective Jan. 1, 1934, and $52 effective Oct. 1, 1934; news men and women of four to five years' experience, $40 and $46; of three to four years' experience, $32.50 and $40; of two to three years' experience, $28 and $35; of one to two years' experience, $24.50 and $28, and of less than one year's experience, $20 and $22.50.

Fixes 30-Hour Week.

Department heads at no time are to receive less than the highest minimum in the schedule, and no employe is to suffer a reduction in his previous wage.

The arbiter in making his award in connection with the 5-day, 30-hour week, said that he entertained no doubt that this limitation can be established by all newspapers, regardless of the number of editions, and that it is in keeping with sound practice and the need of the time.

It was pointed out further that the labor press can offer "no justification for placing a lower value on the labor that enters into the product of its business" than the commercial press.

"Many capitalistic papers would cease publication were it not for the financial support of those whom they serve," said the arbiter's report. "Labor, to get similar service in its interests, must be expected to finance the press championing its cause."

The contract provides that without the express consent of the union, not more than one employe of less than one year's experience can be employed at one time. This section is intended to eliminate the promiscuous use of established wages and working conditions, and promoting a tendency recognized as largely responsible for keeping down the standards of regular editorial and news workers.

At the Times Chapel

The headquarters of the Home Stores committee being in our chapel, I guess it is appropriate to talk about the Home Stores in this column. The writer is in receipt of a letter from Chickamauga which bears out the rumor published in The Labor World last week to the effect that the McDonald unit in Chickamauga is about to fold up and withdraw from competition with fair merchants of Chickamauga.

A number of the members of our chapel keep a supply of the Home Stores committee's "Unfair" cards in their pockets and distribute them in places where they can do the most good.

CHICAGO PREPARES FOR TYPO GATHERING

Chicago.—The International Typographical union will hold its 78th annual convention here, beginning Sept. 8. A feature of the convention will be "I. T. U. Day" at the Century of Progress fair on Sept. 9 with a two-hour program in the court of the Hall of Science building which will be broadcast in part or in full by the large broadcasting companies and two local stations. The speakers will include President William Green, of the A. F. of L.; President Charles P. Howard, of the I. T. U., and two of the local newspaper publishers. Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 will be host to the convention.

WARNING TO DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS

On the first day of October, 1934, unpaid City real estate taxes will be placed in the hands of the Delinquent Tax Attorney for collection by legal proceedings. On said day an additional penalt yof five (5%) per cent. will be imposed on the gross amount of taxes, interest and penalties, as now provided by law.

Delinquent taxes may be paid at my office until October 1st, 1934, without the aforementioned additional penalty.

ALVIN SHIPP,
City Treasurer and Tax Collector.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Whereas, on the 1st day of July, 1930, Margaret W. Saunders (widow), of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, executed a deed of trust, conveying the property hereinafter described and advertised for sale, to me as Trustee, which deed of trust is found of record in Book C, Vol. 25, page 574 et seq., of the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee; and,

Whereas, said deed of trust was executed for the purpose of securing the payment of a certain indebtedness, fully described in said deed of trust, to which reference is made for a complete description; and default has been made in the payment of the indebtedness so secured and interest thereon; and the said Margaret W. Saunders has failed to perform covenants in the said deed of trust and has remained in default for more than thirty days and the holder of the indebtedness has made demand upon me, as Trustee, to sell the property conveyed by the said deed of trust as therein provided, to satisfy the payment of said indebtedness and interest, as said holder had a right to do under the terms of said deed of trust:

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by said deed of trust, I, C. W. K. Meacham, Trustee, will,

ON THE 7th DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1934,

sell, within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, in bar of all equities of redemption, dower and homestead, and all other exemptions of every kind, the following described real estate in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, viz.:

The south 100 feet of the north 105 feet of the west 100 feet of Lot 21, Map of Johnson's Revised Subdivision of St. Elmo, in the former Second Civil District, present City of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, as shown by plat of record in Plat Book No. 5, page 5, in the Register's office of said county; and being the same property conveyed to Margaret W. Saunders by two deeds, one from Texas Hixon Key et al, registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 539, and one from Cridner W. Robinson (single), registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 538, in said Register's office.

The north five (5) feet of said Lot 21 has been dedicated to the public as a part of West 41st Street.

Subject to requirements of Zoning Ordinance No. 1843 of the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and any amendments thereto.

Said deed of trust recites that the title to the said property is clear, free and unencumbered, and title to the same is believed to be good, but the sale will be made as Trustee only.

STRIKERS FINGERPRINTED BY NEW YORK MAGISTRATE

Disagrees With President Roosevelt's Position That Labor Has the Right to Organize and Strike.

New York, Aug. 23.—Magistrate Overton Harris in the Tombs court here ordered fingerprints taken of three men and two women knitgoods strikers whom police said had created a "disturbance" in front of a knitgoods store. Samuel Markewich, lawyer for the Knitgoods Workers' union, protested that the court had no legal right to issue such an order.

"I think it is a very good thing to fingerprint them," the magistrade retorted. "We'll know them after this."

Mr. Markewich replied that his clients had the right to strike and that President Roosevelt had declared that labor had the right to organize.

"I don't agree with President Roosevelt," interrupted the magistrate. "You do, I suppose, but I'm not like you. I don't agree with the president."

On being informed that the prisoners had no previous police records, the magistrate fined each of them $10.00.

RAILROADS ASK INJUNCTION AGAINST NEW PENSION LAW

Carriers File Petition to Have Act to Pension Employes Held Unconstitutional; Resistence to Law Has Been Expected; Brotherhoods Will Oppose Petition.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Petition filed by 137 railroads in the supreme court of the District of Columbia seeks an injunction to prevent the railroad pension act, passed in the last session of congress, going into effect. A fight by the railroads on this law has been anticipated. The injunction would prevent the retirement board, created under the law, from collecting assessments against the carriers and their employes.

The railroads, headed by Sidney R. Prince, counsel for the Southern railway, charged the new law violates the interstate commerce clause and Fifth amendment of the federal constitution by depriving the carriers of property without due process of law. They asserted that compliance would add a cost of $60,000,000 a year to the railroads, and becoming larger with each succeeding year.

Says Congress Exceeded Power.

Congress is charged with exceeding its powers in passing the law, and that it is unreasonable in that it applies to all employes, including "those not engaged in commerce, those engaged exclusively in intrastate commerce," and those whose work is not directly related to interstate commerce.

More than 1,000,000 railroad workers would be affected by the law, which would assess workers 2 per cent of their pay, the railroads 4 per cent of their payrolls, to create a pension fund.

Federal attorneys, through the solicitor general's office, will defend the act and ask for denial of the injunction.

The Association of Railway Labor Executives, which sponsored the railway pension act, will offer the services of counsel to assist the government counsel. The unions are represented by Frank Mulholland, of Cleveland, considered one of the shrewdest lawyers in the country and possessed of a wide labor background. Railway labor executives are confident the act will be sustained.

TEXTILE STRIKE

the "stretch-out," have been points of controversy since the initial hearings on the cotton textile code. The workers were promised an adjustment at that time, and one or two committees were named under the benign auspices of NRA to make studies and devise an equitable adjustment. These committees either became befogged in their own economic philosophies, or showed neither the will or initiative to carry out the task imposed on them.

Vote Almost Unanimous.

Only ten dissenting votes were cast when the strike proposal came before the New York convention of the textile workers, and composed of 500 delegates. Support of the strike by the American Federation of Labor was promised by George Googe, who came before the delegates as the representative of President Green. Googe expressed the hope that a way might be found to avert a strike, but pointed out that this could not be at the expense of laying aside the demands and interests of the workers, or longer tolerating the abuses which they have faced during and before the code era.

In the diliberations of the convention it became clear that the causes underlying the strike proposition at this time are cumulative, and go back into the failure to satisfactorily solve or deal with the workers' problems in recent months. There was reference to the general strike threat in the cotton textile industry last spring, which was averted or postponed when Gen. Johnson came to an agreement with President McMahon, of the textile workers' union.

At that time the 25 per cent curtailment in working time was proposed, with corresponding reduction in weekly pay. Under the terms of that settlement the machine-hour curtailment scheme remained unchanged, and Gen. Johnson issued an order giving the cotton textile board the power to decide questions of labor representation and adding a labor member to the government's representation on this board.

Discussion Is Heated.

Discussion of the strike proposal continued amid turbulent scenes for many hours. Delegates from the southern states were acrimonious in their references to the conditions that prevail in mills in those states, and where resistance to unionization has been most emphatic.

Francis J. Gorman, first vice-president, voiced the belief there is no other way out than in a general strike—a remark that was greeted with prolonged applause. Discussing the strikes now in progress at mills in Alabama, Gorman declared that mill owners in that state "have conspired to destroy the locals," and that if the strikes had not been called, the local unions would have been entirely wiped out.

"There is a fight in this industry against recognition of our union," continued Gorman. "It has consistently refused to set a definition for skilled and unskilled workers—the very essence of equitable working conditions and wage rates.

"The minimum wage under the code was set at $12 per week, but the mill owners have deducted 25 per cent from that, and, with other reductions, the rate of pay is now $6 and $7 a week."

Gorman directed attention to the "stretch-out" system—a device by which the individual worker is given a larger number of machines to look after, and his effort increased and extended without corresponding additional compensation. This system, said Gorman, has assumed vicious proportions under the operation of the code.

New Machinery Installed.

Gorman was followed by various textile strike leaders from the southern states who added their voices to the demand for a general strike. Among them were J. P. Holland, of Gadsden, Ala., who told of the increasing prevalence of the "stretch-out" system, and of whole families dismissed from mills for joining the union; J. A. Freer, of Columbia, S. C., who asserted that not only is the "stretch-out" system in vogue, but that newer and faster machines are being installed, and more than a dozen other spokesmen.

If you have done an injury to a fellow-worker by failing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

Deserve better working conditions by aiding other workers to secure them. Demand the UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD.

CWA Restoration Urged by Green For Unemployed

Declares Shorter Work Week and Other Militant Measures Are Imperative to Care for Millions of Unemployed.

Atlantic City, Aug. 16.—The failure of the NRA to provide jobs for the millions of unemployed and the necessity of restoring the civil works administration to face the coming winter crisis were emphasized by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in discussing the tragedy of the unemployment situation. Mr. Green, who was attending the fall meeting of the executive council of the federation here, said:

"We regard the question of unemployment as of outstanding importance, although the NRA has reduced that unemployment to some extent. It has no doubt created opportunity for three or four million people. When the peak of the unemployment situation was reached in 1931 there were more than 13,000,000 idle persons in this country.

"Since then a reduction of hours and the stimulus given employment through the various codes of fair practice have returned many to work, but unemployment is still a major problem. There are now approximately 10,000,000 out of work, and many of these are getting relief through funds contributed by the federal government. The situation is serious and is proving a great burden to the government."

Declaring that conditions could only be improved by the creation of opportunities to work and the decreasing the number of jobless to the minimum, Mr. Green said:

"This must be brought about through a reduction in the number of work hours a week and the enlargement of government improvement plans so that they will create a greater opportunity for private industry. It may mean a restoration of a civil works administration. Organized labor favors this plan rather than the present system of direct relief."

Mr. Green reaffirmed the position of the American Federation of Labor to the effect that raising the wage level is imperative, so that in payment of wages enough money will be distributed to enable the masses to purchase merchandise and thus enable industry to produce in a manner to guarantee sufficient employment to take care of the idle.

"Our great trouble now is that we are out of balance," he concluded. "Our four years of terrible unemployment have demonstrated the fact that if we are to provide work for all we must establish a five-day work week."

He said that a number of industries had already established it, and that it is working very well.

Plans Complete For Enjoyable Outing

Baseball, Athletic Contests Are Slated.

PARK CONCESSIONS TO RUN FULL BLAST

Arrangements Made for Entertainment of Young and Old in All-Day Observance of Labor's Holiday.

St. James Pastor To Hold Special Labor Services

Rev. George E. Blanchard, pastor of St. James M. E. church, Rossville and Read avenues, has extended a special invitation to members of organized labor to attend a labor service to be held at the church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Mr. Blanchard offered the invitation through M. H. Ortwein, chairman of the Labor Day committee of Central Body, and several have already expressed their intention of attending.

A motorcycle rodeo, with many of his section's best "stunt riders" competing for prizes, will feature Monday's celebration of Labor Day at Warner park, and Chairman M. H. Ortwein, of Central Body's entertainment committee, promises an entertaining program throughout the day for men, women and children.

Athletic contests in the morning, a baseball game in the afternoon and softball games at night will augment the regular park concessions, and it is expected thousands of citizens will, as usual, join with labor in celebration of its national holiday locally.

Efforts have been made to secure an outstanding speaker for the occasion, but at press time this features was uncertain. Headquarters of the United Textile Workers of America has appealed to to furnish an orator, but Thomas F. McMahon, president, declared that every official of that organization would be "tied up" with matters relating to the great nationwide strike called for Saturday night. Mr. Ortwein expressed confidence, however, that the program will be enjoyable, and said the committee expects hundreds to bring picnic lunches and spend the entire day at the park. Members of the committee in charge are George Rogers, Charles R. Puckett, Matt Gerlach, W. F. Strickland, E. McDaniels, T. R. Cuthbert and C. Kamin.

Program for the motorcycle rodeo, furnished by the Chattanooga Motorcycle club, indicates the interesting nature of the feature, and forecasts a truly enjoyable afternoon for lovers of this thrilling sport. It follows:

Potato Race—Nearly everyone knows what a potato race is. The contestants are provided with two pails, one empty and one full of potatoes. The object is to fill the empty pail in the shortest time. Each time over the course, the rider picks up a potato, carries it around the course and drops it in the empty box.

Acceleration Race—This one is a race against time. The contestants have to go over a straight course fifty feet in length, from a standing start, in the shortest possible time.

Egg Relay—This is merely a relay race using an egg instead of a shuttle. There are two men on each contesting team. The rider of each team is lined up at the starting line and given an egg. At a given signal he rides over the course, carrying the egg in his hand, and back to the starting line, where his partner is waiting, ready to go. The partner must take the egg and do the same thing. The team taking their egg around the track six times in the shortest time are the winners. The egg must not be broken.

Stunt Riding—If you like thrills, include this in your program. It is an exhibition of riding requiring iron nerve and riding skill. The different items on this event will spread out through the program to take up time between other events.

Obstacle Race—Obstacles may be boxes, barrels, stakes, tires, pop bottles or boulders. These should be placed in a straight line about six feet apart. When the signal is given, the riders leave the starting line, one at a time, weaving in and out between the obstacles, attempting to reach the finish line in the shortest possible time. Striking an obstacle, using the feet to maintain balance or failing to ride

Hosiery Workers' Picnic-Outing Proves Successful

Inclement Weather Fails to Prevent Good Attendance at Lookout Lake.

Despite the inclement weather on last Saturday, Aug. 25, the outing and barbecue held by Branch No. 53 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers proved quite a success. While the weather of course kept many of the Hosiery Workers away from the outing, over three hundred and fifty braved the elements and enjoyed the barbecue and other entertainment supplied by the committee. The committee feels sure that had the weather been more favorable several hundred more people would have come out.

Short talks were given by Frank Ward and Fred G. Held, of the Federation of Hosiery Workers, welcoming the workers, and expressing the wish that this would be the forerunner of many more social events in the future, as this was one of the best mediums to bring about a better understanding among the hosiery workers. After the workers had enjoyed their lunch of barbecue and trimmings, lucky numbers were drawn for many prizes donated by the merchants of Chattanooga and Rossville. Following will be found a list of the merchants who donated some substantive articles of merchandise, including a beautiful table lamp, bridge lamp, five cases of beer and many other worthwhile prizes.

It is regrettable to announce that the list of prize-winners was mislaid and could not be found at the time this goes to press. The arrangements committee wishes to thank those merchants who so willingly helped to make this affair a success.

MASS MEETING FOR TEXTILE WORKERS CALLED FOR NOON MONDAY AT PARK

A. C. Kamin, president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council, announced Friday morning that a mass meeting for all textile workers of the Chattanooga territory is called for 12 o'clock noon Monday, at Warner Park. George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, has been wired for an outstanding speaker, Mr. Kamin said, and the textile situation in general will be explained. Union and non-union workers are invited to attend, he added.

POOR PAY, UNBEARABLE LOAD OF WORK CHIEF GRIEVANCES

United Textile Workers Set Forth Position in Letter to National Labor Relations Board Head, Outlining Mill Labor Problems and Workers' Demand for Fair and Equitable Adjustment of Troubles.

Washington, Aug. 30.—As the general strike of textile workers drew near, the United Textile Workers of America set forth its position in a full statement on the intolerable conditions that have forced more than half a million textile mill workers to revolt.

The union's position and its grievances were detailed in a letter sent to Chairman Lloyd Garrison, of the national labor relations board, by Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the United Textile Workers' special strike committee.

Four main labor problems were outlined in the letter, which reiterated the union's demand for the 30-hour working week at present rates of pay. Other demands were:

Establishment of maximum work loads.

Reinstatement of all workers victimized for union membership.

Recognition of United Textile Workers as the bargaining agency for textile labor.

Establishment of an arbitration tribunal to settle all disputes between the workers and employers.

The letter was sent following an invitation to the strike committee to meet with Garrison for discussion of the points at issue between textile workers and employers.

Federal Relief Expected.

Asked about federal relief for strikers, Gorman made it clear that the union expected the federal relief administration to give relief to the workers. The same day, Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, said there had been no change in the national administration's policy of feeding hungry strikers the same as those who were unemployed because they could not find work.

"The position of the federal relief administration is clear," Gorman said in replying to questions on relief. "It feeds hungry people and it does not inquire what made people hungry, unless the department of labor specifically rules that a strike is unwarranted. I have said there can be no doubt that the department will regard this strike as fully warranted. There is every reason to believe relief will be extended when and where strikers need relief. The decision, however, is not ours to make.

"But let me emphasize this: Determination, solidarity and a burning sense of outrage will win this strike, food or no food. We have been through many strikes. We have lived through them, even though our people have gone hungry. They go hungry even when they work. I dare say the average waist measure of textile workers is not over 30 inches.

No Strike "War Chest."

"The federal relief administration has its policy and I presume it will follow that policy in this strike situation. We shall be glad if relief is extended where needed. Surely we shall not win this strike on a 'war chest,' for there is no war chest. Some of the world's most righteous causes have been won by some of the world's hungriest men. The strike does not depend upon how well our people are fed. They have never been well fed. No family can be fed on a wage that ranges, as textile wages do today, between $7 and $9 per week. There is not much margin between that and nothing.

"It is entirely probable that in hundreds of cases federal relief will be better than a job in the mills. If there were a general desire for justice the mill owners would be glad to join with us in co-operation to remedy the situation, instead of facing us, as so many of them do, in implacable hostility."

Letter to Garrison.

The union's letter to Garrison follows:

Mr. Lloyd Garrison, Chairman,
National Labor Relations Board,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

There are four central labor problems in the cotton textile industry on which the workers are demanding some adjustment:

1—An unbearable work load has been thrown upon the workers in an effort to cut production costs under existing business conditions;

2—Earnings in the industry are now at pre-code levels, and the rates paid the more skilled workers are being pushed down toward the minimum;

3—The industry has recognized the fact that it cannot operate on a 40-hour week basis, and is working for an extension of the summer curtailment, which has reduced all weekly wages 25 per cent;

4—Section 7-A of the NRA is being ignored, and hundreds of workers have been discharged for their activities in labor organization and collective bargaining.

Stretch-Out.

Section XV of the cotton textile code provided that there should be no further extension of existing work loads without the approval of the code authority. Section XVII of the code stipulated that the cotton textile national industrial relations board be set up to study and adjust the stretch-out and other problems in the industry.

In direct violation of the code provision, employers, particularly in the south, have intensified the stretch-out as a means of offsetting the reduction of hours from 55 and 60 to 40, under the code.

Between Aug. 6, 1933, and Aug. 12, 1934, 1,028 complaints on the stretch-out were submitted to the cotton textile national industrial relations board for investigation. In accordance with the existing procedure these were turned over to the code authority, which dismissed 40 per cent of them without investigation as "not involving any violation of the code."

No Results from Investigations.

Investigators, employed by the code authority, interviewed about 600 employers, on the matter of the stretch-out complaints, but in not a single case has any adjustment of the work load resulted from these investigations. Neither has there been any satisfactory adjustment in the many conferences under the supervision of the state and national cotton textile boards. Committees have met with employers in the mill, and around board tables, but we have never got any more than a recognition of the fact that some adjustment of this problem is necessary.

The cotton textile national industrial relations board has taken no definite steps toward carrying out its expressly defined function of studying the work load problem. It is not a simple problem by any means, complicated as it is by variations in equipment, in factory organizations and efficiency, and in yarn and fabric constructions. However, it is imperative that some positive measures be taken toward remedying this inhuman device for forcing ten or twelve hours' productive labor out of a worker in eight hours. It is apparent that the cotton board, during the twelve months of its operation, has made no progress in that direction, either through its complaint machinery or conference procedure.

Wages and Hours.

Since 1921, the wages of cotton textile workers have been lower than those in any major industry. By 1933 the average rate paid to all operators in the industry was 21.4 cents per hour, less than half the average rate paid in all the industries which report to the bureau of labor statistics.

With the adoption of the 40-hour standard week, rates of pay were of course automatically increased, and the average rate reported by the bureau of labor statistics rose 16 cents to about 37 cents per hour in June, 1934. However, this did not result in any real increase in the weekly earnings of the workers. From bureau of labor statistics employment and payroll figures, we calculate that per capita earnings in June, 1934, amounted to $10.86 per week. Since that is an average figure, it is obvious that thousands of cotton textile workers are receiving considerably less than that. Our people in Alabama report that the average rate in that state is $7.40 per week.

Causes of Poor Pay.

This situation has been brought about partly through such subterfuges and violations as classing experienced workers as learners and students, and keeping short records of the number of hours worked. It has also resulted in large part from restricted operations under the curtailment order issued by Gen. Johnson in June which, from the workers' point of view, reduced the legal minimum from $12 to $9 per week. At the present time a new curtailment program to supplant the one which expired Saturday, Aug. 25, is awaiting NRA approval.

It is apparent that the industry is not prepared to operate on a 40-hour basis, and that it intends to continue to bolster net earnings with funds out of the pay envelopes of the workers.

Neither has any substantial reemployment of workers been effected by the code. With the application of the stretch-out, the total number on payrolls in June, 1934, according to the bureau of labor statistics, was 416,000, 32,000 less than in August, 1933, which was the first month after the code went into effect.

Hours Reduction Sought.

We are working for a just reduction in standard hours of work, as a partial remedy for these conditions.

We know that in many cases the wage differentials of the highly skilled operators has not been maintained, not because the rates paid unskilled workers have been increased, but because wages in the higher brackets have actually been cut. Scores of statements from our members and our local unions show specific instances in which such highly skilled workers as spinners, weavers, or slasher men are receiving only two or three cents per hour more than the established minimum. The tendency for the minimum to become the maximum is well under way, and it can be checked only after the various occupations have been classified according to the degrees of skill involved.

Violation of Section 7-A.

It is not necessary to detail here the violation of the collective bargaining provisions of the code. We havehad to fight a conspiracy of the employers not to recognize the United Textile Workers of America as the representative organization of the workers. Our local union officers and members have been discharged by the hundreds from their union activities, and have been discriminated against in the mills and in re-employment situations. Investigations by the code authority and conferences with the state and national boards have accomplished nothing in the way of reinstatement of our members, or curtailment of the wholesale destruction of union organization.

Teachers Appeal For Larger Budget

Teachers' Union Official Urges New Social Goal

Legislative Representative Criticizes Individualism for Unemployment.

New York.—In an address at the National Schoolmart and Schoolview here, Dr. Abraham Lefkowitz, legislative representative of the Teachers' union, urged reorganization of American schools around the basic concept of co-operation for a common social goal. He also stressed the education so that it function as a social and stabilizing force. He said:

"Today we owe it to our children to so reorganize our schools that they will function efficiently and socially in our complex technological civilization. This must be done because our inherited, unbridled individualism has outlived its usefulness, bringing unemployment, war and misery in its wake.

"Following social trends, we should build our educational philosophy around the basic concept of co-operation for a common social goal. Only by doing that can we fit our students for a co-operative industrial era dominated by the ideal of social service—an ideal but vaguely foreshadowed in the new deal, the first confused transitional step toward the newer society.

"Only by substituting co-operative group activity for the competitive individualism which now dominates our schools, can we hope to develop a type of citizen competent to take his place in the new society—a society in which huge complicated machines, by mass production, turn out enough goods to provide every citizen with a cultural wage and, at the same time, so shorten the hours of labor as to produce unprecedented leisure for all."

COMMITTEE CALLS ON COMMISSIONER

Spokesman Holds Proper Consideration for Education Has Not Been Given and Urges Changes in Policy.

"The training and welfare of the children of Chattanooga is no less important, surely, than the protection of our homes and property," a committee representing Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, holds in a personally delivered communication to Commissioner Wilkerson Monday.

Earnest appeal for a budget for the department which will place the schools of Chattanooga on a par with those of other cities was made by the committee, which reported a sympathetic interest on the part of the commissioner.

"The sum and substance of the teachers' plea is that the department of education be placed on a par with other departments, with due regard for the much greater size of the department of education. The mere fact that the budget for education exceeds the budgets for other services does not mean that our schools are receiving their fair and proper share of city revenues," a spokesman for the organization explained to The Labor World this week.

The teachers feel the schools have been treated unfairly in the apportionment of city revenues, the spokesman declared, and it is up to the public to inform themselves and demand a readjustment of the policy with respect to financing this all-important branch of the city government.

"The letter was handed to the commissioner of education Monday by a committee of the Teachers' Federation," The Labor World's informant said. "The committee was well received and held a prolonged conference with the commissioner on budget problems. The commissioner agreed that more money is needed for schools and invited support in efforts to secure an increased appropriation.

"The teachers' committee expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the discrimination against the educational department and teachers, which has been their lot during the last few years. As has been said many times before, the teachers desire to do their proper share to ease the difficult position in which the city government has found itself for the past several years, but they do not regard it as a proper share to receive salaries far below the fair proportion of salaries paid other municipal employes and on top of that to receive salary cuts of greater percentage than given to the others.

"The training and welfare of the children of Chattanooga is no less important, surely, than the protection of our homes and property and certainly as great as the interest on bonds and other obligations, important as they are.

"It is rather astounding to find that debt service costs us practically as much as our school system.

"Let the people of Chattanooga demand fair and equal treatment for their schools. It is idle to suppose that our schools will receive proper treatment unless every citizen desires proper treatment and makes known his desires by prompt payment of taxes and an insistent support of better schools."

HOURS OF LABOR

By GEORGE W. THOMSON
Editor, The Draughtsman, Organ of the British Association of Engineering and Shipbuilding Draughtsmen.

The prolonged inactivity of large sections of every industrial population has had the curious effect of workpeople making economic demands in a period of depression, rather than, in the usual industrial idiom, making them in periods of prosperity.

The demands for shorter hours are being made at once as a measure of spreading employment instead of concentrating employment in few hands and leaving a large mass constantly unemployed, and also because workpeople to an increasing extent are coming to believe that improvements in business and industrial technique ought to result in their sharing the advantages along with others of the population.

One of these advantages is leisure for recreation, for study and for the enjoyment of those things which largely constitute civilization. Unfortunately in the consideration of the 40-hour week convention by the International Labor conference at Geneva, the British government seems always to be opposed to any claim of this description and to side with its masters, the employers, who, like the Bourbons of old, seem to forget nothing and to learn nothing.

Even enlightened employers like Lord Trent, in whose factory the five-day week of forty hours has been instituted, evidently with success, thinks this is a matter for the industries themselves rather than for governmental decree in fulfillment of international conventions. But progress has always come in double harness, when enlightenment has experimented; and compulsion has been laid upon the backward.

The claim for shortening hours is overwhelming.

WOMAN "RED" IS JAILED

San Francisco.—Municipal Judge Alvin Ames imposed a jail term of six months on Elaine Black, secretary of the International Labor Defense, after a jury had convicted her of vagrancy. She recently participated in a hunger strike with other alleged communists in the city prison.

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. Stretch-Out in Textile Industry

Despite the alleged wonderful improvement in the conditions of the cotton textile workers under the NRA code which George Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Institute, supported by statements made by the National Recovery Administration, asserts have taken place, the facts revealed by the United Textile Workers of America in a broad survey show just the opposite.

Mr. Sloan in his figures compared the best month in this year with the worst month in last year. Then, too, he talked in percentages, which mean but little. Special Strike Committee Chairman Francis J. Gorman punctures Mr. Sloan's data with a few well pointed facts.

"Mr. Sloan said cotton mill workers had received 70 per cent increase in hourly pay under the NRA," Mr. Gorman asserted, "but with no work they find his percentages a poor substitute for cash when they go to buy food. Average actual weekly earnings per capita in the cotton mill industry are lower than before the NRA, according to evidence before us in the form of reports from organizers and local union officials and in the form of pay envelopes, of which we have a collection covering a wide and representative field."

Turning to the notorious stretch-out system, the application of which has gone on vigorously under the NRA code, Mr. Gorman said:

"Added to this, the average mill worker is doing from 33 per cent to 100 per cent more work than in pre-code days.

"In other words, the stretch-out, which the code was intended, among other things, to abolish, has so flourished that workers are doing as much as double the amount of productive work they did before NRA.

"Anyone who has ever observed the refined cruelty of the stretch-out will understand what is meant when output per worker is doubled.

"The worker is literally stretched a little more each week until his arms cover a field nobody ever thought human arms could cover until scientific torture came to the assistance of employers.

"We have, thus, more output per man and in the aggregate, less employment than before the code; less aggregate earnings for the workers, and an absolute refusal on the part of the industry to deal with the workers through their lawfully and democratically chosen representatives, in clear violation of the law. That we intend to remedy, along with the wage and working conditions."

In concluding his indictment of the conditions imposed upon the textile workers by the NRA code of fair competition, Mr. Gorman said:

"Cotton textile workers are, in the main, in a worse position than they were before the NRA, except that they now have some prospect for finally remedying their condition under the protection of Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act."

The strike scheduled for the early days in September should bring out all the textile workers in the United States and keep them out until the application of economic justice to their employes is forced on the low-wage barons who own and control the textile industry.

Textile Wages and Consumer Prices

Officials of the National Recovery Administration and anti-labor cotton textile mill owners have shouted from the housetops the alleged inability of the mill owners paying increased wages demanded by the impending strike of the textile workers without imposing an impossible burden on the consumers in the form of price increases.

The falsity of this propaganda is thoroughly revealed in a letter written by Francis Gorman, chairman of the Special Strike Committee of the United Textile Workers of America, to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Gorman said:

"We can offer you a striking example of our conditions, pictured in terms of a madras shirt, such as one of our committee members is wearing at this moment.

"The shirt cost him $1.55. It cost exactly ten cents to manufacture the cloth in the shirt, from bale to counter, including handling and transportation.

"If that shirt could sell at $1.59, only four cents more than it cost our member, every textile worker could be paid a wage increase of 33 1-3 per cent.

"Would men be willing to pay four cents more so that their fellow workers in our industry might be fairly paid? We think so.

"Let me say further that an increase of only a cent a yard would give cotton textile workers a fair wage throughout the industry. The change in the cost of a dress would be less than ten cents—probably not more than eight cents."

Four cents advance in the cost of a shirt and eight or ten cents in the cost of a dress would enable the manufacturers to increase the textile workers wages 33 1-3 per cent—and yet the low-wage textile employers contend that consumers would rise up in a holy war against such a wage rise to improve the living standards of the textile workers.

MACHINERY REVOLUTIONIZING MODERN PRODUCTION METHODS, SECRETARY MORRISON POINTS OUT

By FRANK MORRISON
Secretary American Federation of Labor.

The enactment of the national recovery act, which enumerates in definite and unmistakable language the policy of the United States government of recognizing the right of workers to join a union of their own choosing, has aroused widespread interest among unorganized workers in establishing membership in unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The purpose of workers in joining a labor union is to remedy grievances and secure improved standards in conditions of labor in the particular work at which they are employed. In no other type of labor organization has the worker greater freedom to deal with questions relating to the line of employment which is of immediate interest to him than is afforded in the trade union.

The members of trade unions are free to chart their course in whatever way appeals to them as promoting their best interests so long as there may be no encroachment upon the equal rights of other trades and callings. They may join with members of other trades to act unitedly in a given situation or they may amalgamate with other organizations as the wisdom of these acts may suggest themselves. Organizations in allied industries such as the building trades, metal trades, printing trades and in the railroad industry, have formed departments to establish mutual relations in the consideration of questions affecting the interests of their particular trades and callings. The machinery exists to promote unity of action as far as the workers wish to apply such policy. An instance of the flexibility of trade union policies to adopt themselves to the needs of the workers is the resolution adopted by a conference of national and international organizations in interest, authorizing the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to conduct an organization campaign among the workers in mass production industries and place them in local unions directly chartered by the American Federation of Labor, and where workers are taken into these local unions that come under the jurisdiction of one or more national or international organizations, which is a temporary infraction of the rights of these organizations involved, that the Executive Council adjust such difficulties in the spirit of taking full advantage of the immediate situation with the ultimate recognition of the rights of all concerned.

Automatic machinery, the application of scientific processes and the introduction of new materials are revolutionizing production methods. This has caused the overlapping of trades formerly separate and distinct. The trade union movement provides orderly measures for the workers affected to adjust these questions through conference and agreement on a basis satisfactory to them.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY INDICATES LONG STRUGGLE FOR NATIONAL HOLIDAY

The movement to secure the enactment of legislation to make Labor Day a general holiday began in the 1894 convention of the American Federation of Labor, which unanimously adopted the following resolution introduced by A. C. Cameron, a delegate from the Chicago Trades and Labor Alliance:

"Resolved, That the first Monday in September of each year be set apart as a laborers' national holiday, and that we recommend its observance by all wage workers, irrespective of sex, calling or nationality."

During the next ten years organized labor devoted its attention to securing state legislation making Labor Day a legal state holiday. By 1893 the legislatures of twenty-three states had enacted Labor Day laws.

Labor Day Bills in Fifty-third Congress.

In the meantime officials of the American Federation of Labor endeavored to have congress enact a law establishing Labor Day as a national legal holiday.

Shortly after the convening of the special session of the Fifty-third congress, called by President Grover Cleveland in August, 1893, to consider the serious financial question which confronted the country, bills setting apart Labor Day as a national holiday were introduced by Senator James H. Kyle, of South Dakota; Representative Amos J. Cummings, of New York, and Representative Robert E. De Forest, of Connecticut.

There was no opposition to the bills in either house, but the parliamentary path which they had to travel is interesting to students of legislative procedure.

The Congressional Record for Aug. 28, 1893, in its account of the senate proceedings for that day under the heading "Bills Introduced," printed the following:

"Mr. Kyle introduced a bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday, which was read twice by its title, and referred to the committee on education and labor."

In the house proceedings for Sept. 6, under the heading "Bills, Memorials, and Resolutions," the following announcements were made:

"By Mr. Cummings: A bill (H. R. 28) making Labor Day a legal holiday—to the committee on labor."

"By Mr. De Forest: A bill (H. R. 334) making the first Monday in September, otherwise called Labor Day, a national holiday—to the committee on labor."

Kyle Bill Reported to Senate.

There was evidently no opposition to the Kyle bill, for on Feb. 13, 1894, under the heading "Reports of Committees" the Congressional Record printed this item:

"Mr. Kyle, from the committee on education and labor, to whom was referred the bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday, reported it without amendment."

Cummings Bill Reported to House.

The house proceedings for May 15, 1894, under the heading "Labor Day a Legal Holiday," contained this notice:

"Mr. McGann, from the committee on labor, reported favorably the bill (H. 28) making Labor Day a legal holiday; which was referred to the house calendar, and with the accompanying report ordered printed."

Senate Considers Kyle Bill.

In the senate the Kyle bill came up for consideration on June 22, 1894. The following account of the proceedings is taken from the Congressional Record for that day:

"The Vice-President: The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

"Mr. Kyle: We are on the calendar just about down to Order of Business No. 245, which is senate bill 730. I ask that the senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday.

"There being no objection, the senate, as in committee of the whole, proceeded to consider the bill; which was read, as follows:

"'Be it enacted, etc., that the first Monday in September of each year, being the day known and celebrated as labor's holiday, is hereby made a legal public holiday, to all intents and purposes, in the same manner as Christmas, the 1st day of January, the 22d day of February, the 30th of May and the 4th day of July are now by law made public holidays.'"

Labor Asks First Monday in September.

"Mr. Kyle: I should like to say, for the information of those who do not know, that something like twenty-five states of the United States have now settled upon the first Monday of September or the first day of October. In order to make the observance uniform, that all may enjoy vacation privilege upon the same day, the labor organizations of the country have united in asking that the first Monday of September be set apart as a holiday."

This explanation of the bill by Senator Kyle was followed by a brief discussion participated in by Senator William B. Allison of Iowa, Senator Francis M. Cockrell of Missouri, Senator John H. Mitchell of Oregon, and Senator John Sherman of Ohio. The only objection raised was by Senator Cockrell, who believed that for the sake of "symmetry" in national holidays Labor Day should be fixed for the first day in September instead of the first Monday.

Cockrell Urges First Day in September.

The Congressional Record gives this account of the debate:

"Mr. Allison: Is the day in the bill the 1st day of September?

"Mr. Cockrell: The first Monday of September. It ought to be the 1st day of September. I move to strike out 'Monday' and insert 'day,' so as to read, 'the first day of September.'

"Mr. Mitchell of Oregon: Then it would come on Sunday every few years.

"Mr. Cockrell: So does the 4th of July, so does any fixed holiday fall upon Sunday occasionally.

"Mr. Mitchell of Oregon: It should be fixed on a week day.

Sherman Abhors Sunday Holidays.

"Mr. Sherman: I think if the labor organizations have fixed their own time, as it is said twenty-five states have done, we had better let them have a week day. I do not myself like to encourage holidays on Sunday. There is too much old Presbyterianism in me for that.

Cockrell Stresses Legislative "Symmetry."

"Mr. Cockrell: Neither do I like to encourage holidays on Sunday; but if there is to be any symmetry in our holidays this one ought to be fixed on the first day of the month, just as we have the 4th of July, the 25th of December, the 30th of May, and so on for public holidays. However, I have no objection to letting it go; and I withdraw my amendment if there is any objection to it.

Original Bill Is Passed.

"Mr. Sherman: We had better leave it the first Monday, as we now create the holiday. The 4th of July was created by a great event, and could not be changed.

"The Vice-President: The amendment proposed by the senator from Missouri is withdrawn.

"The bill was reported to the senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed."

Laid on the Speaker's Table.

The Kyle bill reached the house on June 23. Under the heading "Labor Day a Legal Holiday," the Congressional Record for that day said:

"The Speaker laid before the house the bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday.

"Mr. McGann: Mr. Speaker, I consent that the bill lie on the Speaker's table for the present.

"There was no objection, and it was so ordered."

Passed House Without Discussion.

The next step in the process of enacting the bill into law took place in the house on June 26. The Cummings Labor Day bill was already on the house calendar, where it would not probably be reached for a number of weeks. Mr. McGann, chairman of the house labor committee, therefore decided to place the Kyle bill, which had the same text as the Cummings bill, before the house, the effect of which was to substitute the Kyle bill for the Cummings bill. Under the heading "Labor Day a Legal Holiday," the Congressional Record for June 26 printed the following succinct account of the procedure:

"The Speaker laid before the house the bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday.

"Mr. McGann: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the present consideration of the bill.

"The Speaker: The bill will be read, after which the chair will ask for objections.

"The bill was read as follows:

"'Be it enacted, etc., that the first Monday in September of each year, being the day known and celebrated as labor's holiday, is hereby made a legal public holiday, to all intents and purposes, in the same manner as Christmas, the 1st day of January, the 22d of February, the 30th of May, and the 4th day of July are now by law made public holidays.'

"There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

"On motion of Mr. McGann, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid upon the table."

Speaker Crisp Signs Bill.

Passed by both houses of congress, there were still three steps to be taken before the Labor Day bill became a part of the federal statutes. It must be signed by Speaker Crisp, Vice-President Stevenson, and President Cleveland.

The first step was recorded in the Congressional Record for June 27. Under the heading "Enrolled Bill Signed," the house proceedings said:

"Mr. Pearson, from the committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday; when the speaker signed the same.

Vice-President Stevenson Affixes Signature.

The senate proceedings for the same day under the heading "Enrolled Bill Signed," reported:

"A message from the house of representatives by Mr. T. O. Towles, its chief clerk, announced that the speaker of the house of representatives had signed the enrolled bill (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday; and it was thereupon signed by the vice-president."

President Cleveland Approves Measure.

On June 29, 1894, under the heading "Presidential Approval," the Congressional Record in the senate proceedings said:

"A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. Pruden, one of his secretaries, announced that the President on the 28th instant approved and signed the act (S. 730) making Labor Day a legal holiday."

And thus, twelve years after P. J. McGuire suggested to the Central Labor Union of New York City that one day in the year, the first Monday in September should be set aside as a special holiday for working men and women of the United States, congress enacted and President Cleveland signed the Kyle-Cummings bill "making Labor Day a legal holiday."

Gompers Announces Victory.

In his annual report to the 1894 convention of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, announced labor's victory in the following brief statement:

"National Labor Day.—It affords me pleasure to be able to report that the demand made by the American Federation of Labor for making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday passed congress and was made a law on June [illegible], 1894."

ORIGIN AND SIGNIFICANCE OF LABOR DAY REVIEWED BY FOUNDER OF CARPENTERS

(Editor's Note—P. J. McGuire, founder of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and the originator of Labor Day, wrote an article for the October, 1897, issue of the American Federationist, the official journal of the American Federation of Labor, giving an account of Labor Day. Mr. McGuire was elected secretary of the American Federation of Labor at its first annual meeting in 1886, holding that office during 1887 and 1888. He was elected second vice-president in 1889, first vice-president in 1890, and continued to serve as a member of the Executive Council until 1900. Mr. McGuire's article, entitled "Labor Day—Its Origin and Significance," follows:)

By P. J. McGUIRE
First Vice-President, American Federation of Labor.

On this day the hosts of labor shout their Hosannahs!

From a thousand groves and hillsides, by rippling brooks and gurgling streams, comes the glad acclaim.

No festival of martial glory or warrior's renown is this; no pageant pomp of warlike conquest, no glory of fraticidal strife attend this day.

It is dedicated to peace, civilization and triumphs of industry. It is a demonstration of fraternity and the harbinger of a better age—a more chivalrous time, when labor shall be best honored and well rewarded.

Pagan feasts and Christian observances have come down to us through the long ages. But it was reserved for this century, and for the American people, to give birth to Labor Day. In this they honor the toilers of the earth, and pay homage to those who from rude nature have delved and carved all the comfort and grandeur we behold.

More than all, the thought, the conception, yea the very inspiration of this holiday came from men in the ranks of the working people—men active in uplifting their fellows, and leading them to better conditions. It came from a little group in New York City, the Central Labor Union, which had just been formed, and which in later years attained widespread influence.

On May 8, 1882, the writer made the proposition. He urged the propriety of setting aside one day in the year to be designated as "Labor Day," and to be established as a general holiday for the laboring classes. He advised the day should first be celebrated by a street parade, which would publicly show the strength and esprit de corps of the trade and labor organizations. Next the parade should be followed by a picnic or festival in some grove, and the proceeds of the same be divided on this semi-co-operative plan, viz.:

Each union or organization should get as many tickets as it desired to sell; the more sold the greater would be the profits to the society selling them. Each society should be allowed to keep all the money realized by sale of tickets through its members. In the end each of the bodies participating should contribute to the expenses in proportion to its membership.

It was further argued Labor Day should be observed as one festival day in the year for public tribute to the genius of American industry. There were other worthy holidays representative of the religious, civil and military spirit, but none representative of the industrial spirit—the great vital force of every nation. He suggested the first Monday in September of every year for such a holiday, as it would come at the most pleasant season of the year, nearly midway between the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving, and would fill a wide gap in the chronology of legal holidays. Many were the cogent reasons he advanced, and at once the idea was enthusiastically embraced.

The first Labor Day parade and festival of the Central Labor Union of New York City on Sept. 5, 1882, was simply an imposing success. From that day on, it became a fixed institution in the land. The plan was next indorsed by the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the general assembly of the Knights of Labor. It spread rapidly from city to city, and from town to town. City councils and state legislatures took it up, and made it a legal holiday, until finally June 28, 1894, it became a national holiday, by act of congress.

There was a time, and it is not many years ago, when the trade union and the labor movement of America were too insignificant for presidents, governors, mayors, city councilmen or public men to consider, much less honor. Trade unions were of no consequence; trade unionists were harmless fanatics. Now, they are of more weight, more influential, more powerful. No longer can they be sneered down or cajoled; they must be met, they must be recognized. What mighty portent is in their movement? In their hands rest the weal of the worker, his welfare and improvement.

With hands and hearts together, with united funds and united interests, to stand for one another, day after day, year in and year out, in good times and in bad, who dare say what can they not accomplish? In the workshop and on the farm, at the ballot box and in every field of endeavor they can right every wrong, and eradicate every evil oppressive to the working people..

LIFE AND WORK OF P. J. McGUIRE, FATHER OF LABOR DAY FOR TOILERS

Founded Carpenters' Brotherhood, of Which He Was General Secretary for 20 Years; Wrote Call for First American Federation of Labor Convention; Served as an Officer of A. F. of L. from 1886 to 1900.

Peter J. McGuire, the originator of Labor Day and founder of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, was born in New York City on July 6, 1852, and died in Philadelphia in 1906 at the age of 54. At the time of his death he was quite actively engaged in organizing work for the Carpenters' Brotherhood.

Mr. McGuire attended the New York public schools until he was 12 years of age, when he was compelled to secure employment in a dry goods store, later he was apprenticed to the carpenter's trade, studying in Cooper Institute after his day's work was done. He joined a labor union in 1872, and from that time took an active interest in the trade union movement.

Carpenters' Brotherhood Is Founded.

In May, 1881, Mr. McGuire, who was then working in St. Louis, Mo., started a four-page journal called "The Carpenter," whose slogan was the consolidation of the various scattered groups of organized carpenters. Three months later he sent out the call for a conference of organized carpenters to convene in Chicago on August 8. The conference was attended by 36 delegates, representing twelve local unions with a combined membership of about 2,000. It was this conference which founded the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. Mr. McGuire lived to see the Carpenters' Brotherhood become one of the largest and strongest of American trade unions, and for twenty years was its general secretary.

In 1881 he was a delegate to the International Workingmen's Congress in Switzerland, and took advantage of the opportunity offered to make a thorough study of the economic conditions of European working men and women.

Becomes A. F. of L. Officer.

Mr. McGuire's connection with the American Federation of Labor began when he wrote the call for the first A. F. of L. convention in 1886. He was secretary of that organization up to 1888. He was elected second vice-president in 1889, first vice-president in 1890, and continued to serve as a member of the executive council until 1900. He and President Samuel Gompers were the federation's delegates to the British Trades Union Congress in 1895.

Father of Labor Day.

In the spring of 1882, at a meeting of the Central Labor Union of New York City, he advanced the idea of setting aside one day in the year as a special holiday for the workers. The union agreed with the plan and staged the first Labor Day celebration in the United States on the first Monday in September of that year. Later every state legislature and the congress of the United States enacted laws making Labor Day a legal holiday.

Mr. McGuire was popular as a labor speaker, having addressed meetings in every state in the union and in many of the Canadian provinces. According to the records of the Carpenters' brotherhood he spoke to over 2,100 audiences of workers.

His active interest in the labor movement is shown by the fact that two weeks before his death he helped reorganized Local No. 277 of the Carpenters' brotherhood in Philadelphia, and was present on the night when the local was reinstated in the brotherhood.

Tablet Placed in Carpenters' Headquarters.

On April 11, 1910, a bronze tablet in memory of Mr. McGuire, a gift and tribute from the Chicago district council and affiliated unions of the carpenters' brotherhood, was placed at the foot of the stairs leading to the second floor at the headquarters of the brotherhood in Indianapolis, Ind. In addition to the likeness of Mr. McGuire the tablet carried the following inscription:

"In memory of Peter J. McGuire, founder of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, organized August 12th, 1881. A loving tribute from Chicago District Council and Affiliated Locals."

The general executive board and other officers of the carpenters' brotherhood attended the ceremonies accompanying the installation of the tablet, which was presented by C. A. Aimin, M. D. Philp and Charles Grassl, representing the Chicago council, with appropriate remarks paying tribute to the staunch trade union record and labor achievements of Mr. McGuire.

In receiving the tablet remarks extolling the life and work of Mr. McGuire were made by William D. Huber, general president of the brotherhood; Frank Duffy, general secretary; Thomas Neale, general treasurer; William G. Schardt, president of the executive board, and by every other member of the board.

Annual Memorial Services.

On every Labor Day the Philadelphia District Council of Carpenters make a pilgrimage to Arlington cemetery, Camden, N. J., and hold memorial services at the grave of Mr McGuire. Representatives of the A. F. of L. Central Labor unions and building trades unions of Philadelphia and Camden always attend the exercises.

At the last memorial service, held on September 4, 1933, General Executive Board Member W. T. Allen of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners delivered the principal address. After describing Mr. McGuire's work as founder of the brotherhood and originator of Labor Day, and for many years a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Allen said:

"No words of mine can adequately express the greatness of P. J. McGuire in his lifetime, or even a quarter of a century after his death. He lives in the memory of all of us, and the wisdom and philosophy that he gave to the world will live in history to encourage and inspire men to work for humanity and human progress so that the world now and hereafter shall be a better place for us to live in because of the work done by P. J. McGuire, one of the pioneers of the labor movement."

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES HOLDS BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY STANDING AT JUDGMENT SEAT

(Labor Sunday Message Issued by the Federal Council of Churches.)

American business and industry stand at the judgment seat. An administration pledged to the welfare of the forgotten man has announced its purpose to bring about such economic adjustments as will result in work and a living wage for all, under conditions in the establishment of which the worker has a voice through representatives of his own choosing; to promote constructive co-operation instead of disastrous competition in business; to secure a more just distribution of the wealth of the country in order that our vast resources may answer the human needs hitherto unmet even in years of prosperity; to afford relief to the sorely beset farm population and their return to school and to an adequate preparation for the responsibilities of life; to effect economic planning in the place of the adventurous but socially disastrous individualism of the past.

The measures proposed are of human origin and therefore fallible. But the purposes sought are divine in their character, if, as we steadfastly believe, the heart of Jesus Christ is a revelation of the divine. He cared whether men were cold, or hungry, or sick. He felt the woes of those in bondage of any sort, and longed for their freedom. Many goals sought by the present leaders of American affairs are indisputably in harmony with the purpose and spirit of Jesus. Whether these goals will be attained will depend upon the wisdom of separate measures adopted, upon the character of the economic system itself, and certainly upon the spirit of those in control of our economic life. If they can replace lust for personal power and profit by devotion to production and distribution for the common good; if they can look beyond the interests of their own class to the good of all the people; if they can rise to the realization that isolation is folly and that there cannot be a prosperous America in an impoverished world; if they can achieve a consciousness of the stewardship of their talents and their property, history will vindicate them as it writes the story of their emancipating leadership in a day of great crisis.

Labor is also on trial. While the difficulties of organization at a time of vast unemployment are very great and the opposition serious, labor has an opportunity to gather the working men of America into a national federation of mutual loyalty and service, and to promote those compacts which will stabilize industry and secure to labor the benefits of generously rewarded efficient toil, while protecting the just interests of industry and the public. The verdict upon labor leadership is now being written. Will it record the operation of an inflexible purpose to include all toilers of every race and industry, whether skilled or unskilled, in the membership and service of their organizations? And will it reveal that the underprivileged and dispossessed, if adequately supported in their right to organize by government, industry and the public, can claim and win their human rights and privileges without the hatred and bitterness of class war?

The general public is at the bar of judgment. The measures now being tried and any others which give any promise of a cure of our social sickness, demand an integrity, a spirit of fair play, a capacity for long views, a willingness to surrender personal privilege and to share, such as have seldom been sought at the hands of any population in peace time. The inauguration of a new era largely awaits the appearance of enough new people with new social outlooks and attitudes. Codes alone cannot give us better society. There must be consecrations, too.

The church also is on trial. How can it urge co-operation in economic life, and at the same time be unwilling to move forward in effective co-operation among denominations? Can it call forth devotion to the public welfare and create social leadership of extraordinary courage, unless its ministers show equal devotion and courage in social interpretation and action? Can the church foster social idealism and inspire resolute action to break the power of entrenched selfishness, if large sections of it deny or are indifferent to the social implications of the gospel?

As churches we cannot give the final word upon economic schemes, but in the name of Christ we must pass judgment upon the results of every social economy. We must inquire as to the actual number of unemployed, the degree to which the organization of labor and of consumers has advanced in comparison with the organization of employers, and the net gain in the redistribution of income and purchasing power as reflected by more rapid advance in wages and consumer income than in the cost of living. And we must insist that economic experiment shall proceed until it evolves a social order in which men and women everywhere shall have a real opportunity for the good life.

Once again we announce our purpose as churches and religious organizations to help create men and women in the spirit of Christ so that there shall be in America an increasing body of citizens whose master passion shall be the building of the Kingdom of God.

JOHNSON RECLAMPS LID.

Washington.—Gen. Johnson has reiterated his order that deputy administrators and other members of the staff of NRA who tender their regisnations to enter the employ of industrial code authorities or other interests concerned with NRA functions will not be allowed to appear for or to represent such employers before any of the Johnson agencies. This rule was put into effect by Gen. Johnson some time ago, but was re-emphasized when it was learned that Deputy Administrator W. W. Pickard had resigned to enter the employ of a code authority after he had handled this particular code in its progress through NRA channels. Johnson said no letter or communication will be received by NRA from Pickard.

COMMUNIST JAILED.

San Francisco.—On recommendation of federal immigration officials, three suspected communists arrested during the general strike here were ordered held for further investigation when they appeared before municipal judges.

Orlin D. Mosier 37-year-old soapbox orator, was arrested at Walnut Creek, near Oakland, for preaching communism and sentenced to serve sixty days in the county jail.

48 STATES RECOGNIZE LABOR DAY AS HOLIDAY; OREGON ENACTED FIRST LAW

Labor day as a general holiday was started on its way by the Central Labor Council of New York City on May 8, 1882, when the council adopted the idea, presented by P. J. McGuire, founder of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, that one day of the year should be set aside as a special holiday for working men and women.

The Central Labor Union held the first Labor Day celebration in the United States on the first Monday in September, 1882, after which many municipal councils passed ordinances making the first Monday in September municipal holidays.

Oregon Enacts First Law.

It was not, however, until 1887 that the states began to fall in line and pass laws making Labor Day a legal state holiday.

The first state law was enacted by Oregon in 1887; the legislature designated the first Saturday in June as Labor Day, but in September, 1893, changed the date to the first Monday in September. The legislatures of Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York followed in quick succession, all of them enacting Labor Day laws in 1887. Wyoming was the forty-eighth state to come under the Labor Day influence, the legislature enacting a Labor Day law in 1923.

Dates When State Labor Day Laws Were Enacted.

Following is the list of states, compiled from data in the bureau of labor statistics of the United States department of labor, recognizing Labor Day as a holiday, with the date of the enactment of the law:

Alabama—December 12, 1892.
Alaska—March 28, 1913.
Arizona—April 29, 1912.
Arkansas—January 29, 1903.
California—February 23, 1897. Under the original law of California of May 23, 1893, Labor Day fell on the first Monday in October.
Colorado—March 15, 1887.
Connecticut—March 20, 1889.
Delaware—February 14, 1893.
District of Columbia—June 28, 1894.
Florida—April 29, 1893.
Georgia—October 16, 1891.
Hawaii—1903.
Idaho—March 5, 1909.
Illinois—June 17, 1891.
Indiana—March 9, 1891.
Iowa—April 5, 1890.
Kansas—March 4, 1891.
Kentucky—March 17, 1902.
Louisiana—July 8, 1912. The law enacted July 7, 1892, affected Parish of New Orleans only.
Maine—February 10, 1891.
Maryland—March 23, 1910.
Massachusetts—May 11, 1887.
Michigan—May 12, 1893.
Minnesota—April 18, -893.
Mississippi—March 4, 1904.
Missouri—April 9, 1895.
Montana—February 19, 1895.
Nebraska—March 29, 1889.
Nevada—March 11, 1913.
New Hampshire—March 31, 1891.
New Jersey—April 8, 1887.
New Mexico—March 15, 1915.
New York—May 6, 1887.
North Carolina—January 23, 1901.
North Dakota—March 13, 1909.
Ohio—April 28, 1890.
Oklahoma—May 23, 1908.
Oregon—February 21, 1893. Under the original law of Oregon of February 21, 1887, Labor Day fell on the first Saturday in June.
Pennsylvania—April 25, 1889. In Pennsylvania by an act of May 31, 1893, the date of Labor Day was changed to the first Saturday in September, but by an act of June 23, 1897, the original date was restored.
Puerto Rico—1902.
Rhode Island—May 26, 1893.
South Carolina—December 22, 1891.
South Dakota—February 12, 1907.
Tennessee—March 11, 1891.
Texas—February 11, 1893.
Utah—February 23, 1892.
Vermont—November 26, 1898.
Virginia—February 5, 1892.
Washington—February 24, 1891.
West Virginia—February 21, 1899.
Wisconsin—April 19, 1893. Labor Day is set by governor.
Wyoming—February 8, 1923. Labor Day is set by governor.
Philippine Islands—April 30, 1908. May 1 is observed as Labor Day in the Philippine Islands.

LABOR

WITH the return of better times, it is only fitting that we congratulate labor for the spirit of loyalty and helpfulness it has shown during the trying times through which we have passed. Today the clouds have rifted, and through them comes the promise of returning progress.

As Labor pauses on this their day to recount the events of the year, so do all men and women pause to recall the great achievements in the march of Labor's progress. That the months which follow will bring prosperity and greater comfort to Labor, through the unfolding of a great National program, is the hope and wish of this institution.

LABOR DAY AS GOMPERS VISIONED IT IN YEAR 1898 REVIEWED BY LATE LEADER

(Editor's Note—The late Samuel Gompers was president of the American Federation of Labor in 1894 when congress enacted the law making Labor Day a legal holiday. In an editorial in the American Federationist for September, 1898, Mr. Gompers discussed the deep significance of Labor Day as a special holiday for the workers. The editorial, which was entitled "Labor Day—What It Portends," follows.)

By SAMUEL GOMPERS
Late President, American Federation of Labor.

No day in the calendar is a greater fixture, one which is more truly regarded as a real holiday, or one which is so surely destined to endure for all time, than the first Monday in September of each recurring year, Labor Day. With time, this day of the year is taking deeper hold in the respect and confidence of the people.

It is regarded as the day for which the toilers in past centuries looked forward, when their rights and their wrongs might be discussed, placed upon a higher plane of thought and feeling; that the workers of our day may not only lay down their tools of labor for a holiday, but upon which they may touch shoulders in marching phalanx and feel the stronger for it; meet at their parks, groves and grounds, and by appropriate speech, counsel with, and pledge to, each other that the coming year shall witness greater effort than the preceding in the grand struggle to make mankind free, true and noble.

Labor Day differs in every essential from the other holidays of the year of any country. All other holidays are, in a more or less degree, connected with conflicts and battles, of man's prowess over man, of strife and discord for greed or power, of glories achieved by one nation over another.

Labor Day, on the other hand, marks a new epoch in the annals of human history. It is at once a manifestation of reverence for the struggles of the masses against tyranny and injustice from time immemorial; an impetus to battle for the right in our day for the men, women and children of our time, and gives hope and encouragement for the attainment of the aspirations for the future of the human family. It is devoted to no man, living or dead; to no sect, sex, race or nation. It is founded upon the highest principles of humanity, is as broad in its scope as the universe. It was not given to, but conquered by labor, and established as a holiday before any legislature, state or national enacted it into law.

The marching toilers in the Labor Day demonstrations signalize no martial glory, brutal domination, conquests or warlike pomp. They are, in their essence, the manifestations of the growing intelligence of the workers who recognize that peace is an essential to successful industry and real progress, as air is to lung-breathing animals; that justice to the toilers has too long been denied; that in the midst of the civilization at the close of the nineteenth century, wrongs too gross, widespread, and well known to require mention here, still abound; that if man is to be free in the time to come, "eternal vigilance" must be exercised, organization of the workers proclaimed, maintained and extended; education of the educated as well as of the masses, be furthered and nurtured; and agitation of labor's wrongs endured and rights denied, undertaken, with all the zest and energy begotten by devotion to a cause which is at once holy, noble, pure, lofty, just, wise and humane.

All through history, holiday observances and feasts have abounded; but it was reserved for our time and for the workers of our country to first proclaim and observe a day devoted to the toilers, the toilers' cause, the cause of justice—this day of days, consecrated by the sufferings borne, the battles fought, the aspirations, often inarticulate yearnings, of the masses for their final emancipation, the triumphant enthronement of absolute justice, and the effacement of the brutal, unnatural causes of "man's inhumanity to man which makes countless numbers mourn."

To make our lives and environments of today more in harmony with the wonderful achievements of modern industry, to participate in the results—rewards of the beautiful peace and our bountiful labor, no less than in receiving deserved renown for our services and sacrifices in a just war, we must organize more thoroughly, more compactly, than ever.

The trade unions, scoffed, denounced, ridiculed in turn, and antagonized as no other organization on earth, are now being argued with, their merits, as the wage-earners' defenders, protectors and advance guard for a juster reward for the wealth producers are more widely discussed and generally conceded.

Labor Day is now the general tribute of our entire people to the victories won, the vantage ground gained, by organized labor and the hope entertained that that happier, truer life among men may soon be ushered in—that day of which poets sung, philosophers dreamed and workers struggled for ages.

Workers, you can be free! You cannot only proclaim, but establish, justice, freedom and "good will toward all mankind," if you will but organize, be true to yourselves and to each other.

A woman was trying to be nice to the little girl whose mother was a great friend of hers.

Woman—I hope you got along well at school last term. Now, I wonder if you can spell "horse."

Little Girl—I could if I wanted to. But don't you think it is rather old-fashioned?

House Labor Committee in 1894 Recommended Enactment of Bill Making Labor Day Legal Holiday

Lawrence E. McGann, Committee Chairman, Said the National Holiday Would "Tend to Increase the Feeling of Common Brotherhood Among Men of All Crafts and Callings."

On September 6, 1893, Representative Amos J. Cummings of New York, and Robert E. DeForest of Connecticut introduced bills in the fifty-third congress making Labor Day a legal holiday. Representative Cummings' bill was officially called "H. R. 28," and Representative DeForest's bill "H. R. 334." Both bills were referred to the House Committee on Labor, of which Lawrence E. McGann of Illinois, was chairman.

On May 15, 1894, Chairman McGann for the Committee on Labor, submitted a report to the house recommending the enactment of the Cummings bill.

The committee stressed the importance of the proposed holiday as an important element in maintaining the "nobility of labor" and developing in the worker the feeling "that he holds an honorable as well as a useful place in the body politic."

Text of Committee's Report.

Following is the text of the committee's report:

"The Committee on Labor, to whom was referred the bills (H. R. 28 and H. R. 334) making the first Monday in September, known as 'Labor Day,' a legal holiday, beg leave to report as follows:

"The bills provide in substance, that the first Monday in September in each year, being the day celebrated and known as Labor Day, be made a legal public holiday.

Equality and Dignity of Labor.

"The use of national holidays is to emphasize some great event or principle in the minds of the by giving them a day of rest and recreation, a day of enjoyment, in commemoration of it. By making one day in each year a public holiday for the benefit of working men the equality and dignity of labor is emphasized. Nothing is more important to the public weal than that the nobility of labor be maintained. So long as the laboring man can feel that he holds an honorable as well as a useful place in the body politic, so long will he be a loyal and faithful citizen.

"The celebration of Labor Day as a national holiday will in time naturally lead to an honorable emulation among the different crafts beneficial to them and to the whole public. It will tend to increase the feeling of common brotherhood among men of all crafts and callings and at the same time kindle an honorable desire in each craft to surpass the rest.

Organized Workers Request Holiday.

"There can be no substantial objection to making one day in the year a national holiday for the benefit of labor. The labor organizations of the whole country, representing the great body of our artisan population, request it. They are the ones most interested. They desire it and should have it.

"If the farmers, manufacturers, and professional men are indifferent to the measure, or even oppose it, which there is no reason to believe, that still would constitute no good objection, for their work can be continued on holidays as well as on other days if they so desire it.

"Working men should have one day in the year peculiarly their own. Nor will their employers lose anything by it. Working men are benefited by a reasonable amount of rest and recreation. Whatever makes a working man more of a man makes him more useful as a craftsman.

Labor Day Laws in 23 States.

"The first Monday in September is known as Labor Day and is recognized as a legal holiday in Colorado, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Alabama, Delaware, Oregon, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Montana, New Hampshire, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin, and Washington. In all these states the legislatures have passed a law recognizing Labor Day as a legal holiday.

"The federal government seems to have confined its duties in the premises to enacting laws for legal holidays in the District of Columbia. Christmas, the first day of January, the 22nd day of February, the 30th day of May, and the Fourth of July are now made by law public holidays.

"The bill simply provides that the first Monday of September in each year is made a legal holiday to all intents and purposes in the same manner as Christmas and other holidays now provided by the United States statutes.

"Your committee respectfully recommend that bill H. R. 28 be passed."

RED EDITORS ARRESTED

Minneapolis, Minn.—James P. Cannon, editor of the Militant, a New York City communist publication, and Max Schachtman, editor of the New International, another communist publication, were placed under arrest here by Chief of Police Michael Johannes.

The police, Mr. Johannes said, seized papers in the editor's possession which showed a connection between communists and the Minneapolis strike and purporting to reveal that with the collapse of the San Francisco general strike, communists turned their attention here to "put things over big in Minneapolis."

PICKETS JAILED BY JUDGE IN BREAD BUYERS' STRIKE

New York.—Angered by the activities of pickets in connection with a consumers' strike against four bakeries in the Bronx for alleged price boosting, Magistrate Morrisania sentenced four men to jail for one day for disorderly conduct. The strike started two weeks ago and since then twenty-six persons have been arrested and sixteen convicted.

Appreciation!

On this occasion of Labor's National Holiday, the Miller Bros. Co. offers heartiest greetings and sincere good wishes to the men and women who toil in the mill, factory, etc.

Over a period of many years this store has enjoyed the patronage and good-will of the working people of the Chattanooga territory, and we have endeavored at all times to merit the confidence thus shown.

It is and has been our purpose to offer the best merchandise that the Nation's markets afford, at prices consistent with quality.

At this season of the year, when the fall stocks are being placed, we are particularly proud to have our friends visit this store and inspect the merchandise which we offer.

Again, we thank you, laboring men and women, and hope that we may have the pleasure of serving you and your friends for many years to come.

PRESIDENT GREEN URGES INAUGURATION OF UNION FORWARD CAMPAIGN LABOR DAY

By WILLIAM GREEN
President American Federation of Labor.

bor Day finds our country mid- in perhaps the most important mic undertakings of our exist- realignment of forces of in- rial control under federal super- n. It is a time when we are ng decisions which will deter- this issue: Shall we plan for fu- production of abundance for all, hall we try to curb mass produc- into scarcity channels with lux- for the few and poverty for the y!

e technical information handed to us by past generations and in- ive power of present day work- have completely revolutionized . The work limit is no longer an endurance but the installation machines, organization of work and orders. Orders for prod- and services depend upon in- s of buyers. Over 80 per cent he buyers in retail markets are e-earners and small salaried per- sons. This is the reason why prices correspond to the rise and fall in pay envelopes.

Many of our economic troubles have grown out of failure to see that electric power production heralded a new age—the age of plenty for all. In the days of handicraft and production limited by human endurance, we could not produce enough or at such low prices as to make possible comfort standards of living for all. There were well-to-do people and a few wealthy. The million dollar yearly incomes came with power production.

From 1923 to 1929, each industrial worker increased the amount he turned out each hour 4 per cent every year. During the past depression (1929-1934) the increase in hourly output has been slightly more than 4 per cent per year. In this period of rapid increase in productivity, the incomes going to owners of property increased 66 per cent—over two-thirds. The incomes of factory employes—those who did the actual work in turning out the increased product—rose 5 per cent.

During the depression years while output still increased per man hour, factory incomes declined 58 per cent (1929-32) while the incomes of those owning property fell 30 per cent.

Why this difference? Because the rules of distribution were made at a time when the producer owned what he made, and have not been brought up to date to provide equitably for the producer who is hired to work for a management that sells the product and determines what part shall be paid the worker-producer.

Because workers have not shared proportionately in their increased productivity, buying power in the retail markets has not been adequate to sustain the large amounts which owners of capital have invested. Even in peak years no industry operated at capacity. This means producing investments had to pay for idle investments.

May every union and every central labor body in the United States and Canada find in the day new inspiration for work and new plans to be executed. When every wage-earner is a union member, disciplined in working together with fellow-workers in making effective the principles of the union movement and accustomed to work as a soldier in the ranks of labor, then our national labor movement will be able to negotiate work agreements that fully protect the interests of those who work for wages and to assure public institutions that will safeguard labor's rights.

I urge all unions and all labor to dedicate Labor Day to the advancement of these purposes, by planning union-forward campaigns.

TYPOS COMPLETE FIVE-YEAR PROGRAM OF EXPANSION AT UNION PRINTERS HOME

By JOHN H. CRUMP
Member Chattanooga Typographical Union.

A five-year program of expansion and reconstruction has just been completed at the Union Printers Home, located just outside the city limits of Colorado Springs, Colo., and the International Typographical union now has one of the beauty spots of the United States as a home for its aged and sick members.

There are hundreds of homes of various sorts in the United States, but the Union Printers Home is recognized as the leader among such institutions. But don't dare let a union printer hear you call the Home an institution. To them it's home, with no charity connected to it, and they are proud to refer to it as "our Home."

During the past five years the I. T. U. has spent nearly two million dollars in repairing, remodeling, new construction and relandscaping and caring for the residents at the Home.

The Home now has 420 beds in three buildings. No room has more than two beds, and many rooms have only one bed. The main building has 20 beds, with the rest in the North and South dormitories.

The Home, being the greatest monument to union labor in the world, attracts thousands of visitors every year. From that viewpoint alone the money spent in beautifying the grounds seems more than justified. A modern hospital and sanitorium, such as is now located at the Home, considers pleasant environment as necessary to the cure of disease as medicine. With the grounds more beautiful and more accessible to resident and visitor alike, another justification is found for the money spent in landscaping.

The Home now has a modern heating, refrigeration and laundry building and equipment which is paying good dividends in improved service and lower maintenance cost.

The main building, more than forty years old, has been almost entirely reconstructed with steel and concrete, removing a serious fire hazard.

The vast five-year program of improvement was carried out without asking the membership of the I. T. U. to contribute additional dues. The Home is financed by 40 cents per month of the per capita tax paid by I. T. U. members.

The expenditures at the Home during the past year were $360,051.01, with the net maintenance of the residents costing $244,936.11. The net cost per resident per month was $61.85, a decrease of six dollars from last year. The highest cost per resident per month was in 1926 when it was $94.85.

During the past six years members of the I. T. U. have contributed $2,247,175.84 in dues toward the support of the Home.

The total cost of the Home since its inception, including the original building cost, has been $6,728,819.48. There is a balance of $198,534.44 in the Home fund, of which $76,207.63 is an endowment fund.

The Home library contains more than 10,000 volumes.

Entertainment expenses at the Home the past year were $688.70.

There was an average of 330 residents at the Home during the year.

Expenses of the culinary department for the year were $71,367.10.

Personal expenses of the residents, paid by the Home, amounted to $23,422.05.

Visitors are always welcome at the Home, and a person traveling through the west should not fail to stop at Colorado Springs and see the Union Printers Home. It is a visit worthwhile and one to be remembered.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH SESSION OF PRINTERS' INTERNATIONAL OPENS SATURDAY AT CHICAGO

By JOHN H. CRUMP
Member Chattanooga Typographical Union.

By JOHN H. CRUMP

Next Saturday will witness the opening of the seventy-eighth session of the International Typographical union in Chicago.

The convention this year is looked forward to by all members of the I. T. U. with high hopes of much to be accomplished due to the fact that no convention was held last year.

Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89 will be represented at the convention by Arch M. Underwood, one of the most active younger members of the local. Arch is a member of the executive committee, the "Home Stores" committee and served on the scale committee in recent negotiations with the publishers.

Many serious problems have developed during the past two years and will confront the several hundred delegates for solution.

The union has met much opposition from the newspaper industry on its shorter work-week program, and it has been suggested that the law be changed to limit the work-week to forty hours, giving the employers the privilege of working employes six days of 6 hours 40 minutes, or five days of eight hours. This thought will probably come up for consideration by the delegates, but it is doubtful if they will adopt such legislation. It seems to be accepted generally that the five-day week is here to stay, and that any move toward permitting six-day employment would be a step backward.

The five-day week is responsible for a major problem confronting the union in regard to apprentices. The present term of apprenticeship is five years, but with one-fifth of that time cut off due to the five-day week it is deemed likely that the term of apprenticeship will be increased to six years.

Convention headquarters will be in the historic old Palmer house, one of the landmarks of Chicago.

The high spot in the program arranged for the entertainment of the delegates will be International Typographical Union Day at the Century of Progress exposition Sunday, Sept. 9, beginning with the opening of the gates in the morning and climaxed by a two-hour broadcast of a special program in the court of the Hall of States from 8 to 10 o'clock in the evening.

It is planned to have a speaking program, which can be heard over a national hook-up, headed by either Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins or Postmaster-General James Farley. Other speakers on the program will include William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Charles P. Howard, I. T. U. president; two Chicago publishers, Col. Robert R. McCormick, of the Tribune, and William Randolph Hearst, of the Hearst papers; Dr. Robert M. Hutchinson, president of the University of Chicago, and Senator Robert Wagner, of New York.

The opening ball will be held Saturday evening in the grand ballroom of the Palmer house. Due to expected large attendance at the opening get-together a cabaret party will be held in the large exhibition hall adjoining the grand ballroom so as to provide plenty of room in the ballroom for dancing.

Arrangements have been made for all delegates, ex-delegates and visitors to be the guests of President Louis J. Comiskey at Comiskey park to witness a ball game between the White Sox and the Senators, probably on Monday afternoon. Visitors from Chattanooga will welcome this opportunity to see the Lookouts' big brothers play.

Chicago Mailers' union will be hosts to the convention at a banquet in the Morrison hotel Monday evening.

The Woman's auxiliary to Chicago Typographical union have arranged a luncheon for women visitors on Wednesday afternoon at the Stevens hotel.

Everything possible is being done by the convention committee to this convention one to be remembered by all who attend as the greatest convention ever held by the union.

Picket Signs Must Not Lie, N. Y. Mayor Says

New York.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of the nation's metropolis, found it necessary to begin interpreting his order to the police to permit mass picketing almost before the ink with which it was written was dry.

He denied the report that he would prohibit mass picketing by unions not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, but announced that all mass picketing would be barred in front of theaters at which the entrance and exit of customers would be hindered by the pickets.

The mayor added that signs carried by pickets "would have to tell the truth" and that he would permit no "misstatement by voice or sign that interferes with legitimate business and is unfair competition."

Dual Union Criticized.

In an additional interpretation of the order Mayor LaGuardia discussed the complaint of the Loew's Theater corporation, which has an agreement with Local 306 of the Motion Picture Operators' union, an A. F. of L. affiliate. The Loew theaters are picketed by members of the Empire Motion Picture Operators, a dual union.

"The rival union, the Empire, can't have mass picketing in front of the theaters," the mayor said, "for the simple reason that the old employes are at work and there is no strike. The whole thing is to carry out the law and the law must be construed by the courts and not by individual precinct commanders. And I have to uphold the federal laws as well as the state laws."

He said he would force the Empire union to change the wording of its pickets' signs, which state that the theaters are unfair to union labor. The name of the A. F. of L. union is printed in small letters.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Whereas, on the 1st day of July, 1930, Margaret W. Saunders (widow), of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, executed a deed of trust, conveying the property hereinafter described and advertised for sale, to me as Trustee, which deed of trust is found of record in Book C, Vol. 25, page 574 et seq., of the Register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee; and,

Whereas, said deed of trust was executed for the purpose of securing the payment of a certain indebtedness, fully described in said deed of trust, to which reference is made for a complete description; and default has been made in the payment of the indebtedness so secured and interest thereon; and the said Margaret W. Saunders has failed to perform covenants in the said deed of trust and has remained in default for more than thirty days and the holder of the indebtedness has made demand upon me, as Trustee, to sell the property conveyed by the said deed of trust, as therein provided, to satisfy the payment of said indebtedness and interest, as said holder had a right to do under the terms of said deed of trust:

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by said deed of trust, I, C. W. K. Meacham, Trustee, will,

ON THE 7th DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1934,

sell, within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, in bar of all equities of redemption, dower and homestead, and all other exemptions of every kind, the following described real estate in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, viz.:

The south 100 feet of the north 105 feet of the west 100 feet of Lot 21, Map of Johnson's Revised Subdivision of St. Elmo, in the former Second Civil District, present City of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, as shown by plat of record in Plat Book No. 5, page 8, in the Register's office of said county; and being the same property conveyed to Margaret W. Saunders by two deeds, one from Texas Hixon Kay et al, registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 539, and one from Cridner W. Robinson (single), registered in Book G, Vol. 9, page 538, in said Register's office.

The north five (5) feet of said Lot 21 has been dedicated to the public as a part of West 41st Street.

Subject to requirements of Zoning Ordinance No. 1843 of the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and any amendments thereto.

Said deed of trust recites that the title to the said property is clear, free and unencumbered, and title to the same is believed to be good, but the sale will be made as Trustee only.

C. W. K. MEACHAM, Trustee.

MORE ABOUT TEACHERS

The teachers' letter follows, in full:

Aug. 27, 1934.

Hon. W. E. Wilkerson, Commissioner,
Department of Education,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Sir:

We beg to submit to you and through you to the honorable board of commissioners of the city of Chattanooga a request for an increased budget for the department of education for the coming school year. We realize that you are interested in obtaining more funds so that our schools can be operated properly and we wish to commend and support your efforts in that direction.

The daily press has carried statements that anticipated revenues are $500,000 less than for last year. It has not been made quite clear why this is so, inasmuch as the tax rate has not been lowered and there has not been a general property reassessment since last year. Surely tax delinquencies should not increase by that amount. We believe that a restatement of this point will be appreciated by the general public.

In this connection we would like to call your attention to a measure passed by the congress of the United States near the close of the last session. That bill authorizes the Reconstruction Finance corporation to lend money to cities, counties or school districts upon adequate collateral for the operation of their schools. While we are not familiar with the details of the plan it is our belief that delinquent taxes would serve as such collateral. In this event it would be possible for the city to budget a larger part of the tax levy than otherwise and later as delinquencies develop advantage could be taken of this R. F. C. loan to carry out the projected program. Further, it may be that there are some taxes at present delinquent which could be utilized in the same manner. It occurs to us that in this way more funds can be secured for schools without increasing taxes, or unbalancing the budget.

It is not generally realized that Chattanooga ranks very near the bottom of all cities in the entire country of her size and compares very unfavorably with many cities of very much smaller size in the amount of money spent per pupil per year. As teachers' salaries make up the bulk of an educational budget, this means that Chattanooga's teachers are very poorly paid in comparison with those of other cities.

The sharply increased cost of living is placing an almost unbearable burden upon the extremely poorly paid teachers. For the past two years the teachers have received greater cuts than those taken by any other comparable city employes. And this in the face of the fact that the average teacher's salary is approximately one-half that of a fireman or policeman. While we do not believe that those worthy men are overpaid, we cannot see the justice of asking teachers to accept larger reductions from already smaller salaries. Common justice demands that teachers be raised to a parity with other city employes.

For some time past we have had a committee conducting a research and gathering material on the problem of the salary schedule. The results of this work are almost completed and we expect a report from the committee sometime this week. We should be only too glad to turn these findings over to you for such value and help as they may be. We would regard it a privilege to confer with you at that time.

It would require an increased appropriation for salaries of approximately $350,000 to put such a schedule into operation, although it would still leave a very large proportion of the teachers well below the $1,920 per year, which is the minimum for firemen and policemen.

In any event a budget for teachers' salaries for 1934-35 of less than $1,110,000 would be far short of justice to the teachers, who have served this community well, and to the children whose welfare is directly affected by the efficiency of the teachers.

We will greatly appreciate any efforts toward this end that you and the board of commissioners can exert.

Yours truly,
Executive Committee,
Chattanooga-Hamilton County
Teachers' Association.
Stanton E. Smith, President.

between any two of the obstacles disqualifies the contestant. The rider covering the course in the least time is the winner.

Wiener Snapping—If you like to see people stretch their necks and make funny faces, the wiener snapping contest is a wow. Wieners are suspended by strings from a crossbar or a cord strung above and across the riders' path. The object is for the rider to ride under his dog and snap it off the string with his teeth. When you watch them you'll swear they're all pie-eyed until you try it yourself.

Barrel Rolling—In this contest, the rider attempts to roll a large barrel down a course ten feet wide with the front wheel of his motorcycle. The contestant keeping the barrel on the course for the greatest distance wins. You'll get a kick out of this one on account of the peculiar habits of a rolling barrel.

Riding the Plank—Plans are arranged in either a crooked or a straight line. The object is to ride the planks in the shortest time without either wheel going off a plank or the rider using the feet to maintain balance.

Circle Riding—Outline a circle about fifteen feet in diameter. The contestants are to ride around the inside of this circle, one at a time, as long as possible. The rider making the greatest number of laps is the winner.

Terra-Plane Race—The terra-plane is a wide heavy plank attached to a motorcycle by a rope. The terra-plane rider stands on the plank, holding a rope attached to the front of the plank to maintain balance. The pilot rides the motorcycle. The terra-plane racers are lined up on the starting line with the motors running, waiting for the referee's signal to go. The first team across the finish line is the winner.

Reverse Push—The motorcycles and contestants are lined up on the starting line with the rear end of the motorcycle toward the finish line. When the referee signals, the contestants push the motorcycles backwards toward the finish line. The first one across is the winner.

Slow Race—We all know this one. The rider making the slowest time from the starting line to the finish line is the winner.

Crashing Fire Wall—This is merely an exhibition stunt. The rider will ride a motorcycle through a burning board wall. The wall will be saturated with gasoline and then fired.

Egg and Spoon Race—The contestants are each given an egg and a spoon. The egg is laid in the spoon and the spoon is held between the teeth. The rider making the shortest time over a course without dropping the egg is the winner.

Straw Hat Race—For this race you will need one straw hat for each rider. These hats, any sizes may be used, are piled twenty feet in front of the starting line. The motors are twenty feet further down the course. At a given signal the contestants race, on foot, to the hats and grab one, put it on their head, run to their motors, crank them up and take off. From the time the hat is first put on the head, it is not to be touched. Any rider doing so will be disqualified. The first across the finish line is the winner.

boards, it is the opinion of the special strike committee that adjustment must be made along the following lines:

1—Establishment of a 30-hour maximum work week consisting of six hours per day, five days per week with the same earning power that the workers received under the 40-hour week. Definitions and classifications of occupations must be made and graduated minimum wage scales set up according to skill of the worker. wages in different sections of the industry must be made more uniform, to stabilize competitive as well as labor conditions.

2—Establishment of a maximum work load for operations in various divisions of the textile industry.

3—Reinstatement of all workers victimized for union membership, in violation of Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act.

4—Recognition of the United Textile workers of America as the bargaining agency of the workers in the textile industry, and the signing of an agreement between the international office of the United Textile Workers of America and the various divisions of the textile industry governing the labor relationship between both groups.

5—The establishment of an arbitration mutually agreeable to both parties to settle all disputes that the parties are unable to adjust themselves. The decision of said arbitration board to be final and binding upon both parties.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the flyrup."

THRONG ENJOYS LABOR DAY AT WARNER PARK

Motorcycle Contests Prove Popular.

TEXTILE OFFICIAL DELIVERS ADDRESS

Peel Advises Patience and Predicts Early Victory in Strike.

Thousands of citizens from all walks of life journeyed to Warner Park Monday to enjoy the program staged by local trades unions in observance of the day.

Address of John Peel, third vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, and the motorcycle rodeo, offered by the Chattanooga Motorcycle club, were features of the day.

Mr. Peel, who arrived in Chattanooga at 2 Monday and left Tuesday evening, counseled patience on the part of the strikers, and declared indications are that the strike will be won within a short time. He spoke into a microphone at the swimming pool, and was heard by several hundred.

The motorcycle contests indicated unusual popularity for this thrilling sport, and the park grandstand overflowed with cheering hundreds as the participants fought for the prizes.

Park concessions were running in full blast, and their popularity was attested by the fact that each did a rushing business throughout the day.

Chairman Ortwein, of the Labor Day committee, asked The Labor World to express appreciation to all employes of the parks department for their splendid co-operation in making the program a success.

Results of the rodeo:

Acceleration Race — First, Joe Crowover; second, Eugene Workman; third, Ray Walker.

Slow Race—First, Joe Crownover; second, Sam Hollis; third, James Davidson.

Potato Race—First, David Zimmerman; second, Lou Riggsby.

Circle Riding—First, David Zimmerman; second, Howard Clark; third, Bob Riggsby;

Reverse Push—First, David Zimmerman; second, George Kerns; third, Joe Crownover.

Straw Hat Race—First, Clarence McGraw; second, Joe Crownover; third, David Zimmerman.

Riding the Plank—First, Joe Crownover; second, Clarence McGraw; third, Clyde Hughes.

Terraplane Race—Winning team, Ray Walker and George Kerns.

Stunts—First, blindfold ride, Mary Belcher and Eugene Workman; second, backward ride, Howard Clark; third, sidecar stunts, Harry Woods and James McMurray.

The clown of the day was James McMurray.

Each first place is 5 points, second place 3 points and third place 1 point. The high point man or champion of the rodeo was Joe Crownover, with David Zimmerman a close second.

The crowning event of the afternoon was the fire wall crash, with Sam Hollis, a local boy, riding a rock motorcycle through a burning board wall.

Prizes were donated by the following firms: Effron's, Contor Bros., Jim Bright, City Cycle company, Henderson & Coleman, Clark Bros., Johnson Tire Co., Brown-Williamson Tobacco company, Economy Electric Supply, Southeastern Brewing company and Sterchi Bros.

The Chattanooga Motorcycle club will hold a hillclimb Sept. 23 at Middle Park, 2 p.m. Herb Reiber, the southern champion, and Clarence Pierce, runner-up, are two of the outstanding riders that will participate.

Ideals are like stars; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands, but like the seafaring man on the desert waters, if you choose them as your guides and follow them you will reach your destiny.—Carl Schurz.

OPPRESSION OF LABORER NOT A NEW SYSTEM

Pastor Quotes Scripture to Back Statement.

DECLARES LABORER WORTHY OF HIRE

Rev. Blanchard Delivers Special Sermon to Organized Workers.

The Rev. Herbert Morgan, pastor of the Edgewood Baptist church, Twenty-seventh street and Third avenue, Foust Addition, will deliver a sermon Sunday morning at 11 o'clock for the special benefit of organized labor as a whole and striking textile workers in particular. Mr. Morgan's subject will be "From Bondage to Victory," and it is hoped a large audience of union members will hear him.

"The oppression of labor is no new thing," said the Rev. George E. Blanchard, pastor of the St. James M. E. church, speaking to a congregation last Sunday which included a number of local trades unionists. "God recognized it when he brought the children of Israel out of Egypt, where they had been oppressed for no greater offense than that they were thrifty and prolific.

"The laborer is worthy of his hire," the St. James pastor reiterated, and the man in the office, factory or digging the ditch is entitled to a remuneration in line with his needs.

Highlights of Rev. Blanchard's sermon follow:

* * * Want and need always claimed Christ's attention. He could not have been the Christ we conceive Him to be without having compassion on the hungering multitude, but this did not end His interest. No task, however humble, fails today to claim His interest. The man in the ditch, giving an honest day's work for the remuneration he receives; the man at the desk manipulating the distribution of millions of dollars; the man swinging the paint brush; the man in the cab, in the office, shop, or store; in all these our Christ is intensely interested. And let me state my belief right here: all labor is a question of meat and bread, but meat and bread alone are not enough. The man digging the ditch and giving an honest day's labor is entitled to and should receive a remuneration in line with his needs. If mere meat and bread is good enough for his children, it is good enough for the children of the bank president; if it is good enough for my children, it is good enough for the children of the millionaire. No matter how humble may be the labor of a man, he should be paid so as to permit him to have not only the bare necessities of life, but some of the comforts, and some time to enjoy the company of his wife and family the same as any other man. * *

The oppression of the laborer is no new thing. God recognized when He brought the children of Israel out of Egypt, where they had been oppressed for no greater offense than that they were thrifty and prolific. The prophets in their time recognized this oppression of labor as one of the outstanding evils. Malachi says in the third chapter and fifth verse: "I will be a swift witness against those that oppress the hirelings in his wages," and it is just as true that the same laws of God apply to the laborer who fails to give full value received—fails to give an honest day's work to his employer for the money he receives.

I cannot see child labor laws to be the biggest bone of contention today as much as I wish things were so that the women and children might be in the homes, schools and churches, making homes while the men of our land make the living.

Neither is the vital question one of higher wages, shorter hours, nor the open or closed shop, as vital as these may be. Labor has always worked against the evils of these things mentioned, and today, with all the legislation they have caused to be enacted, we face the same evils and same needs. In this long fight there has been used organizations, strikes, lockouts, starvation wages, yellow-dog contracts, company unions, arson, murder, hatred, direct disregard of the constitution of our country, and the end is as far away as ever.

What then is the real issue, and what is the way out? How can these questions be settled once and forever? The real issue is and has always been the rightness and wrongness of the human heart in the heart of both employer and labor. The masses will never have the leadership of Him who alone can bring this right relationship among men until He is accepted in the heart of the individual. Here is the answer to the serious problems facing us today.

WALKOUT REPORTED EFFECTIVE IN NATION'S BIG MILL CENTERS

Local Situation Quiet as Mill After Mill Closes and Labor-Haters Line Up Against Workers—Tremendous Demonstration of Unity and Enthusiasm Sweeps All Before It in North and South, With Workers Everywhere Determined to End Employer Despotism.

First few days of the great nation-wide textile strike have been all that could be hoped for, according to local strike executives, and the workers in the Chattanooga territory are responding to the call splendidly, each succeeding day having seen additional mills closed.

Usual array of union-haters is busy, with the perpetual labor-baiters burning up the daily press with tirades against the strikers. John Edgerton, Garnett Andrews (Harvey Wilson's mill) and the editor of the Times are all in accord that the situation is "un-American," Edgerton very strangely, however, referring to the strike as a "code violation," the Times editor agreeing that it is a "strike against the government," and Andrews holding that President Roosevelt and the government generally are not handling the situation properly.

Crocodile tears are being shed lest the textile worker be denied his "inalienable right to work," and meanwhile the walkout spreads daily. Pickets are being maintained at all local mills, and many professional labor-haters are doubtless disappointed that no untoward incident has marked the orderly process of the strike.

A heartening feature of the affair locally is that more than one mill operator is taking the situation philosophically, doubtless realizing that the battle being waged by the United Textile Workers for enforcement of the codes will benefit the management, if successful, probably more than it will the workers.

Rumblings indicating a spread of the strike to other international unions are being watched with interest locally, and it is regarded as practically certain that unless the president's mediation board shall prove successful other groups of workers will shortly be involved.

Use of state militiamen and armed guards in various localities has resulted in a number of deaths and injuries both to strikers and company gunmen, but local strike executives and most of the mill owners are agreed that there is little or no danger of outbreaks locally.

An indication of the spirit locally is seen in a brief statement issued for The Labor World Thursday by the publicity committee of Local 1785, the largest local involved, as follows:

Local 1785 is "out" and all is well. Everybody is feeling fine as there is no trouble going on around our plants. Let us all keep on the job and keep it that way. The men and women are sweeping and trying to keep the place clean around as it always stays.

Coffee is being served to the night pickets. Milk was furnished by United Dairy and cream by Herd's grocery.

Come on, folks, and let's pull over the top. If you help us we can.

EDITH NUCKOLLS,
MRS. R. C. STONE,
B. O. LAWSON,
MAUD WALKER,
MRS. W. C. GILL,
J. L. WILLIAMS.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Early reports show that the national textile strike, involving nearly all branches of the textile industry, is a tremendous success.

From every textile manufacturing section have come reports of 100 per cent walkouts and mills tightly closed.

New England, New York, Pennsylvania and the south report to strike headquarters of the United Textile Workers here a tide of strike enthusiasm that is sweeping all before it.

The strike was completely effective at Durham, N. C.; Charlotte, N. C., and Gastonia, N. C., all large textile mill centers.

Columbus, Ga., mills were virtually all closed and 10,000 workers were on strike. The plant of W. D. Anderson, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association, in Columbus attempted to operate with 100 employes compared to the usual 3,000. Anderson was known to be making a desperate but unsuccessful effort to keep his mills running at three Georgia towns.

Connecticut Strong for Strike.

Walkouts of all workers were reported from Jewett City, Danielson, Plainfield, Thompsonville, Norwich and other Connecticut cities, indicating that Connecticut textile workers were virtually unanimous for the strike.

New Bedford, Mass., reported the strike 100 per cent effective except for three silk mills. Silk workers were out 100 per cent in Fall River, Mass.

One hundred per cent strikes were reported from Holyoke, Mass.; Manchester, N. H.; Elmira, N. Y.; Union City, N. J.; Utica, N. Y., and scores of other textile centers.

Durham Out to Win.

From Durham, N. C., came the following telegram, sent by the secretary of the Durham local:

"Tieing up everything not unionized in this town. We mean to win. Have 400 ex-service men at Erwin who say: 'No man shall pass,' and no man passes, not even the manager. We have all union watchmen. We don't let anyone go in without permission. We are out to win."

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the United Textile Workers' national strike committee, declared emphatically there was no doubt of the success of the strike. He said reports issued by George A. Sloan, head of the Textile institute, the employers' organization, showing mills running, are, "of course, Mr. Sloan's expression of hope."

Strike "Ahead of Schedule."

"I expect him to whistle to keep up his courage," Chairman Gorman said, adding:

"Press association reports also fall short of giving us a true picture of the strike situation. Our reports show that the strike is ahead of schedule both north and south. The south is running far ahead of every expectation and there is nothing but enthusiasm here at national strike headquarters.

"One of the interesting features of the strike is the participation of ex-service men. Let us remember that most ex-service men are workers. Very few are millionaires or mill owners. We count on ex-service men being with us everywhere.

"At this critical hour we counsel our members against deception, we warn them there will be efforts to fool them. We counsel them also to be cool-headed in those sections where troops have been called out.

Strike Moves Like "Landslide.

"The strike is moving with the impetus of a landslide and with the same irresistible force. One of our reports from the south says, 'We mean to win if we die in the attempt,' and that is the spirit that moves this entire mighty army that is now on the march to freedom and a fuller participation in that "broader life' which our president has pledged us. The sophistry of reactionary employers is played out.

"There must be justice in the mills and the freedom of workers to be real men and women in the full sense of American citizenship and until that day comes no mills will run. We are determined to crush despotism in the textile industry and today's reports of operations in every section should make it clear that our objective will be achieved."

Roy M'Donald Enters Restaurant Business

Roy McDonald, operator of the so-called Home Stores, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, tire dealer, etc., etc., has invaded a new field, according to reports, and has opened a restaurant in a store room on Broad street formerly occupied by one of his chain groceries.

It could not be learned whether McDonald plans to replace all his grocery stores with restaurants, but it is presumed he merely has added the serving of cooked food to his already wide field of endeavors.

Two Feature Bouts At Rossville Arena

Light-heavyweight wrestling is fast gaining popularity in Chattanooga. The Rossville promoters are bringing some of the greatest stars in the light-heavyweight division to the Rossville arena and are drawing fine crowds to see the bouts. They are also giving the boxing fans some good boxing shows.

Next Monday night at the Rossville arena Berry Baggett fights Battling Bozo, of Birmingham, and Bobby Green, of Nashville, meets Walter Doxey in a two-feature bout card. There will be three other bouts on the card, the promoters announced. The two feature bouts are both for the 10-round route.

MORRISON WILL MAKE LABOR DAY ADDRESS IN FLINT, MICH.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, will deliver a Labor day address in Flint, Mich., on Monday, Sept. 3, according to an announcement at the headquarters of the A. F. of L here.

He will speak under the auspices of the Flint Federation of Labor.

Hopkins Stands by His Relief Policy; Tells Why Strikers Will Be Given Aid

Workers Should Not Be Handicapped by Starvation in Fighting for Rights, Says Administrator; Officials Must Not Assume to Judge Merits of Conflict.

By CHARLES M. KELLY
(In Labor)

Reactionary southern mill owners, in an obvious effort to inflame public sentiment, this week put out an unusually brazen piece of propaganda.

A story was sent out from Atlanta, Ga., that George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, had declared there never was a "more opportune time" for a walkout, because the federal government would take care of strikers if union war chests became exhausted.

The yarn attracted wide attention, and when Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins held his press conference on Monday he was almost mobbed by correspondents eager to learn what he had to say about it.

Put Hopkins "On Spot."

Plainly annoyed by the statement attributed to Googe, Hopkins denied that he had ever discussed the proposed textile strike with anybody. He insisted that someone was trying to put federal relief on "the spot."

However, when informed by correspondents that Googe had categorically denied the alleged interview, Hopkins' good humor was restored and he discussed frankly the administration's attitude toward strikes in general and a textile strike in particular.

"We have stated our position frequently," Hopkins said, "but, that there may be no doubt about it, I will reaxirm our policy.

Relief Agencies Not Judges.

"Our instructions to relief officials are that they shall take care of people on a basis of need and that they are not to inquire too closely into the cause of their misfortune.

"We have insisted that relief officials shall in no instance set themselves up as judges of the merits of a strike.

"We are not in position to determine the facts, even were we disposed to do so. So far as we are concerned, only two agencies can influence us in making a decision, and they are the labor department and the national labor relations board.

Deaf Ear to Propaganda.

"When either or both of these bodies say that a strike is unjustified, it will be time enough to say whether relief shall be withdrawn. Until then, we will continue to relieve needy strikers, no matter who assumes to say we are doing wrong."

Asked whether the assurance of being fed had not encouraged workers to strike, Hopkins bristled and shot back:

"Certainly not. It's ridiculous to even suggest that this has been the case. No worker would strike to get the kind of 'handout' that is offered him as relief. What he is fighting for is a chance to make a decent living while working.

Entitled to Fair Wage.

"I presume no one will take exception when I insist that a man who is willing to work should get more for his labor than he can obtain from relief agencies without working."

Hopkins insisted that there have "been relatively few strikes" and he added:

"It's a surprising thing to me that we haven't had a damned sight more strikes."

Returning to the question of feeding strikers, Hopkins said that the policy had worked out "very well."

"I am satisfied we have the support of the country," he continued. "Workers should not be forced to fight for their rights under the handicap of starvation. So far as we can prevent it, that won't happen until and unless the proper governmental agency decrees that to give relief would be to assist a subversive movement."

Collective Bargaining Pact Is Proposed For Detroit Area

Washington.—Members of the electrical contracting division of the construction industry and certain of their employes in the metropolitan district of Detroit, Mich., have applied to the national recovery administrator for approval of a collective bargaining agreement dealing with hours of labor, wages and conditions of employment. The territory specified in the agreement embraces all of Wayne county, Michigan, and certain townships and cities in three nearby counties.

The agreement provides that no electrical worker shall be permitted to work in excess of forty hours in any one week, eight hours in any 24-hour period, or five days in any 7-day period. Regular hours would be from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. of any day, Mondays to Fridays inclusive.

The agreement also fixes the following wage scale:

For foremen, not less than 12½ per cent more than for skilled electricians;

For skilled electricians, not less than $1.25 per hour for regular employment hours;

For apprentices, 40 cents per hour for their first year; 45 cents for the second, 75 cents for the third and 90 cents per hour for the fourth year of their apprenticeship.

The pay for overtime is fived at double the pay for regular hours.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

Havana, Cuba.—As a demonstration of sympathy in support of the employes of the communications department who have been on strike since Aug. 11, the organized tobacco workers walked out in a 24-hour strike. The sympathetic strike was called by the National Confederation of Labor, which announced its intention of inducing other unions to suspend work for short periods to show their solidarity with the postoffice and telegraph workers.

George Goode Now Called "Grandpa"

George Goode, well-known member of Local 226, Painters, is proudly proclaiming the fact that he is "Grandpa." Thursday morning a "bouncing baby girl" was born to Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Newman, and Mr. Goode will insist that she be called Georgia.

Mrs. Newman was formerly Miss Alice Goode. They live at 412 West Fifth street.

TRANSIT CO. OPPOSES INDEPENDENT UNIONS

New York.—An independent union of the employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit company here complained to Mrs. Elinore Herrick, vice-chairman of the regional labor board, that the employes of the company are not permitted to organize in a union of their own choice, in accordance with the provisions of the national industrial recovery act.

The petitioners asked Mrs. Herrick to compel the company to repudiate the "yellow dog" contracts under which it was alleged employes are forbidden to join any union other than the I. R. T. company union. The board was urged to assure all of the company's employes that they had the legal right to organize and bargain collectively and that the right could not be legally contravened by the officials of the company.

The I. R. T. is in receivership under Thomas E. Murray.

CHARGED WITH FIXING PRICES.

Washington.—The National Association of Ladies' Handbag Manufacturers is charged with a conspiracy to fix prices in a complaint by the U. S. federal trade commission. The complaint named Abraham C. Fisher and Ira Rosenzweig, chief officials of the association, and more than forty concerns as co-respondents by means of their membership in the association.

WAGES

Editor's Note.—For a considerable period the Union of Postoffice Workers of Great Britain has endeavored to persuade the British postmaster-general to increase the wages of post-office employes. Mr. Francis Andrews, editor of The Post, the union's official organ, in an editorial on "Wages" gives the following analysis of the necessity of higher wages for postoffice workers in particular and for working men and women generally.

By FRANCIS ANDREWS
Editor, The Post, Organ of the British Union of Postoffice Workers.

Postoffice people, as a whole, do not get enough pay to escape embarrassment and worry, while many of them are miserably poor. Indeed so many of them are poor that to be their chief can bring no satisfaction. The coldness of official papers cannot disguise, nor can official courtesies hide these human factors for long.

An impersonal calculagraph philosophy with regard to living men and women may have its uses; but in the end, wages, bread and butter, roof-trees and rent have to be spoken of face to face, and the story they tell has to be told in simple English. It is to tell that story that our representatives ask to be received. * * *

The arithmetic of a wage issue is a matter of addition, but the philosophy of it is deeper. Our people give the greater part of their lives to work, and concentrate upon it their attention and enthusiasm. A world like ours, in which poverty is a preventable disease, should offer in return for the service given an adequate and happy existence as far as money goes.

There is more than that in it. It is not really a case of a gracious gift; it is an economic necessity that the great mass of the people should be buying and consuming.

The highly productive state, with its power to deliver the goods, has no justification whatever unless it can distribute as efficiently as it produces. If that efficiency in production is not used for the betterment of the common life it is being debased to other causes, and in the end must bring disaster upon itself. To all thinking folk that is self-evident.

A wage claim is but the demand that common sense shall prevail. Therefore a wage claim seeks for wider and better distribution of the produce of life. Wider and better distribution is everywhere demanded. It is not because of crises that wage claims should be refused, but to prevent crises that they should be conceded.

Is it not true that if the people of Britain had shared steadily, and step by step, in the advancing prosperity throughout the years of industrial development, the whole world would have developed differently, and that no money crisis would have arisen? That seems a sweeping question, but it is in accord with ascertainable history.

ORNBURN IS SECRETARY OF UNION LABEL TRADES

Atlantic City, N. J.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor selected Ira M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, to act as secretary of the Union Label Trades Department of the A. F. of L. until the October convention of the department selects a successor to the late John J. Manning.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. . . . Price $1.

High Profits and Low Wages

Interesting indeed are the figures on payrolls, and on dividends and profits, of cotton textile mills which are being made public by the United Textile Workers of America from their strike headquarters in Washington. The payroll of a mill in Durham, N. C., which is described as "high as compared with other cotton textile mills in the south," shows skilled workers receiving sums of $5.40 minimum to a single instance of $14.70 to a loom fixer who is head of a family of seven for thirty hours of work. The majority of these workers were paid $9 to $10 for thirty hours of work, or at the rate of approximately $13 for a week of forty hours.

In comparison, Vice-President Gorman cites the growth and profits of just one mill which started operations seventy-five years ago with a capital of $1,000,000. During seventy-one years of operation, it paid its stockholders an average dividend of 17 per cent. From 1900 to 1915 it paid over $8,000,000 to its stockholders, and then declared a stock dividend of 200 per cent. Despite this inflation, from 1915 to 1926 this mill paid an annual dividend averaging 15 per cent or equal to 45 per cent on its original capital. In addition to this, the company until a few years ago had a reserve fund of $20,000,000.

This is the old game of trying to draw more out of the spigot than goes in at the bunghole. Buying power and consuming power is essentially measured in terms of wages and payrolls, and the textile industry is probably the country's outstanding illustration of the unwillingness of an industry to hold up its end of the nation's mass buying power. Low wages have been chronic in textile mills throughout their history, and the United Textile Workers render a distinct public service now in revealing the detail of the industry's high profits and low wages, which have been its outstanding and distinguishing characteristic.

Retailers Boost Food Prices

The absolute necessity for working men and women to be effectively organized in bona fide trade unions strong enough to enforce constantly increasing wage scales in order to cope with the activities of profiteers in the necessaries of life is pointedly illustrated by the report of Commissioner Lubin, of the U. S. bureau of labor statistics, that retail food merchants throughout the country have boosted the cost of food products to consumers more than 4 per cent since last April.

In the two weeks prior to his report Commissioner Lubin said the price boosters had put up food prices 1.2 per cent, which was the greatest rise they had forced in the cost of living during any two weeks period since Dec. 15, 1931. Commissioner Lubin also pointed out that the retail food merchants had forced up food prices 23½ per cent since April 15, 1933.

There are only two ways in which wage-earners and small salary earners—the groups vitally affected by price boosting in the necessaries of life—can meet the activities of the food profiteers. One way is for the workers to buy less food for themselves and their dependents; this would result in malnutrition and an undermining of health conditions. The other way is for the workers to be so strongly organized in trade unions that they can compel employers to advance wages at least just as rapidly as the merchants boost prices, or, better still, to anticipate price boosting and persuade employers to put more money in pay envelopes before the cost of living is forced up.

Thirty-Hour Week Imperative

The necessity of the 30-hour week, or even a shorter week to provide employment for the ten million ablebodied adults who are idle through no fault of their own, is emphasized by the report of Edward Corsi, director of the emergency home relief bureau of New York City.

Pointing out that during the first seven months of this year the bureau had 175,000 families, including 671,866 persons, on its relief rolls, at a cost of $40,468,961, which was more than the bureau spent during the entire year of 1933, Mr. Corsi predicted that "at this rate home relief will cost about $70,000,000 for the year, or close to double the $40,000,000 spent all last year."

Startling as these figures are, they fade into almost nothingness when compared with Mr. Corsi's declaration that under our economic system and the failure of employers to reorganize it so as to provide work for all ablebodied persons, it is absolutely necessary to regard stupendous relief funds for the destitute unemployed as a permanent matter which calls for a special department of the city government to administer them efficiently and with justice to both the jobless and the city itself. Referring to the figures he had cited, Mr. Corsi said:

"These are hopeful signs for a reabsorption of relief families in the economic life of the community, but they seem to me to be a very clear indication of a needed permanent relief program as part of the regular welfare set-up of the city government.

"I think this question must be faced squarely. It is no longer possible to camouflage or minimize the need for public relief as a function of the city government. These figures should arouse the public to a consciousness of the enormity of our job, and a sense of their responsibility in seeing that no part of the relief funds is misapplied. With about one out of every ten persons in the community on relief, the situation is close enough to every one's interest to try to bring down this record figure if it is possible to reduce it.

Mr. Corsi is right in insisting that there should be no misappropriation of relief funds. Many investigations have shown that such delinquencies are very rare in comparison with the number on the rolls. But the main conclusion which his figures prove is the overwhelming necessity of the enactment by congress of a 30-hour week law applicable to all employers, which would automatically remove from relief rolls many thousands of those whom Mr. Corsi regards as the permanent wards of the community.

It is all right to "arouse the public to a consciousness of the enormity" of the job providing the millions of jobless and their families with food, clothing and shelter, but the main and much more important task which should not be postponed if our free institutions are to endure, is to arouse the public to a consciousness of the fact that there should be no unemployment, that the only way to mitigate and prevent such a social crime is for society to insist on their representatives in congress taking seriously the declaration of the constitution regarding the importance of the general welfare, and insist that when the next congress meets their legislators get busy and enact the shorter work week bill.

Obstructive Tactics Unwise

The railroads are crying loudly over the railway pension act and a legal test of the act's constitutionality is said to be assured.

In the present temper of America, such action seems foolish. It would appear to be the better part of wisdom for the railroads to give the pension act a fair trial and see how it worked out. If it should place too great a burden on the railroads or have other serious defects, it could be amended. In the meantime, there is no danger that it will ruin the railroads.

The nation is in no mood just now to stand obstructive tactics from the railroads or other great moneyed interests. It expects business of all kinds to co-operate in the "new deal" and attempts to block the pension act will not add to the popularity of the railroads, which need friends badly in these days of growing competition from other means of transportation.

30-HOUR WEEK LAW AND JOBLESS INSURANCE ARE URGED BY LEWIS

President of United Mine Workers, in Labor Day Message, Also Demands Strict Enforcement of Labor Section of Recovery Act and Condemns Operation of Business Against the Common Welfare.

The demand that business leaders regard social justice as an element in industry, the prompt enactment of a federal 30-hour week law to provide work for some of our ten million jobless, and the establishment of unemployment insurance funds supported entirely by employers, are stressed in the Labor Day message of John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Text of Lewis' Message.

The text of Mr. Lewis' message issued from the headquarters of the Mine Workers in Washington, D. C., follows:

"The past year witnessed a gradual recovery of industry, and, of more importance, an increasing acceptance of the new order of industrial discipline. Gradually the old idea is passing that the great industrial enterprizes on which the national welfare so largely rests, are purely private affairs to be conducted as one might play a game. It would be a curious commentary on our form of government if under it only the old game could be played.

"Organized labor, equally with the industrialists, holds to the institution of private property and to the virtue of private initiative. It distrusts the regimentation of life, but it feels that the requirements of social justice and common welfare are not wholly problems of charity but of politics.

Industry Should Support Unemployed.

"Take the matter of the unemployed, now estimated at between nine and ten million and with their dependents constituting one-fourth of our population. Are they to be supported by private or public charity? Such a plan involves the degradation of the class and leaves the nation as a whole carrying the burden. In fact, the burden will call for higher taxes—a form of governmental power not disputed—and may be expected ultimately to bear heaviest upon those who now so blindly oppose any practical solution of the problem.

"Is it not plain that work must be distributed by shortening the work day and work week? Is it not also obvious that unemployment reserves or insurance must be set up in industries to protect the human factors against want in seasonal shut-downs or cyclical depressions? Fundamentally this is a cost item which each industry may reasonably be expected to bear. Why should an industry turn out its employes, at periods it deems profitable not to use them, and let the private or public charities take care of them until they are called back to work?

Federal 30-Hour Week Law.

"As to the six-hour day and five-day week, the condition today reinforces the need for passage of the Black-Connery bill. All the promises and predictions that industry would take up the slack of employment have failed. It is evident that industry has, by mechanization and economies in labor, thrown these millions on the scrap pile where they will stay unless the hours of labor are adjusted. And this should be done without putting the burden on those employed by reducing their wages. To reduce the wages of those now working in order to employ more, is to lower the whole wage structure upon which our industrial and agricultural markets depend. Where will the money come from? Where does it come from now? If these are industrial obligations, then industry must bear them, even if it involves readjustment of market realizations.

Strict Enforcement of Section 7-A.

"Organized labor insists that the provisions of codes containing Section 7-A be enforced in spirit and letter. Can employers enjoy their code privileges or commercial agreements and trade consortiums and contest the conditions of labor relations upon which those privileges are being exercised?

"One word more upon the organized labor movement. The time has come when the employes in mass industries must be permitted and encouraged to organize themselves into industrial unions. This is the only form of organization that will meet their requirements. The American Federation of Labor must authorize such a policy.

NEWSPAPER GUILD WINS CLOSED SHOP

New York City.—A contract signed between the Jewish Daily Bulletin and the Newspaper Guild of New York establishes the first closed shop of editorial workers in this city. Signing of the contract followed a threatened strike by editorial workers on the Bulletin over the recent discharge of three members of the staff.

The Bulletin agreed to employ only members of the Newspaper Guild, to institute at once a six-day, 40-hour week and to begin a five-day, 40-hour week in October. The paper also agreed to reinstate the discharged workers whenever additional employes were hired, contending that its financial condition did not permit immediate reinstatement.

very strike sees attempts to line the consumer against the striking ers. The same thing is being in the textile strike. The fact it is to the benefit of the con- r that fair conditions obtain for workers is ignored by interests le to labor.

he consumers' counsel of the agri- ral adjustment administration hasizes the interest of the con- r in fair labor conditions in a ement by Thomas C. Blaisdell, Jr., tant consumers' counsel. The ement, which should be widely uated at this time, says:

t is clearly to the interest of the mer that workers receive fair es and good working conditions, as it is to the interest of con- ers that farmers receive fair es. Only under such conditions can production and distribution of modities be efficiently organized. This should be kept in mind when mpts are made to mobilize con- r interests against strikers in an trial dispute. The consumer is served by a fair and honorable ement—not by the destruction of r's legal right of collective bar- ing which has been specifically med under Section 7-A of the nal recovery act."

It won't be long before some very disappointing figures come out of housing, unless all signs fail and unless advance dribblings of information are all wrong.

The reason for this will be buried in the private files of New York banks and big business.

They will not be able to check this fine program permanently, of course, but they will make it necessary for the government to step harder on certain toes if there are to be results in volume.

Those who have felt that big business would not sacrifice people for profits will yet come to the conclusion that they have another guess coming.

They'll do it any time and government has lately shown many signs of knowing it very well and of being prepared to meet the issue. Here's hoping.

Don't look for a winter of peace and plenty. Look for a winter of struggle and of plenty of tough going for plenty of Americans.

The old order is passing, but it is sending us a devil of a back-fire on the way. The Mellons don't get mellow very fast, the Steel trust doesn't grow wings and turn over a whole new leaf. And so on. Gains have been made—very important gains. There are gains that will stand as great landmarks forever.

But there is just no use in kidding ourselves to the effect that all is light and sweetness. Just because so much has been gained, the powers of wealth are fighting more desperately to keep from being pushed clear off the throne.

In the end they will pass, of course, but meanwhile—it will be a hard winter.

Neighbor—I never lend money a second time to a man who disappoints me.

Man—But I paid you the ten I borrowed last week.

5,000,000 FAMILIES TO NEED AID IN WINTER, RICHBERG SAYS

Drought and Unusual Increase in Cold Months to Boost Relief Cases to Record High, Is Prediction—Strikers Get Negligible Amount of Federal Money, Report Says.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Federal relief rolls will reach a record high of 5,000,000 families next February, Donald R. Richberg, secretary of the president's executive council, predicted in the third report of the council on progress under the "new deal." Richberg also denied that the government is financing strikes, the report saying:

"The amount of federal relief payments which can be attributed to strikes has been almost negligible."

Severity of the drought situation and the usual winter increase in relief will bring the anticipated winter increase in relief cases to 5,000,000 families, the report said.

Total of Strikes Held Small.

In connection with relief and strikes, Richberg said there had been a "certain amount of misinformation," which called for a clarifying statement, which he made as follows:

"The number of workers involved in strikes during the last year has been a very small percentage of the total number of employed workers; and has been a smaller percentage than in previous comparable periods. The total man-hours lost as a result of strikes has been likewise unusually small; that is, strikes have been of exceptionally short duration."

Richberg expressed confidence that a "very marked improvement has been made, both in working conditions generally and in the handling of labor relations."

Federal Activities Praised.

The effect of administration of the recovery act, with activities of the other government departments and agencies, "including particularly the department of labor and the federal emergency relief administration," the statement said, "has been to reduce the extent and severity of labor controversies, which, according to all precedents, rise rapidly during a period of economic recovery."

In the first two sections of his progress report, Richberg said more than 4,000,000 workers had gone back to their jobs under the "new deal," and that the goal of parity for farm prices was almost accomplished.

In "relief of destitution"—the third report—Richberg traced the history of federal relief since March, 1933, including the three major programs of direct relief, civil works and the emergency work program.

Cost Peak in May.

It was set forth that 4,560,000 families were receiving relief in March, 1933, when Mr. Roosevelt took office, and that more than 4,200,000 families were on the rolls when FERA succeeded the RFC in the relief field in May, laast year.

The cost of relief in March, 1933, was given as $81,205,000. The relief expenditures reached their peak in May, this year, at $128,020,426, on the basis of figures to July 1, 1934.

"Through increase in private employment, only in part attributed to seasonal causes," said the report, "the relief rolls declined steadily from March, 1933, to the end of September, then rose, and then dropped abruptly toward the end of the year through transfers from relief rolls to the CWA program."

TRUCKMEN DEMAND WAGE INCREASE

Teamsters' Union Threatens Strike Unless 200 Employers Restore $5 Pay Cut.

New York.—A relatively complete tie-up of the port of New York and the paralysis of the delivery of a large part of the city's food was seen here as the result of the refusal of merchant truckmen's bureau of New York to sign a new collective agreement with four locals of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America to restore the $5 wage cut contained in the old contract, agreed to eighteen months ago, which is about to expire. The present wage scale is from $35 to $40 per week.

Officials of the merchant truckmen's bureau claimed they could not grant the extra $5 because of competitive conditions forced upon them by merchant truckmen's associations in New Jersey and other regions outside of the New York City area.

UNION POSTAL CLERKS

By E. R. HATCHER
Secretary-Treasurer Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

(This is the fourth of a series of articles on the Postal Clerks written by Mr. Hatcher.)

A short time after the Chicago Postoffice Clerks' union received its charter from the American Federation of Labor, the new United National Association of Postoffice Clerks held its first convention in Atlantic City.

The Chicago members believing it only a short time before the new national body would cast its lot with the American Federation of Labor, remained members in good standing in the association and sent three delegates and a committee of five to this convention to work for affiliation. But the convention decided to let the question of affiliation go over until the following year.

It appeared that the trade union movement was confined to only a few of the larger cities so when the convention met again in 1902 the Chicago unionists were not even seated as delegates. The convention strongly opposed affiliation on the grounds that it might interfere with the civil service oath of office, stating that as members of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks they were all civil service employes of the government and had taken a specific obligation upon entering the service binding them to take no step that would embarrass the government in conducting its postal affairs, and as organized labor had in the past achieved many of its victories by means to which the clerks could not resort without violating their oaths, it would be impossible for that reason for them to become members of that body.

As a result of this action of the UNAPOC convention, all trade unionists withdrew from the ranks of the association. It had become apparent that the two factions could no longer work in harmony within a single body. This represented a definite break with the policy to which the association still clung of always working in harmony with, and in such a way as to never "embarrass" the department.

Failure year after year to get legislation through congress caused further dissatisfaction in the ranks of the association. The clerks in a number of the other offices followed the example of their Chicago brothers and secured charters from the American Federation of Labor for local unions. On Aug. 27, 1906, delegates from seven of these local unions met in Chicago and formed the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, the first national organization of government employes to be chartered by the American Federation of Labor. The seven locals represented were: Chicago, San Francisco, Milwaukee, Louisville, Nashville, Salt Lake City and Muskogee.

The fundamental principle of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks—the necessity and desirability of joining with other workers in a rational program for social betterments—is now generally accepted by all thinking postal workers. Its example has since been followed by three other organizations of postal workers, namely, the National Association of Letter Carriers, the Railway Mail association and the National Federation of Rural Letter Carriers. The four affiliated organizations of postal workers have formed a joint body and work together harmoniously on all legislative measures of mutual interest.

Gas Mergers Are Hit By Utility Workers

New England Council Opposes Scheme to Close Local Plants and Give Monopoly to Massachusetts Gas Company.

Pelham, N. H.—The first annual convention of the New England Council of Public Utilities held here, attended by delegates from New England and visiting delegates from the middle west, strongly opposed the scheme of the Massachusetts Gas company to supply gas to the cities of Cambridge and Worcester, Mass., from the company's consolidated plant at Everett. The delegates believed the proposal was the beginning of shrewdly conceived plans to create a monopoly of gas distribution in the state, which would close up local plants, with loss of employment to hundreds of workers.

It was claimed that those back of the proposed gas monopoly are already directing the affairs of the New England Power company, which has scrapped many local power plants and furnishes power generated at Bellows Falls.

The convention approved the vertical system of unions and favored effecting a working combination with the United Mine Workers of America. A special representative of the Mine Workers was present to explain how the gas workers would come under the jurisdiction of the miners' union. It was claimed by those sponsoring the combination that in New England power is a by-product of coal, and that, therefore, gas workers are in the same group as coal workers.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Around 2,200 miners of No. 5 and No. 7 collieries, operated by the Susquehanna Collieries company, at Nanticoke, scheduled to return to work after a week's idleness, returned to their homes, announcing they would not work with members of the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania, a dual organization.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla.: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the Syrup."

LABOR SECRETARY SAYS NATION NOW SEES WELFARE OF WORKERS IS ESSENTIAL TO PROSPERITY

Washington, Sept. 6.—"As a nation we are recognizing that programs long thought of as merely labor welfare, such as shorter hours, higher wages, and a voice in the terms and conditions of work, are really essential economic factors for recovery and for the technique of industrial management in a mass production age," Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said in a Labor day message.

"The test of adjusting our industrial life to the patterns of democracy and the needs of a new mechanical period," continued Miss Perkins, "mark both a gain in the standards of life and work for dage-earners and also a new responsibility for constructive leadership on the part of labor and management.

"Progress has been made toward recovery since this day a year ago and the steps being taken toward bringing about a better economic arrangement which will not lead again to disaster should hearten every wage-earner in the country. President Roosevelt's committee on economic security is now functioning. It will usggest a comprehensive program designed to afford protection to the individual in all hazards likely to involve him in distress and dependency. ards of life and work for wage-earnis increasingly greater as the laws and agencies of government dealing with industrial and labor matters rely more and more upon co-operation of labor for the effective development in the interest of wage-earners, business and the public. This new challenge for labor statesmanship is everywhere meeting with response to be glad that ability, integrity and patriotic devotion have been marked in this period."

GARMENT WORKERS PLAN STRIKE TO ENFORCE PRESIDENT'S ORDER

Chicago.—David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, has returned to New York with an ultimatum to employers that thousands of cotton garment workers would strike unless a 36-hour week is granted.

The demand will be presented to manufacturers in New York, he said. The 36-hour week was ordered recently by President Roosevelt in a revision of the industry's NRA code.

Plans for a strike were completed in Chicago at a meeting of labor leaders from the cotton garment centers, but President Dubinsky took pains to point out the strike will not take effect unless the manufacturers persist in defying the presidential order.

The Roosevelt order is effective Oct. 1 and although the manufacturers have defied it, the union will wait to see whether they actually refuse to cut hours.

"If they comply with the order the cause of the strike will be eliminated," Dubinsky said. "If they do not, we propose to help the president enforce it."

MOONEY'S MOTHER DIES AT 85 YEARS

San Francisco.—Mrs. Mary Mooney, mother of Thomas J. Mooney, serving a life sentence in San Quentin prison as a result of conviction on perjured evidence of complicity in the San Francisco Preparedness day parade bombing of 1916, died here on Sept. 2 following a heart attack. She was 85.

Mrs. Mooney was firmly convinced of the innocence of her son and was one of his most loyal and active supporters. Despite the weaknesses of age, she devoted every possible moment of her time to his cause. She made trips throughout the country and to Europe to plead for her son and in January, 1933, made a personal plea to Franklin D. Roosevelt, then president-elect.

HIGHER PAY FOR TOLEDO PRINTERS

Toledo, O.—New wage scale offered by the publishers of the three daily newspapers in Toledo has been accepted by members of Typographical Union No. 63. This scale grants an increase of 5 per cent on Sept. 1 and another 5 per cent on Dec. 1, and restoring the 10 per cent cut made in 1932. The men will have a work day of seven and three-quarter hours instead of the present eight hours.

The contract has been under negotiation for three months, and will mean a wage of $43.08 for day workers, and $45.83 for night workers per week when the 5 per cent increase is made on Dec. 1.

LONG HOURS, LOW PAY IN NEON SIGN CODE

Washington.—Seemingly unmindful of the fact that over ten million persons are pounding the pavements looking for jobs, the corporations which own the electric neon sign industry persuaded the national recovery administration to approve a code characterized by a work week so long that none of the idle will be given jobs and wages so low that decent family standards can hardly be maintained.

CHICAGO TRACTION WORKERS READY FOR GENERAL STRIKE

Chicago.—Representatives of 15,000 street car operators have empowered officers of their union to order a sympathetic strike with bus drivers of the Chicago Motor Coach company. Speakers said 5,000 elevated workers would follow suit.

At the same time the street car men began accumulation of a fund to prosecute the strike, approving an immediate 50 per cent assessment on each member.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of unior meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

Strike Demands Are Won By Knit Goods Employes

14,000 New York Workers Secure Hours Cut and Classified Wage Scales.

New York.—The strike of 14,000 knit goods workers for shorter hours, higher wages and improved work conditions was ended when the employers agreed to a cut in hours with the wage rates and other matters in dispute to be settled by arbitration. The unions directly concerned were the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union and the Knitgoods Workers' union.

The tentative settlement of the strike calls for a 36-hour week the first year and a 35-hour week the second. The former work week was thirty-seven and one-half hours. It also establishes for the first time classified wage scales for the workers. The pay rates, extra pay for overtime, legal holidays and other points are to be arbitrated by Borough President Raymond V. Ingersoll, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, of the New York regional labor board.

Flat Glass Workers Receive AFL Charter

Atlantic City, N. J.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, during its fall session here, granted a charter to the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of Pittsburgh, Pa. The organization has 12,000 members with Glenn W. McCabe as president.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., in explaining the action of the council, said the charter was granted when the Window Glass Cutters' League of America, an organization of about 1,000 highly skilled workers, refused to accept as members the group organized by Mr. McCabe. The old organization, it was said, has a closed shop agreement with employers and its members hand on their skill from father to son and have insisted that they would only take into their organization sons of the members.

The depression did us one good turn, acting as a poultice that reduced the swelling in a lot of heads.

Children's Wear Industry Plans To Cut Hours and Increase Pay

Washington, Sept. 6.—The national recovery administration has announced that the code authority of the infants' and children's wear industry has indicated that it would approve a reduction of the industry's work hours from forty to thirty-six, accompanied by a 10 per cent increase in hourly wage rates.

This change will be a principal result of extended conferences which have taken place between the code authority and Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, dealing with industry's problems.

The wage and hour change probably will take place about Oct. 15, and will bring this industry into line with the great majority of garment manufacturing lines, which have been working at or near the 36-hour limit. This is the second industry in this line to negotiate on such modification of its code.

To prevent "undue hardship" in individual cases, the NRA says, the change is to be accomplished, under the agreement now being negotiated, by creation of an exemptions committee within the industry. This group will have full power to grant exceptions in cases where justice to a firm requires it, and its action will become effective without delay. The recovery administration will reserve the right to disapprove any exemption so granted, if evidence shows it to be unjustified.

WIN WAGE BOOST.

Butte, Mont.—John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, said that twenty out of twenty-eight unions which had voted approved the proposed agreement for the settlement of the prolonged strike of the employes in the mines of the Anaconda Copper company at the Butte, Anaconda and Great Falls plants. The strikers walked out on May 8.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed, but it was semi-officially reported to provide for an advance of 50 cents in the daily wage scale.

SAY M'DONALD FIRED STORE MANAGER FOR ASSISTING STRIKERS

"Home Store" Employe Gave Pound of Coffee to Textile Strikers, and Lost His Job, Says Story—Three Other Employes Resign and Stores Are Picketed—Carriers of Non-Union Throw-Sheet Join Pickets and "Home-Store-Advertiser" Is Not Delivered—McDonald's Anti-Union Labor Attitule Recalled.

Roy McDonald, grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, druggist, restaurateur, tire dealer and self-styled individualist, manager of the so-called "Home Stores," a chain of groceries which extends into several nearby communities, got "in bad" this week when he indicated his lack of sympathy with the textile strike by discharging a store manager who was guilty of donating a pound of coffee to the strikers (which he paid for out of his own pocket), according to reports furnished The Labor World.

It is recited that the manager of one of McDonald's stores in East Lake, Mr. W. A. Armour, is a very popular citizen in those parts, being highly regarded by all classes of citizenship and numbering his personal friends by the hundreds. On Tuesday of this week, the story goes, Mr. Armour was approached by the strikers and asked if he cared to make a personal donation to the strikers' commissary. Mr. Armour replied in the affirmative, it is said, and produced one pound of coffee, taking the money from his own pocket to pay for same and putting it in the cash register.

At the time, however, one Vaughn, district manager for the so-called "Home Stores," was present, and the result was a visit from the "big chief" himself, who decreed that the manager had erred to such an extent that he should be separated from his job. The assistant manager, Mr. Akin, the story goes, was then proffered the manager's job, but declined with thanks, as did Mr. Giddens, a clerk, and another employe. So the "whole works" was discharged for "insubordination" or something and a new force sent in.

But the self-styled individualist "reckoned without his host," it appeared, and the residents of that vicinity immediately took up the cudgel in defense of the popular employes and a cordon of pickets was thrown around this store as well as another close by, and all comers were informed by a "sandwich man" that McDonald's Home Stores are "unfair to labor." It was said also that McDonald's non-union throw-sheet was not distributed this week in the Rossville and East Lake territory, his carrier boys having joined the pickets which operated in the vicinity of his stores.

News of the incident spread like wildfire, and in a matter of a few hours probably a majority of people in Hamilton county and other communities where the chain operates were informed that McDonald, had discharged his force for having the temerity to donate (at their own expense) a pound of coffee to the striking workers.

McDonald has long been recognized as one of the most arrogant employers with whom local laboring men and women have had to deal. He has in the past many times indicated a contempt for labor, organized and unorganized, and has long ago been declared "unfair" by building trades workers in Chattanooga. It was recalled this week that, when he established his "throw-sheet," he employed out-of-town operator despite the fact that many local compositors were at that time unemployed.

Any man who works for him, he said, will come to work when he tells him, and quit when he tells him; and if the boss in his wisdom desires that said employe shall sweep the floor, keep the books or deliver the papers, that would be expected of him.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial captains to maintain wages. If wages had been cut in half at that time, he averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further held that said depression will not end until wages are cut further and further.

Local trades unionists recalled this week McDonald's "sale" of his stores to the various managers, when the code provided that executives be paid $35 per week. This, however, he stated was not done to evade the code, but was a "dream of years," whereby his loyal managers were to be made sole owners of the stores. When the code requirement for executives' salaries was reduced, it was recalled, the dream faded and McDonald repossessed his stores, and the various managers were again reduced to the status of ordinary employes of the corporation.

Local newspapers both quoted the grocer, baker, dairyman, restaurateur, druggist, tire dealer, printer, publisher, individualist, etc., etc., when asked for an interview on the East Lake affair, as follows:

"Ridiculous."

CATERING UNION THREATENS STRIKE

Cincinnati.—A strike of 70,000 hotel, restaurant and beverage dispensing workers was threatened by Robert B. Hesketh, secretary-treasurer of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance.

"Much as we desire to work in conjunction with our government and the NRA," Hesketh telegraphed Deputy Code Administrator Sol Rosenblatt, "I shall feel justified in calling for a general cessation of work by our 70,000 members if our bad conditions are further encroached upon."

Hesketh protested the placing of hotel restaurants under the hotel code, extension of "off days" to two and a half weekly and an increase of daily working hours from twelve to fourteen.

"We are likewise opposed," he said, "to the substitute measures offered that go now to the industrial labor and consumers' boards. Our conditions are bad enough now, both as to wages and hours and much unemployment prevails."

CONNECTICUT UNIONS URGE GERMAN BOYCOTT

New Britain, Conn.—The Connecticut State Federation of Labor, in convention here, declared for a boycott of German-made goods "until the German government recognizes the right of the people of Germany to organize into trade unions and ceases its persecution of the Jewish people." J. Nicholas Dans, leader of the textile strike in Connecticut, was elected president of the federation.

'You Bring the Ducks'

An indication of the spirit which prevails among the striking textile workers is seen in a report prepared for The Labor World by the publicity committee of Local 1785, which describes conditions along the picket lines. At the "commissary," the report declares, the menu is "ham and eggs, roast pork, roast beef, hot dogs, chili, hamburger and beef stew." "No credit," says one sign, while another admonishes, "you bring the ducks."

The report follows:

The National Yarn company is getting along just fine. They have a nice clean kitchen and place to stay. The menu hanging on the wall is enough to satisfy anyone: "Ham and eggs, roast pork, roast beef, hot dogs, chili, hamburgers and beef stew." Another sign says "no credit," and "you bring the ducks."

The crowd is jolly and having a grand time.

The places which have donated things for the National are: Standard Coffee company, R. C. Bell Grocery, Tom Algood Grocery, Luther Hames Grocery, Dutch Algood Grocery, Fowler Jackson Service Station, Fred Sims Service Station, O. S. Brown Grocery, Arnold Cash Grocery, Jack's Cookies, R. BAKERY WORKERS SUPPLY BREAD

Local 25, Bakery Workers, and Local 549, Bakery Salesmen, are contributing hundreds of loaves of bread daily to the striking textile workers, it was said Friday. It was suggested that this system at least assures the workers of something to eat, which was difficult to provide in many cases when the strikers were "gainfully employed" in the mills. The Labor World was asked to express appreciation of the action of these loyal trades unionists.

STRIKE OFFICIALS THANK MERCHANTS

Strike officials Friday morning asked The Labor World to express their deep appreciation to merchants in the affected territories for splendid co-operation shown in contributions of foodstuffs and other commodities. Particularly in the Rossville, Chickamauga and East Lake areas, it was said, business people are exhibiting a willingness and even anxiety to assist, and have contributed hundreds of dollars in merchandise to the cause.

Correspondent Argues With Times Editor

Writer Takes Issue With Statements of Morning Paper's Oracle.

An editorial in the Chattanooga Times is subject for comment by a Labor World correspondent this week, who offers his reasons for disagreement with statements of the Times writer, and defends the textile workers in their battle for existence.

Although the Labor World has long been convinced of the futility of reasoning with the "voice of the Times" on any matter pertaining to labor, the communication is logical, and is given space for the interest of our readers. The Times' writer, who used to be a sock mill superintendent, has long ago indicated his blind prejudice and total lack of sympathy with labor's cause

It's a waste of time and energy, but anyhow here's the correspondent's letter:

The Times' editorial writer recently, in commenting on the textile strike, made much ado about the fifth amendment to the constitution of the United States. The fifth amendment provides: "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

The Times' writer very magnanimously admits the right of working people to strike. He even goes further than that and says "the right of strikers to seek, through peacable means, to persuade others to join them in striking may be conceded."

Gorman Says Bosses Planned Reign of Terror

Strike Leader Charges Employers With Responsibility for Lawlessness.

Washington, Sept. 13.—A campaign of terrorism by employers opened the second week of the great national textile strike—a week which saw widespread extension of the walkout to include 85,000 hosiery workers. From all over the strike area, north and south, assaults on strikers were reported.

In addition to national guardsmen on duty in the south, troops were called out in Connecticut, Maine and Rhode Island. The inevitable result was strikers shot, strikers beaten, strikers cut by bayonets in the hands of nervous militiamen.

Employment of armed forces in the strike was scathingly denounced by Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee of the United Textile Workers of America.

Mills Planned Terrorism.

"The mills laid their plans long ago to use force of every kind," Gorman declared. "We knew that and we said they were doing it. They have recruited and armed the most vicious characters they could find. Their work has served as the basis upon which militia has been called out. The United Textile Workers oppose the use of the armed forces of the state against strikers. We have tried and we shall try to carry on in peace. Repeated instructions have

CENTRAL BODY FINALLY ACTS IN BAKERY ROW

Action Follows Year of Patient Effort.

DECLARE MANAGER BLOCKED UNION

Employes, First to Organize, Leave Organization "Under Pressure."

After more than a year of fruitless effort to convince manager Hugh Wasson, of the Colonial bakery, said to be a unit of a national chain, that workers employed in the local plant should be members of the Bakery Workers' International union, the Colonial was declared "unfair to organized labor" by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular session Monday night.

The Colonial has not been regarded as "fair" during the past year, but due to the fact that the more optimistic felt that the management might eventually change its position, no formal action was taken until Monday, when it was unanimously agreed that Wasson had no intentions of recognizing the right of his employes to join an organization and bargain collectively.

Central Body officers recalled that Colonial employes were the first in Chattanooga to form an organization, and signed the application for a charter. After the union was installed, however, these employes were "conspicuous by their absence," and an investigation disclosed the fact that Wasson had informed his employes that if they joined a union he would be forced to install machinery which would result in displacing half of them. Other reports as to Wasson's activities against the organization were never verified, but representatives of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council were unanimous in the conviction that he was entirely responsible for blocking the union so far as his plant is concerned.

"Mr. Wasson is very clever," a representative of Central Body said. "He met us on numerous occasions, always leaving the way open for further conferences, but never giving us anything definite to work on. We have done everything possible to avoid an open break, but that such was inevitable we have been convinced for some time. We do not believe the Colonial management ever meant to deal with their employes in an organized capacity, and had no other recourse but to ask members of organized labor and their friends to consider the bakery 'unfair.'

"We are therefore asking our members and friends, particularly the merchants of Chattanooga, to join us in protesting the attitude of the Colonial, and at the same time to buy bread and cakes produced by men and women whose right to collective bargaining, guaranteed by the laws of the United States, is recognized."

In addition to acquainting local merchants with the situation, the Bakers and Bakery Salesmen's unions this week had printed 15,000 circulars, reading as follows:

"The Colonial bakery has been declared 'unfair' by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. Help the bakers win fair wages and working conditions. Buy bread and cakes produced only by union workers."

CENTRAL BODY HAS AFFIDAVITS TO BACK WALKOUT DEFENSE

Recall Many Months' Efforts to Prevent Break With Local Mill Owners.

Executive Board Points Out Many Discharge Cases and Petty Tyranny Helped to Aggravate Situation — No Mill Picketed Without Request of Employes — Leaves Public to Judge Merits of Unfortunate Controversy—Calls Attention to Half Century of Honorable Activities by Chattanooga's Organized Workers.

"Scores of affidavits" and "hundreds of living witnesses" who will testify as to the "chiseling" and law-breaking of local textile mill operators are offered by the executive board of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council before the court of public opinion as justification for the fact that every textile and hosiery mill in Chattanooga is closed following the nationwide strike call, and a review of the past year or more is made in an appeal to "all working people, union and non-union, as well as the general public," for continued support for the strikers in their struggle to force compliance with the letter and spirit of the codes adopted under supervision and direction of the United States government.

Quoting an editorial from The Labor World of Sept. 22, 1933, as indicating efforts to check discriminations against textile workers in partjcular, the board recalls the following lines:

"All manner of subterfuge is being employed; petty discriminations and intimidations are being practiced through arrogant straw bosses, and petty tyranny is being used against employes guilty of doing what their government has said they may do."

No mill has been picketed under sanction or direction of the strike policy committee unless such picketing was requested by union members within said mill, the statement contends, and intimations that organized labor in this city has condoned violence are answered by the statement that the central labor body of this city has functioned for nearly a half century, is composed of substantial, law-abiding citizens, who are patriotic enough to uphold and defend the laws of the United States government, "whether they relate to industrial and economic conditions or otherwise. Can the textile mill operators say as much?"

None of the textile workers are under federal indictment for law violations, it is pointed out, and "where were the editorial writers who now demand peace when local mill owners were openly and brazenly defying the law of the land as expressed through the National Recovery Act?" it is asked.

"We are behind the textile workers 100 per cent," the statement concludes, "and we leave the issue up to the court of public opinion, sure that our fair-minded neighbors and friends will accord to us, as well as to the strikers, that same fine degree of confidence and support which has marked our efforts in the past to make of Chattanooga a decent place to live and a profitable place for merchants and business people to do business."

It follows:

To the People of Chattanooga:

It has been the purpose of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the textile strike leadership to conduct the present strike in an orderly, peaceful manner, and to refrain from intensifying a long-smoldering sense of injustice by fanning the spark through newspaper statements. However, statements in the public press have become so bold and so far from facts we feel the people should be reminded of certain phases of the struggle which have not been brought out.

To begin with, the battle to enforce compliance with the laws of the land, enacted to save the nation from complete collapse, has been on for more than a year. Open, flagrant and arrogant violations of the law have been the part of the mill owners over this period, and surely every possible recourse has been resorted to by the workers for an orderly and peaceful solution of the questions.

Throughout this period labor officials have been besieged with bitter complaints from employes of practically every local mill, charging discriminations and tyranny. Scores of affidavits and hundreds of living witnesses will testify to the fact that workers have been discharged for affiliation with a union, a right guaranteed them under the law of the land. In every such case we have counseled patience, faith in America and the purpose of the administration to eventually enforce the laws. We believe we have prevented strife and turmoil, and we have not yet lost faith in our conviction that laws should apply to the mill owner as well as to the worker.

An indication that local conditions have not been so serene as pictured by local mill owners is seen in an editorial which appeared in The Labor World of September 22, 1933, a portion of which is here quoted:

> Local employers, displaying the Blue Eagle and shouting from the housetops their patriotism, are "lying awake nights" in an effort to figure out new ways to defeat the purposes of the act, local labor officials charge, and shrewd but unscrupulous attorneys are burning the midnight oil with their plans to earn "fat" salaries from their designing employers by suggesting schemes to circumvent the law.
>
> Employes in many different lines are being discharged, for no other reason than that they have endeavored to take advantage of the provisions of the recovery act which guarantee to workers the right to speak for themselves in the working out of the "new deal." Some employers, it is pointed out, are brazenly open in the plot to defeat the act in this manner, while others are more subtle, and attempt to cover their hypocrisy by assigning various reasons for discharging employes.
>
> Local working men recalled this week that certain mill owners had brazenly stated that "the government could not run their business," and before they would submit to organization in their plants they would close them down. Others, possibly mindful of the Biblical injunction, "Let not thy right hand know what they left hand doeth," are waving an Eagle in one hand and "sticking a knife in the backs of their faithful employes" with the other.
>
> All manner of subterfuge is being employed, it is said; petty discriminations and intimidations are being practiced through arrogant straw bosses, and petty tyranny is being used against employes guilty of doing what their government has said they may do.
> The local compliance board, in a letter to Washington authorities this week, expressed the belief that the Recovery Act has resultd in more workers being discharged here than have been employed by reason of the act. It is believed that conditions are worse in Chattanooga than in other places, but the workers as a rule have been patient under the unfair and unpatriotic tactics of industrial rulers.

An advertisement appearing in the daily press Friday charges violation of the Recovery Act to striking textile workers. Among the signers of this advertisement is a mill whose board of directors, including a justice of the supreme court of Tennessee, are under federal indictment for alleged flagrant violation of the same

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1934

Sympathy of the entire labor movement goes out to Misses Lassie, Kathryn and Virginia Munsey, delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council from the School Teachers' union, in the loss of their mother, Mrs. Cora Lee Munsey, who passed away at her home in Bellebuckle last Sunday afternoon following a long illness.

Miss Lassie Munsey is recording secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and a member of the executive board.

The deceased lady is also survived by one son, Lee A. Munsey, of Bellebuckle, and a grandson, Lee, Junior.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—How was the United Textile Workers of America organized?

A.—In 1896 the National Union of Textile Workers was organized from directly affiliated American Federation of Labor locals. The organization was short lived and soon dissolved into scattering locals affiliated to the federation. These were once more brought together in 1901 in an organization chartered by the A. F. of L. as the United Textile Workers of America. Organization took place at Washington, D. C., Nov. 19, 1901.

Q.—What is the territorial jurisdiction of the United Textile Workers?

A.—North America.

"Pains Gone," Says Lady, After She Had Taken CARDUI
In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Have Done With These Killings

The textile strike should bring laws to prohibit the leasing of governmental powers to either side in industrial disputes. The dead at Honea Path would not then have died in vain.

It makes no difference whether soldiers and police are used openly to break strikes, or whether hired guards are armed with the weapons and authority of the state. The effect in either case is to enlist the powers of state on one side of a controversy, without hearing, argument or evidence.

In practice, this power is always enlisted on one side, that of the employers. This was the case at Honea Path. The mill partisans were made deputies, and with the authority of the state behind them in this manner, they "cut loose." Secretary Perkins wisely says that the deputies probably were afraid, and that fear can make any of us do foolish things. She might have added that the fact that all the fatalities but one were on the strikers' side is strong evidence that some, at least, of the deputies were known gunmen.

American industrial history has plenty of blood on it already; and a preponderance of that blood has been spilled by employers. The Ludlow massacre in the Colorado coal strike, perhaps the most horrible one on record, was perpetrated by gunmen and gangsters hired to break the strike, and enlisted in the state militia to give them more opportunity for killing. The murder of John Barkowski was foreshadowed when a known criminal was released from prison, and made a captain in Mr. Mellon's coal and iron police.

It is time to end such outrages. Strikes are not gentle affairs; but there is no need to precipitate bloodshed by handing to one side of the dispute the guns and authority of the state.

THOUSANDS ATTEND RITES FOR SIX MURDERED PICKETS

Textile Workers in Outdoor Funeral at Honea Path Pay Last Tribute to Martyrs in the Cause for Liberty.

Honea Path, S. C., Sept. 13.—It was a sad assemblage of nearly 10,000 working men and women, most of them striking textile workers from Georgia and North and South Carolina, who came to this small village to pay their final tribute to the six strikers who were murdered in cold blood at the Chiquola mill here when deputy sheriffs and non-union men opened fire on a flying squadron of pickets.

In hundreds of trucks and automobiles the workers came, carrying the Stars and Stripes and the banners of their United Textile Workers locals.

Six Wooden Coffins, Painted Gray.

Six wooden coffins, painted gray, were in a row under a brown tent shaded by the thick foliage of an oak tree in a big field fronting the hill on which stands Chiquola mill and the drag cottages of the mill employes. Here the funeral service was held.

In the coffins lay the bodies of the six murdered mill workers: Lee Crawford, R. T. Yarborough, E. M. Knight, Ira Davis and Claude Cannon, all of Honea Path, and Maxie Peterson, of Greenwood.

Rev. E. E. Lollis, of Honea Path, opened the service with prayer. The choir then sang "In the Sweet Bye and Bye," which brought tears to the families of the dead pickets and to many others.

Rev. James Myers, of New York, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, offered a special "prayer for labor," and called upon all workers "as a Christian duty" to support the cause for which the strike was called.

Deliberate Murder, Googe Says.

George L. Googe, organizer for the American Federation of Labor in the south, speaking as the representative of William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said that "6,000,000 organized workers in America mourn for the victims of this deliberate murder." The vast assemblage raised a sea of hands when Mr. Googe asked them to do so as an expression of their devotion to the principle which underlies the strike.

Struggle Must Go On, Gorman Declares.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the national strike committee, sent a message from Washington, which said:

"We cannot bring back the dead to life, but we can win the struggle in which these soldiers of labor were enlisted.

"To keep alive the memory of our dead brothers, let us all join together in a mighty army of labor consecrated to uplifting all those who toil and dedicated to the task of ending misery, want and oppression.

"The killings at Honea Path will not have been utterly in vain if from these sacrifices we gain new determination to carry on this greatest of all American labor struggles."

Pickets Died to Make Industry Christian.

Rev. Mr. Myers declared the six murdered pickets died to make industry Christian. He said:

"These men need not have died if the employers had realized the right of the workers to organize, the right to which they are entitled as children of God. They died to make industry Christian. They were examples of Christian unselfishness because they joined the union.

"It is a test of Christian unselfishness to join a labor union, a test of wanting to be a servant, which we talk about in our churches. This strike is also a test for the employers, a test of whether or not they are willing to grant the Christian right of organization to these workers, instead of fighting them and killing them at the mill gates.

"Upon the manner in which employers stand up under this test depends the fate of this country in the present crisis. The issue is between Christianity and industrial democracy on the one side and reaction and anarchy on the other."

Labor Leaders Pay Tribute.

Other labor leaders who declared the dead pickets were sacrificed for the textile workers' cause and who exorted the strikers to press onward in the battle in their name included J. A. Frier and Paul Christopher, textile union heads in South and North Carolina, respectively, and L. E. Brookshire, president of the South Carolina Federation of Labor. A message was read from R. R. Lawrence, president of the North Carolina federation.

Bullet-Torn Flag Displayed.

When the addresses were concluded, Mr. Googe held up before the crowd the bullet-torn American flag which was carried by the strikers when they marched to the Chiquola mill on the day of the killing of the six men. The choir sang "Thou Art Gone" and the service was over.

The coffins were mounted on hearses and carried past the mill to burial grounds. More than 3,000 of the crowd who had come on foot formed a parade and marched to the outskirts of the village.

GOTHAM MINISTERS UPHOLD STRIKING TEXTILE WORKERS

New York City.—Prominent New York clergymen championed the textile strike, attacked injustices of the present economic system and demanded that exploitation of the workers be ended, in sermons on the nation-wide textile strike.

One of the most outspoken ministers was the Rev. Leon Rosser Land, who said at the Community church:

"In the heroic struggle that the textile workers are now carrying on to better conditions of thousands who are earning less than $12 a week there will unfortunately be sporadic violence; and how shocking this will seem to the employers! Yet they have not been shocked by the system of exploitation under which silent, toiling masses have suffered virtual slavery and starvation, causing the deaths of thousands.

"Let every liberty-loving American resolve to rid this land of an economic system that is not only unsound but unethical, making it increasingly difficult for its citizens to live decent, useful lives."

The Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of Christ church, said:

"The government may give people something to live on, but no mere system of doles can give them something to live for. Take away this confidence in the future and society runs down as does a watch with a weakened mainspring. It is this widespread sense of insecurity about tomorrow which impresses one as he travels over the country. Uncertainty about the future makes instability in the present.

"It is the church's business to cry out when it sees a so-called 'rugged individualism taking away the living of the masses in order to increase the luxuries of the few."

The Rev. Philip Cowell Jones, associate minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, said:

"The pathetic figures of today are the slavish devotees of an outgrown yesterday. Some decry 'planned economy who have already planned their own economy and want to continue to do so. They really want a plan in which they are free to plan without reference to the common weal. Besides insecurity for multitudes has persisted through the centuries they think it is inevitable. They ought to know by now that poverty for multitudes will not be endured."

Sloan Bars Textile Strike Arbitration Proposed by Gorman

Strike Chief Ridicules Claim That Code Authority Does Not Have Authority to Speak for Its Members.

Washington, Sept. 13.—George A. Sloan, chairman of the American Cotton Textile institute, headquarters in New York City, informed President Roosevelt's board of inquiry for the textile industry that he rejected unequivocally the proposal for the arbitration of the issues involved in the textile strike made by Francis J. Gorman, head of the general strike committee of the United Textile Workers of America. The action of Mr. Sloan was received with great disappointment by the president's board.

Mr. Sloan's major objection to the arbitration proposal was his claim that the textile institute does not have the authority to pledge the textile manufacturers to abide by the arbitration decision made by the president's board, and that the United Textile Workers does not have authority to speak for the textile workers. Speaking on behalf of the general strike committee, Mr. Gorman pointed out that Mr. Sloan had had authority to pledge the manufacturers on June 2 to accept the proposal of Gen. Johnson, NRA administrator, for averting a textile strike at that time. He saw no reason, he said, why Mr. Sloan could not now have the same authority.

Mr. Gorman's statement follows:

"First, our proposal is sincere. We are not in the habit of making insincere proposals. The United Textile Workers stand by our proposal that the mediation board named by the president be constituted an arbitration board.

Ample Authority on Both Sides.

"Mr. Sloan has much to say about lack of authority on both sides. We have the authority and we have demonstrated it by the closing of the mills. The workers will accept and abide by an arbitration award handed down by the board presided over by Gov. Winant. Mr. Sloan seems to have sufficient authority now to state the employers' case. But, much more important than that, he had all the authority necessary to pledge the employers to agree to accept the Gen. Johnson agreement of June 2.

"I believe the Winant board should summon Mr. Sloan and demand from him that he act in his capacity as head of the Cotton Textile institute. The strike chairman can speak for the textile workers. The board, I believe, should summon the heads of the employers in wool and worsted, silk and other divisions of the industry.

Human Lives Are at Stake.

"We have proposed arbitration under fair conditions. We feel they are the only conditions that can make arbitration successful. Mr. Sloan, by his statement, speaking for the industry, shows that he possesses authority to act, as of course he does. It is no time for shadow-boxing behind a pretense of lack of authority. Human lives are at stake, with roving bands of hired thugs armed by mill owners.

"We are sincere about our proposal. We are so sincere that we have timed that offer to expire at 6 o'clock Monday night, Sept. 10. If it is accepted there will be peace.

"Mr. Sloan speaks of elections. We are ready for them at any time.

Strike Front Widens.

"Meanwhile the strike is on and the strike goes on. The front widens every hour. We are not indulging in debate with Mr. Sloan. We are on strike for the righting of great and unbearable wrongs. All the hired thugs that can be mustered by mill management will not break our ranks. The strike goes on.

Strong Enough to Propose Peace.

"We have shown the way to peace and we mean every word of our proposal. We are strong enough to propose the ways of peace, which we prefer at all times. But because we are strong we shall go on with the strike if the employers reject peace. The half million who have left the mills will not go back until they go back on terms that meet the issues that caused the strike.

Mills Have Been Turned Into Slave Pens.

"Men and women are not striking out of whim. They are engaged in a great conflict to wipe out of the mills abuses that have made slave pens. We strike goes on and we mean that just as sincerely as we mean that arbitration is available to the employers if they can drop their cloak of arrogance and act like American citizens."

Connecticut Socialists Name Jasper Levy for Governor

Bridgeport, Conn.—Jasper McLevy, unionist roofer and socialist mayor of Bridgeport, has been nominated for governor by the socialist party of Connecticut, which met here in state convention. McLevy, who has long been prominent in the Connecticut labor movement, was also the socialist party's candidate two years ago. The socialist state platform includes demands for a 30-hour week with no pay reduction, collective bargaining for industrial workers and farmers, a reduction in mortgage rates, state civil service, abolition of child labor, socialized banking without private profit and a state income tax on incomes over $5,000 a year.

Some men are so constituted that they can pull a dirty trick in the morning and buy rose bushes in the afternoon.

act which they now so valiantly defend. We wonder if Mr. Justice Chambliss would approve the admission of testimony before his court by persons under federal indictment for violation of the law of the land?

Time does not permit a thorough analysis of the statement of the textile mill owners, but we desire to make this comment:

No single mill has been picketed under authority of the strike committee unless requested by employes in said mill.

No single one of the textile workers is under indictment for violation of the Recovery Act.

Where were the editorial writers who now so patriotically demand peace when local mill owners were openly and brazenly defying the government of the United States to enforce the Recovery Act, and who now so loudly protest their love for law and order? Why were the editorial columns of our daily papers not used to force these lip-service patriots to join their fellow-Americans in leading our beloved country out of the depths of despair?

To charge Chattanooga's organized workers with condoning violence is to belie a record of nearly a half-century of honorable and fair dealing with many employers. Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and its forty-two affiliated craft unions are composed of substantial, law-abiding citizens, patriotic enough to uphold and defend the laws of the United States government, whether they relate to industrial and economic conditions or otherwise. Can the textile mill operators say as much?

We are behind the textile workers 100 per cent, and we leave the issue up to the court of public opinion, sure that our fair-minded neighbors and friends will accord to us, as well as to the strikers, that same fine degree of confidence and support which has marked our efforts in the past to make of Chattanooga a decent place to live and a profitable place for merchants and others to do business.

MORE ABOUT TIMES

But what he gets all hot and bothered is the fact that the strikers, through picketing, are preventing other workmen from taking their jobs, and possibly in some instances have prevented mill officials entering or leaving the mills. He gets very indignant over the fact that the union strikers have brought out non-union strikers with them and wants to know "what has the government done to protect them in their constitutional right to earn a living?"

The same question could very well be asked in regard to all working people: "What has the government done to protect working people, against unscrupulous employers, in their constitutional right to earn a living?" The NRA is the answer to that question, but the NRA has had too much outside influence, consequently the NRA has not been permitted to accomplish all its purpose.

The writer says that the fact that the workers have been taken advantage of "in some instances" does not justify "dealing a blow to the whole community, state, country . . . sweeping aside constitutional guarantees as to individual liberty and rights in property."

He evidently does not take into consideration the fact that the workers have the right of life itself in the factories in which they work. Unscrupulous bosses, in paying low wages and overloading the workers, come just about as near as possible to depriving the workers of their lives. When a worker attempts to raise a family on the low wages that prevail in mill and factory towns the ultimate result is malnutrition and shortening of life.

Does not that give the worker the right of life itself in his job, which in turn is the factory in which he works?

Newspaper accounts (and newspapers are usually very reluctant to admit any truth in labor matters) give the average wage of textile workers as $10.80 a week. In any large group of workers when the average wage is quite low the predominating wage must be considerably lower.

If a mill owner decided to repair or remodel his mill or has a surplus on hand, he closes up and thereby deprives his employes of their right to earn a living. Of course, the employes' jobs are still there, but because of some whim of their boss they are not permitted to work. In such event as that the bosses, in order to appear generous, would be the first ones to say that the jobs belong to the employes.

But when the employes decide that their jobs need repairing or remodeling, through betterment of working conditions, the Times says they are violating the fifth amendment by refusing to allow others to work on the jobs which belong to them.

Statistics show there are over ten million people unemployed in the United States. If the half million textile workers do not fight for their jobs isn't it likely that another group of a half million could be recruited to take their place?

These half million people are out on strike because they want better working and better living conditions. If they calmly step aside others may take their place; but, because they have the right of life itself in their jobs they are not going to permit others to step in and take their jobs while those jobs are being repaired, without protest.

In attempting to dissuade others from going to work in the factories they are picketing they are merely protecting that which belongs to them—their jobs.

It is unfortunate that the repairing and remodeling of the textile jobs could not have been accomplished by some less vigorous method. But it must be remembered that for over a year the textile workers have been trying, through conciliation and mediation, to gain better working and living conditions for themselves, with no success. The strike is the only weapon with which they can fight. Union workers resort to the strike only when conciliation and mediation fail.

If they strike and make no attempt to protect their jobs while on strike, the effectiveness of their strike is lost and they no longer have a weapon with which to fight.

Anyhow, I don't agree with the Times editorial writer when he says the strikers are violating the fifth amendment to the constitution when they refuse to allow others to work upon the jobs when they (the strikers) have the right of life itself in those jobs.

FORMER UNION HEAD DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Pittsburg.—John Williams, former assistant secretary, secretary-treasurer and international president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, died in a hospital at Oakland, Cal., on Sept. 2. He is survived by his wife, who lives in Oakland.

Williams attended his first convention of the Amalgamated Association in 1894 at Cleveland, Ohio. In 1897, on the death of Secretary-Treasurer John C. Kilgallon, the international executive board appointed him assistant secretary to take the place of Steve Madden, who moved up to fill the office of secretary-treasurer. In 1898 he was elected to the office of secretary-treasurer at the Cincinnati convention, and held that office until 1911 when he was selected as international president upon the resignation of President McArdle. He was international president until 1919 when he accepted the position of labor conciliator with the Pacific Coast Steel. In 1929 he was appointed federal mediator on the railway mediation board.

MORE ABOUT GORMAN

been issued and our strike organization is built from the ground up to preserve pease. The use of the armed forces of the state is not needed in any sense or for any reason and we protest against it. It is worth noting that the governor of Maine called out his militia the moment he knew he was re-elected. Let he say there will be more elections and we shall not need to be told how to vote.

"After many days of study, a group of public-spirited citizens in Washington has completed plans for a relief program over the whole strike area and will recommend the setting up of local relief committees in every textile community. This will be a challenge to those employers who believe they can starve the workers into submission.

"The heroism of our people is magnificent. I have had telegrams all morning reporting more mills closed, more men and women on strike. The program moves along as planned. This strike cannot be shot out of existence, because it is based upon grievances that will have to be remedied before men and women can return to work."

A. F. of L. Acts to Aid.

Plans for the calling of a national conference of national and international union officers have been altered so as to throw into the textile strike immediately the largest possible volume of support, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, announced.

"I have communicated with a number of national and international union officials," said President Green, "and I have sufficient pledges of organizers and money to meet the present needs of the striking United Textile Workers of America.

"I have found that many officials of unions are about to start for San Francisco, where conventions of the departments of the American Federation of Labor will soon begin. However much they would like to, they cannot change their plans. As a consequence, it has been decided to reach a number of organizations immediately by telephone and in individual conferences in Washington where possible.

"I am most anxious that all possible strength be placed at the disposal of the United Textile Workers immediately and after conference with the strike leaders here it has been decided to follow the course calculated to produce the most immediate results. Pursuant to this plan new organizers are already reporting to division headquarters in the strike fields and checks are in the mail.

Conference Not Abandoned.

"The national conference itself has not been abandoned. It will be held in San Francisco instead, as a special order of business at the opening of our convention. There is no doubt about the action that will be taken then. I have had reports from Chairman Gorman, of the national strike committee, and I find that the strike lines are holding magnificently, showing a determination and a courage that cannot be beaten by any employer devices.

"I am calling upon all national and international unions, upon all state federations of labor and upon all central bodies and trades councils to lend all possible assistance to the United Textile Workers at once, in advance of the San Francisco meeting. This struggle is of such immense importance that all organized labor must do everything possible to assist in now eliminating the abuses in the nation's textile mills out of which this tremendous protest has grown.

Struggle Must Be Won.

"I know what our trade union movement will do. Already it has done enough to make that clear. The United Textile Workers will not lack support from every part of our great movement. The struggle, basically, is one for human freedom and it must be won.

"For this movement the vital thing is that all national and international unions send their organizers into the textile strike situation under the direction of the United Textile Workers and that local bodies do likewise in every case where men are available. A half million men and women are on strike and there is work to be done at once. I congratulate the men and women who today are standing their ground, holding the lines even in the face of machine guns and bayonets. Their discipline is magnificent and their courage in many cases approaches the sublime. This strike will be won."

Mill Conditions Forced Strike.

Outlining the story of the strike in a radio address, Chairman Gorman said:

"I earnestly want the nature of this strike understood. Mill conditions grew so steadily and grievously worse that all over the land our people united in a demand for remedial action. Upon demand of our local unions a special convention of the United Textile Workers was called. It was held on Aug. 13. In that convention there were more than 500 delegates, all elected by their local unions. They came to the convention definitely instructed by their local unions. With only nine votes cast in opposition, that great convention, under orders from the workers in the mills, ordered this strike and ordered the officers to carry it through to victory.

"Negotiations had failed. Mill management had discharged our members by the thousands for joining the union. Unemployment had grown to the greatest figure since the industry went under the code. Wages had fallen to an average of less than $10 a week. Output per worker had grown, so that with minimum employment there was the same old volume of output there had been when employment was relatively high. The stretch-out had done that. It had increased the work-load per worker as his as 400 per cent and in many cases more than that. You can get a picture of what that means if you will imagine yourself compelled to do four times your normal amount of work every day. The Cotton Textile institute tells you the stretch-out is a myth.

Stretch-Out Causes Insanity.

"'Our reason for going on strike was because of the stretch-out. We were operating six looms of plain construction, with a wage of approximately $15. They asked us to accept a reduction from $1.20 per hundred thousand picks to 87 cents and operate eight looms. The warps at that time were so bad that the next girl to me had a nervous breakdown and lost her mind. She had been an employe of the company for twenty years.'

"Hundreds upon hundreds of such stories have come to us. They tell the pitiful story of a fine body of men and women being beaten into degradation. Minds and bodies have given way under the terrific strain of the stretch-out. It is well enough to say from a New York office that the stretch-out doesn't exist. But from the men and women of the mills there comes another story. In the mills they know.

Workers Voice Winning Spirit.

"I wish I could read to all of you the hundreds of letters and telegrams that come to strike headquarters each day. They combine the cry of an exploited people with the determination that brings victory to those whose sole weapon is their courage, their unbeatable, indomitable determination that injustice shall cease and that the men and women who are to grow up from the childhood of today shall know a better way of life.

"Now let me turn to some facts about the way the mills have fared. They have talked about their poverty. Their newspaper apologists have pleaded for them. Let me give you som figures, not compiled by the United Textile Workers, but taken from the same kind of records and reports that are used by Wall Street. Let me cite first a single company.

"The Pepperell Mill company began business in 1845, was incorporated in 1899, and then paid 12 per cent dividends up to 1915. From 1916 to 1920 it paid an annual dividend of 8 per cent, with extra dividends of from 6 per cent to 10 per cent. From 1921 to 1930 the dividends were 8 per cent. At no time have the dividends gone under 3 per cent per year. The employes in all its mills, scattered from Biddeford and Lewiston, Me., to Fall River, Mass., and then in the south to Lindale, Ga., and Opelika, Ala. Its pay roll numbers about 10,000 employes. Its surplus on June 30, 1933, amounted to $8,191,091.

"The capital stock of this company was boosted in 1926 from $7,668,000 to $11,000,000, of which $10,000,000 has been issued and is outstanding.

"The dividends paid on this watered stock, at the rates given by Moody's manual of industrials, amounted to $932,800 in the years from 1926 to 1930, and during the depression years of 1931 to 1933 have amounted to $268,180; or a total of dividends on watered stock since 1926 of $1,200,980.

"It is true that this amount of over a million dollars, which went as excess dividends to a few people, would have amounted to only $120 to each of the 10,000 employes of the company. But that $120 difference would probably have meant the difference of life and death for some of the babies in those mill company families.

Workers Not Out of "Red."

"The cotton textile companies are not out of the red. The cotton textile workers are not. Their wages still do not cover the overhead cost of living, that goes on whether or not the worker is 'in operation.' The companies have been up over the front-line since the first half of 1933, according to figures dug out of the companies' own financial statements. 1934 shows further gains.

"A rise in 1933 of $33,504,719 over 1932 was registered by the operating profits or net profits of forty-two companies, owning 154 cotton spinning and weaving mills and employing well over 100,000 workers. Every company on record showed improvement, even though there was included, along with the new deal months of 1933, the very low first quarter of 1933, and in some cases parts of 1932. Some of the companies calculated that they made profits in 1932—others made losses. Adding the forty-two companies together, they made a $9,265,050 loss in 1932 and changed this to a $24,138,669 profit in 1933.

Profits Still Gain.

Reports later than Dec. 31, 1933, are available from four of these companies, and one other. They show a rise of 1,485,970 over the profit of $2,037,582 which they showed in the six months ended June 30, 1933 (twelve months, for two companies). Included in this total is a decline of $233,819 for the first half of 1934, compared with the first half of 1933, in a company whose profit rose $200,000 in the full year 1933 over the $66,667 it made in 1932.

"Along with these figures we have thousands of the pay envelopes of the workers—pitiful envelopes in which there was passed to the men and women now on strike an average of less than $10 each per week for their toil and their artistry in making the cloth of the nation."

SILK MILLS LOSES BLUE EAGLE.

Washington.—The NRA has ordered the Atmore Silk Mills, Inc., Atmore, Ala., to surrender its Blue Eagle to the local postmaster. The compliance council has found that the firm violated the minimum wage provisions of the throwing industry code.

30,000 New Members For Catering Workers

More Than 200 New Charters Issued in Last Year and Half, Convention Told — Flore and Hesketh Re-elected.

Cincinnati.—The Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance convention held at Minneapolis during August was one full of action and can be termed progressive. The report of General Secretary Bob Hesketh showed an increase of more than 30,000 new members in the past year and a half, with some 225 new charters issued, and the growth still continues.

President Edward Flore and General Secretary Hesketh were re-elected unanimously.

Vice-President C. T. Frederick, of Portland, Ore., retired, and was succeeded by George B. McLane, of Chicago. The general executive board elected are: J. M. Osborn, Denver, Colo.; William Lehman, New York City; Hugo Ernest, San Francisco; Thomas L. Farrell, Cleveland, O.; John J. Kearney, Boston, Mass.; Leslie Linton, Minneapolis, Minn.; Kitty Amsler, St. Louis, Mo. and George [illegible] McLane, Chicago.

The convention voted $1,000 to [illegible] the striking teamsters of Minneapolis and within the week the teamsters' trouble was settled satisfactorily.

SMALL GAIN REPORTED IN N. Y. FACTORY JO[illegible]

Albany, N. Y.—The number of wage-earners in New York state factories increased 0.7 per cent from the middle of July to the middle of August, Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews reported.

Index numbers of factory employment and payrolls, based on the average for the three years 1925-1927 as 100, were 70.2 and 56.7, respectively, in August. This represents a net gain of 6.8 per cent in employment and 11.2 per cent in payrolls over the same month a year ago, when workers were being rapidly rehired in the initial stages of the recovery program.

Customer (to barber)—You ask 25 cents for a haircut while your competitor asks only 35 cents.

Barber—Well, you see, a good barber cuts hair, while a poor barber cuts prices.

VICIOUS CAMPAIGN MAKES SOLIDARITY OF STRIKERS SECURE

Misrepresentations and False Propaganda Cement Ranks of Workers.

Stand Like Stone Wall in Face of Bitter and Unfair Publicity---Committee Cites Cases of Discrimination and Intimidation and Appeals for Public Support.

Despite what is declared to be the most vicious campaign of misrepresentation and propaganda ever experienced by Chattanooga workers, led by the daily newspapers against the striking textile workers, some 10,000 to 12,000 of whom left their jobs three weeks ago in an effort to check intimidations, coercion and general mistreatment, to force local textile barons to observe the laws of the United States government and to pay American wage scales, the ranks of the strikers are absolutely unbroken, and the misrepresentations have served only to solidify the strike forces and to make them more determined than ever that they will win.

Reports from that great "impartial" news-gathering agency, the Associated Press, lead the public to believe that the mills in other sections are opening up with full forces, but union reports indicate that the few who have attempted to operate are running on skeleton forces. Use of state troops, particularly in Georgia, is rebounding to the benefit of the strikers, as workers who left their jobs are refusing to go back "under the bayonet," it is reported.

The local situation was described Friday morning by strike leaders as "absolutely satisfactory," and that the abominable campaign of misrepresentation is doomed to the fate which it deserves was was freely predicted.

The strike committee Friday morning released the following statement for publication:

To the People of Chattanooga:

Since the beginning of the present deplorable textile strike a campaign of misrepresentation and inspired propaganda has been carried on to an extent which is unworthy of Chattanoogans and Tennesseans in an attempt to discredit employes of the local mills who walked out almost unanimously in protest against accumulating discriminations, steadily decreasing wages and increasing "work loads," which in many cases reached a point which was absolutely unbearable.

Before the advent of the NRA codes conditions in most mills were bad, but after the codes went into effect, instead of betterring conditions, they became steadily worse from every standpoint. Weekly incomes, already low, have been reduced to a point where in many cases the company commissaries have taken the entire earnings of whole families. Tasks have been increased, and workers who have spent years in the mills have been transferred to the "learners class" in order to avoid paying the low code wage.

That the general public may have some idea of the reasons why some 10,000 textile workers in Chattanooga are now on strike, we present the following facts, instances, taken at random, which are backed by documentary evidence and affidavits. These are from different mills, practically every local institution being involved:

A Few Pay Envelopes.

Twenty-four hours, $7.20; deductions, $7.20; balance due, 000.

Twenty-four hours, $7.68; deductions, $7.50; balance due, 18c.

Thirty-two hours, $4.80. (This is a skilled worker, reduced to the status of a "learner" in order to meet the code.)

Thirty-two hours, $7.20; deductions, $7.20; balance due, 000.

These are pores of similar pay schedules in possession of this committee and it is reliably reported that one female employe of a local mill is in possession of all of the pay envelopes covering a period of two years, during which time she has not drawn a single dollar in cash.

Other earnings for full week ending: $6.55; $4.36; $6.19; $5.32; $6.75; $7.27; $7.48.

On July 27, 1934, one local mill posted a notice which contained the following: "Under the new setup all straight-time employes in the mill are eliminated, and each one will have to work on a much reduced hourly basis."

This same mill also posted a bulletin urging employes in need of medical service to apply to the city clinic for same.

One employe makes affidavit that he had worked in a mill for many years; that before the code he earned $16.80 per week; that he was reduced to $13.00 per week and his machine was speeded up 18 per cent. When he protested against increased task and lowered wage, the management informed him they "did not care how low wages are, so we can make money."

One entire department of a mill was worked at "sub-standard" rates for three months. The code minimum is $12.00 per week; "sub-standard" workers receive $9.60.

Many experienced workers have been laid off and rehired as sub-standard workers.

Boarders in one mill were required to complete 138 dozen instead of 90 dozen per day, as formerly, and wages were cut.

Before code, workers were required to produce 14 to 16 dozen pairs per day of ten hours; after code, task was raised to 16 to 18 dozen in eight hours.

For loopers, task before code was 30 dozen, at 8 cents, ten hours; after code, 37 dozen at 6½ cents, eight hours.

If a task is not completed in eight hours, worker is credited with as many hours only as the foreman desires; in other words, although eight hours have been worked, worker may receive credit for six only.

Deductions are made for "seconds" without worker having seen them.

Discriminations and Intimidations.

Following statements are picked at random from a huge stack of affidavits made during the past year by workers from various local mills:

Two girls in a commissary were laid off because they showed their union cards to inspector.

One looper worked three hours for a total of 50 cents.

Operator told if he bought all his groceries from company commissary he would be given employment.

One woman was discharged because she appeared before the Vice-Pres. Peel Runs Afoul 'Tin Soldiers' In His Home State

Official Threatened With High Crimes and Misdemeanors in S. Carolina.

Local friends of John Peel, recently elected third vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, who know him as the fine, upstanding, patriotic American citizen which he is, will get a kick out of the following news item from Greenville, S. C., detailing an incident where Mr. Peel was called before one Colonel Withington (probably a $10-per-week clerk decorated with the title specially for the occasion), and threatened with murder, inciting riot and rebellion unless he took orders from the militiamen. An interesting feature of the item, which will make it even more clear to local trades unionists, is the statement that the doughty colonel was accompanied by the owner of the two daily newspapers in Greenville. Read it and weep:

Methods being used by militia leaders and armed forces in southern mill centers to threaten and intimidate striking workers are illustrated in the action here of Colonel Withington, a militia leader, in dealing with strike leaders.

John Peel, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, was ordered to select "a representative citizen" and appear before Withington. On the arrival of Peel, he found Withington in company with Roger C. Peace, owner of the two Greenville daily newspapers, and eight of his militia majors.

Withington ordered Peel to stop all flying squadrons. He said the mills had machine guns and armed strike breakers, and that flying squadrons meant bloodshed. Peel was informed he would be charged with murder, and likewise with inciting riot, insurrection and rebellion.

Davenport Worker Called by Death

Rufus Parker, aged 33, member of Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers and employe of the Davenport Hosiery mills, died Wednesday afternoon at a local hospital, following a short illness. Funeral services were held Friday. Mr. Parker is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lois Parker; one daughter, Dolores Parker; two sisters, Mrs. Robbie Forrester and Mrs. Mae Pendergrass.

Sympathy of the entire labor movement is extended the bereaved relatives of Mr. Parker.

VOLUNTEER PICKETS DEMAND THEIR TURN

From down in Covington, Ga., a little mill town 37 miles from Atlanta, comes this report to the strike committee of the United Textile Workers:

"We had a 100 per cent walkout on Monday morning. The mill tried to run again in the evening, but the attempt was a complete failure. I am proud of the members of our local, who stood so solidly behind the strike and what it stands for.

"Brother Gorman, in view of the fact the Postal here did not open until 9 a.m., we were late in reporting, but don't you think we are entitled to a banner for our local for a complete shutdown? Of course, we would be proud to receive a large banner, but if we are not entitled to it, we would be proud of a small honor banner. Remember, not a wheel turned in the Covington mill after the strike order was effective.

"We have our organized picket squads, but others, to show their loyalty, want to picket, too; and we have a hard time persuading the regular pickets to take a shift off and let some of the others go on duty. We have not used a single female picket; the men wouldn't let them."

Father—That young man friend of yours stays very late. Doesn't he know how to say good-night?

Daughter—Oh yes, Daddy dear; better than any other boy I ever met.

COLONIAL ASKS INTERVENTION OF LABOR BOARD

Wasson Doesn't Like Being on "Unfair List."

CHARGES WORKERS WITH "VIOLENCE"

Salesmen Tell Merchants Bakery Company Has "Signed Up."

Hugh Wasson, manager of the local Colonial bakery plant, appealed this week to the regional labor board in Atlanta, asking a hearing on the question of whether the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council was within its rights in placing the Colonial on the "unfair list."

Wasson's attitude toward organized labor is made plain in his appeal, when he declares that the union representatives "are calling on grocers, threatening the grocer with picketing their stores and other usual propaganda and violence, thus intimidating the grocer to the point where he is afraid to purchase Colonial bread."

Hearing of the case was set by the board for Friday, but on application of Central Body officials has been postponed indefinitely.

The story of experience of organized labor with the local Colonial management is familiar. It will be remembered that Wasson's employes were the first in in this city to seek a charter for a bakery union, paying their application fee, but upon return of the charter no single one reported at the union hall. Investigation disclosed that he Colonial management had sponsored a picnic, or "fish fry" or something on the day the workers were supposed to complete the formation of the local, and later developments brought out the fact that Wasson had informed the employes that if they joined a union he would be forced to install machinery which would displace more than half of them. A leader in the union movement was proffered a title of assistant superintendent, with no increase in salary, however, on the condition that he withdraw from the organization. Every possible effort was made by local Central Body officials to convince Wasson that organization of his workers would be beneficial to his business as well as to the workers, but the labor representatives were "stalled" from time to time, until the period of negotiation covered approximately a year.

Despairing of getting any action out of the management, labor representatives turned their attention wholly to building up the bakers' union in other local bakeries, and the Colonial, at last meeting of Central Body, was formally declared "unfair to organized labor."

Representatives of the company began immediately to try to convince local merchants that there was "some mistake" about the affair, and one report had it that salesmen for the bakery were telling former customers that the Colonial had "just signed up," etc., etc.

Local business people are cooperating splendidly, as usual, with organized labor in spreading the publicity about the status of the Colonial, and union officials were confident the labor board will give them a "clean bill" in their action with regard to the non-union outfit.

Athens, Greece. — Well-established trade unions of Greece and the unorganised wage-earners strongly opposed efforts of the government to establish a central bank for all labor union insurance funds, and thus do away with the small banks run by individual unions.

Crane Employes Awaiting Action By Management

Union Officials Hope for Early End of Dispute Which Closed Big Plant.

Local union officials were hopeful this week for an early settlement of the difficulty which closed the huge plant of the Crane Enamelware company when organized employes walked out last Sunday night to enforce an agreement respecting working conditions in the plant.

The initiative was taken by employes of the enameling department, who are 100 per cent organized, and these workers were joined by union employes in other departments, including molders, boilermakers, machinists, electricians and other crafts.

Negotiations were said to be in progress for an adjustment of the differences, which involve several hundred workers in the various crafts.

Insurance Agents Form Local Union; To Name Officers

The United Association of Insurance Agents, "supporting all unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor," is the latest union to be organized in Chattanooga, and according to reports, the new local is scheduled for a successful career among the family of Chattanooga unions.

The local was chartered by the national association on Sept. 6, and has had a constant growth since, according to those active in its formation.

Although not affiliated as yet with the American Federation, the parent body is declared to number nineteen locals in various cities, and is "growing like wildfire."

The organization meets each Friday night at 8, at Roosevelt hall. Officers will be elected at tonight's meeting, and the new local will affiliate with Central Body as a fraternal branch, and is expected to name delegates to act in such a representative capacity.

Daniel's Repairs Shoes for Strikers

Hundreds of pairs of shoes have been repaired by Daniel's Shoe Repair shop, East Seventh street, on application of local labor officials, the only requirement being presentation of a textile union card and an order from Central Body officers.

D. W. Bernstein, operator of Daniel's, announced Thursday that the system of free service to strikers will be continued as long as the strike lasts, and no prices will be advanced to make up for the free work to unionists.

Men, women and children have benefited from the courtesy of the Daniel's shop, and trade unionists generally will appreciate this substantial expression of sympathy with labor's cause.

Monday's Boxing Card Complete

The boxing card for the Rossville arena Monday night was announced Thursday afternoon complete, as follows:

Carl Knowles, 176, Rome, Ga., vs. Jack Denning, 172, Savannah, Ga. Ten rounds.

Loree Wilson, 183, Savannah, Ga., vs. "Wild" Bill McCall, 185, Rossville. Eight rounds.

George Morgan, 117, Round Mountain, Ala., vs. Frank Parten, 118, Rossville. Four rounds.

Cornbread Griffin, 123, Rossville, vs. Carl Gann, 126, Rossville. Four rounds.

Pete Rounder, 126, Rossville, vs. Ed Bowman, 128, Rossville. Four rounds.

Place: Rossville Arena.

Time of first bout: 8:15 o'clock, Monday night.

Referee: Johnny Walker.

The boxing and wrestling bouts at the Rossville arena are drawing large crowds and a crowd of more than 3,000 is expected Monday night.

HOME-STORE BOYS 'BLUE, DISSATISFIED' SAYS W. A. ARMOUR

Victim of Roy McDonald's Labor-Hating Policies Tells "Family Secrets."

District Manager Declared Textile Strikers Would Be "Starved Out in Few Weeks"---Big Chief Threatens to Go Back to Farm—Stores Being Picketed.

"Nothing to worry about, Bill. They will all starve out in a few weeks and will be glad to go back to work."

Above was the answer to a "Home Store" manager who complained to a district manager that he was worried about the textile strike, according to W. A. Armour, former manager of the East Lake unit of Roy McDonald's chain, who was allegedly discharged for giving the strikers a pound of coffee, paid for out of Mr. Armour's own pocket.

A few weeks have passed, and no striker has been "starved." As a matter of fact, it is reported from several sources that strikers are eating more regularly and more substantially than was the case before they walked out. On the other hand, McDonald has probably added a few extra minutes on his "worry hour," as pickets continue to patrol the vicinity of his stores, informing all and sundry that the grocer, baker, dairyman, druggist, restaurateur, tire dealer, printer, publisher and self-styled "individualist" has been declared unfair to organized labor, and that he discharged a store manager for giving a pound of coffee to the strikers.

Mr. Armour talked interestingly to a representative of The Labor World last Saturday concerning the case.

"I was discharged from the Home Stores' employ without a minute's notice last Tuesday morning, for no other reason that I can account for but helping striking laboring people of East Lake. I admit I gave the picket boys a pound of coffee and some sausage, but paid for it out of my own pocket. If I had a business of my own I would give them ten times as much.

"Speaking about the so-called Free Press. Of course it is free to the public, but who pays for it? The store managers. Roy McDonald was supposed to have sold the stock of groceries to each manager. Then our troubles started again. Home Store managers were all blue and dissatisfied. Fifty per cent of my customers told me they were through with the Home Stores.

"Now comes the textile strike. Union people cannot trade at Home Stores. Home Stores have some really good managers. If it had not been for the managers, Home Stores could not have existed. I know that to be a fact, for that is all I have heard since the Free Press started. People have been trading with the managers and clerks, and not with McDonald. I have served eight years except for a very short time.

"Just a few days after the strike began District Manager Vaughn was at my store. I asked him about the strike situation and told him I was worried about it. 'Nothing to worry about, Bill,' he replied, 'they will all starve out in a few weeks, and will be glad to go back to work.'

"I had a talk with Roy McDonald at the Terminal station Thursday morning. He spoke friendly enough, but, like me, seemed worried. I told him, 'You put me out without a minute's notice, and it has made me a nervous wreck.' He replied, 'How about me? I'm the one who should be a nervous wreck.' I further said, 'Roy, this is a critical time for you; had you thought about it?' He replied, 'Bill, this is a critical time for everybody, but I guess I can go back to the farm.' I said, 'You are no better to work than I am. You gave me a dirty deal. I'll be seeing you.'

"Roy McDonald says he is an individualist. Mr. Home Store Manager, he has you in the palm of his hand, and is tightening up little by little. He will finally squeeze you to death financially. He cares nothing for laboring people.

"I understand McDonald is circulating the report that he fired me for crediting. If this is true, I'm sure he would have to fire at least 50 per cent of his managers. I have checked his store ten times over the amount I have checked short, and if I have been fired for crediting, why did he call me to meet him in town and offer me a position back, on Thursday morning, after it happened on Tuesday.

"I will have more to say later."

Mill Owners, Beaten, Charge 'Intimidation'

Charges of intimidation, inspired violence and organized bands of lawless workers flowed out of the New York headquarters of the mill owners, in charge of George A. Sloan, as the strike first became effective. The mill owners denied at first that the strike was effective; when they could no longer deny it, they charged that workers anxious to continue in the mills were being "intimidated" by bands of lawless men roving through textile areas.

Said George A. Sloan: "The strikers are setting up an invisible super-government imperiling life, liberty and property, and the security of the streets and the freedom of the average man and woman to go about their daily occupations without fear."

Said Francis J. Gorman: "The manufacturers and reactionary public officials are responsible for the violence that has taken ten lives. We will police the industry and do it without harming a single person. And we will see to it that those public officials who have been guilty of killings, and whose acts are inciting violence, are kept within bounds of control."

Ladies' Garment Workers Win Strike in Montreal

Montreal, Canada.—Two thousand members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union here won their strike in an agreement with employers which calls for wage increases of 10 per cent to those paid by the week and 20 per cent to piece workers. In addition the workers will now have a 48-hour week and time and a half for overtime with a maximum overtime of six hours a week. There are still 1,000 members of the union on strike.

Negotiations between employers and representatives of the 4,000 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union of America continued, while the men's clothing factories affected continued to be picketed.

Mill Workers Get Large Amount in Back Wages

New Orleans.—Thousands of dollars of back wages have been paid to sawmill employes within the last several months by southern pine mills which had been found violating the lumber code, H. C. Berckes, secretary-manager of the Southern Pine association, administrative organization for the southern pine industry, said.

Court proceedings were resorted to in only a few of the adjustments, which varied from $100 to $2,000 in total amounts. Negotiations also have been successful in obtaining compliance with the wage and hour provisions of the code by numerous other mills.

Labor's Valley Forge

Editor The Labor World:

Local newspapers report a wild and unrestrained tirade from a Mr. Estes Kefauver, bitterly denouncing the strike. They quote "Mr. Kefauver, attorney." They lacked space, however, to add, "Junior member of the law firm of Chambliss, Sizer, Chambliss & Kefauver, textile mill representatives."

* *

Mr. John Fletcher introduced a resolution before the Rotary club condemning the strikers. The papers quoted "Mr. Fletcher, attorney," but by some typographical error or something left out "for the Chattanooga Manufacturers' association."

STRIKER.

What Next!

Discovery of a method of electroplating rubber and of combining rubber with metals was recently announced by Dr. Andrew Szeerari, who is connected with an Akron, O., company. The company is now manufacturing a lining of rubber-metal composition for the inside of sewer pipes, making the pipes impervious to acids.

"Now I'm the Picture of Health," Says Lady After Taking CARDUI

Here is how Cardui helped an Alabama lady. . . . "I suffered from pains in my back and sides," writes Mrs. A. G. Gray, of Cusseta, Ala. "I was so thin and weak, I read of Cardui and decided to take it. I noticed at once it was helping me. I kept taking Cardui until I had finished five bottles. I gained. My health was much better. Now I am the picture of health. My color is good and my weight increased." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Mill Owners and Machine Guns

Law enforcement officials of the federal government have made abundant complaint in recent years of the ease with which bands of criminals and outlaws of the Dillinger type have equipped themselves with machine guns.

But now come mill owners in Georgia and other southern textile centers with an array and assortment of machine guns and multiple rifles at the windows and on the roofs of their plants that would make Dillinger and all of his ilk blush in puny comparison. Not since before the Civil war has there been such an abundant display of varied firearm equipment in the southern states.

The question is naturally asked why is it so easy for these mill owners to convert their plants into veritable arsenals and fortresses? The question is asked where they got the machine guns and high-powered rifles in such abundance and in such quantity? Mill centers, large and small, including the little country cross-roads mills, bristle with firearms in the hands of armed guards, deputies and strikebreakers.

With mill owners acquiring guns with such ease and rapidity, it is small wonder that gangsters and bandits have been able in recent years to get them with the same ease.

Literally thousands of armed thugs surround these southern mills. Strikers and pickets are beaten, intimidated, threatened, shot in the back and killed. The six victims at Honea Path were not even armed with lead pencils. They are all the victims of the community nondescripts that have been hastily mobilized by mill owners to intimidate and even kill unarmed and peaceful pickets.

Low Wages and Dead Babies

Textile workers cite startling figures from the children's bureau of the United States labor department to show that they are fighting literally for the lives of babies. Figures collected in seven cities some years ago prove that a new-born baby's chances of life depend quite largely on his father's income.

If the father were making less than $450 a year, the bureau found, 167 babies out of every thousand born alive died in less than a year.

If the father earned between $450 and $550, 125 of each 1,000 babies died in the same time.

If he earned between $650 and $850, the death rate of babies in their first year was 107 per 1,000.

If he earned more than $1,250 a year, the baby death rate dropped to 59 per 1,000.

And if he had no income, 211 babies out of each 1,000 born lived less than one year.

High wages, low death rate; low wages, high death rate.

The textile workers point out that their incomes are nearly all in the very low brackets given, and that only a trifling fraction of them come in the class of $1,250 a year or more. Better wages, fewer dead babies.

Textile Evils in Public Eye

The great textile strike has given textile labor an unprecedented opportunity to impress upon the nation the evils of low wages, denial of the right of the workers to organize and driving of workers almost beyond endurance by means of the "stretch-out." The textile workers have taken full advantage of the opportunity and the nation is learning a lot about the terrible conditions in a basic industry.

If the strike has done nothing but make the nation aware of the plight of the textile workers, it will have served a purpose. But it will do far more than that. It will bring higher wages and better working conditions to many hundreds of thousands of workers. It will imbue them with a new sense of unity and brotherhood. It will give them more of a voice in the industry of which they are so essential an element. It will mark a big forward step in national progress, resulting in immeasurable gains in the interests of the national welfare.

Unemployment Insurance

The cause of unemployment insurance for idleness forced on American workers by the reactionary business who own and control our system of production and distribution received an added impetus by the continued support which Gov. Lehman, of New York, gave the movement in his address before the annual convention of the State Federation of Labor at Buffalo.

Referring to his message to the special session of the state legislature in 1933 recommending unemployment insurance "as a duty which industry must assume and the state must initiate," Gov. Lehman said:

"It is a source of real regret to me, as I know it has been to all of you who are here today, that no legislation for the establishment of a system of unemployment insurance was enacted by the legislature last year or this year. There can be no doubt, however, that the day is not very distant when the passage of such legislation will come. With an ever growing realization on the part of the people that unemployment insurance serves a real purpose in the social and economic scheme, I am very confident that legislation will be enacted that will be of benefit to all, employer and worker alike.

"The rapidity with which the adoption of such legislation comes will, I believe, be largely dependent on the soundness of the measures offered. Between now and the end of the year the most careful and painstaking study and consideration should be given to the subject by all those interested in it, to the end that measures may be introduced that will, because of their very soundness and practicability, command themselves to the great mass of the thinking people of this state. I believe that there is no legislative subject more important."

The unemployment insurance measure approved by the New York State Federation of Labor stipulates that employers shall be required to create the entire fund from which the benefits are paid. This is in line with the policy recommended by the American Federation of Labor.

LIVING WAGE IS VITAL TEXTILE STRIKE ISSUE

The United Textile Workers of America give stress to the fundamental issue in this strike as essentially one of a living wage. Textile employes have suffered more than any other single class of workers in wage changes and readjustments under the system of NRA codes.

Minimum wages of textile workers were raised slightly by provisions of the Cotton Textile code, approved more than a year ago. But the almost immediate result of this wage minimum was that the vast majority of skilled and semi-skilled workers in textile mills, who had been receiving much more weekly than this minimum, were reclassified into new groupings, with a lower hourly wage applicable to each. This readjustment served to bring down the workers' weekly earnings to practically the minimum provided in the code.

Throughout the industry this minimum to all practical purposes became the virtual maximum that was paid to the mill employe for his week's work.

That in itself was an actual wage reduction for thousands of mill employes. It meant also that mill owners did not increase their aggregate wage outlays, and made no contribution to the higher wages and increased purchasing power, which was a prime reason why the National Recovery Act, and industrial codes, were brought into existence.

That is not the sole grievance of the textile workers today. When the proposed Cotton Textile Code came up for a hearing, one spokesman after another for the mill employes emphasized that a 40-hour work week in this industry, as called for by the code, would not remedy the economic difficulties of overproduction or eliminate the unmarketed surplusages from which the mill owners were suffering. The very existence of these surpluses was a basic reason given by mill owners in urging that the code be approved by the president with all possible speed.

Defend 40-Hour Week

These employers denied that a 40-hour week was too much; they denied that under such length of operation the huge over-production of which they complained would be continued. They denied that with a 40-hour week the wage slashing of the past, due to competitive practices growing out of over-production, would again in the future put the burden and costs of an unhealthy condition in their industry directly upon the workers in their mills.

Nevertheless, early last summer, these employers appeared before General Johnson with a plea for an arbitrary curtailment in their working time to 30 hours—the very workweek which the workers had asked for when the code was under consideration. But their proposal this time meant a 25 per cent reduction also in the weekly wages of the employes. Thus, the burden of the cut was ta fall on the employes.

Curtailment Slashes Pay

The great majority of textile workers were then being paid little more than the code minimum of $12 and $13 for their week's work. Under this curtailment proposal, their individual earnings would be reduced to $9 and $10 a week if they had a full 30 hours of work. The workers asked if the 30-hour week was made effective, that the existing wage for 40 hours continue to be paid.

Mill owners in this instance frankly admitted that their difficulty was one of work. The workers asked if the 30-hour week was made effective, that the existing wage for 40 hours continue to be paid.

Mill owners in this instance frankly admitted that their difficulty was one of over-production, and that under the 40-hour week they were producing more than was being consumed.

Labor's Pleas Unheeded

The plea of the workers went unheeded. Operating time was cut by one-fourth, and so were the aggregate wages. These workers, a majority of whom were receiving no greater weekly wage than they did two and three years ago, found themselves penalized and called upon to shoulder the burden of stabilizing the textile industry through a reduction in hours, with corresponding cut in wages, to the very level of 30 hours which they had urged without wage cut when the code was under consideration.

It is reasonable to believe that if the work week had been fixed at 30 hours when the code was promulgated, the industry would not have had an unmanageable surplus in recent weeks and that some of the basic and fundamental reasons for which the workers are striking now would not have existed.

ASK MORE PAY.

New York City.—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's association, and a committee of fifty representatives of the organization asked ship owners here for an increase in wages and a 30-hour week, to be embodied in a new contract to go into effect at the end of September. The union is asking an increase in pay for stevedores on the deep sea piers from 85 cents an hour to $1 an hour.

Men who are driven to drink by hard luck would be completely ruined by prosperity.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Folks go to theaters to see drama, and pay for admission.

Textile strikers are living through drama—terrific drama. They are on a great stage, playing for stakes that run as high as life and death. Families with little food. Some with none. Earnings stopped—that's the price men and women pay for a principle.

Then come the soldier boys. We cheer them when they fight a common foe. We do not cheer when they spear strike pickets, when they send bullets tearing through the chests of strikers, men and women. Already the shootings have begun.

Soldiers can make a strike a terrible thing. To textile strike headquarters came a wire from an organizer—a man known to his friends for his quiet and his meekness. His wire told of a day of riot and terror. It was dripping with tears, so grippingly did this labor union organizer write his terse message of a day of carnage.

So it has been these last few months. Men, fighting to enforce a law which employers hate. Troops, police, guns, clubs, gas. Today weapons are better than they used to be. It is easier to kill more.

Why must all this be? Does entrenched wealth hold so dear its ancient power to loot the people, to drive hard bargains with workers, to sap from the masses the wealth of the nation?

After all, the masses have the numbers. In unity they have the power to stop all wheels. Unless they earn money nothing will be bought. With nothing bought the present order goes to pieces.

In co-operation there is happiness, there is confidence, there is life and health. Why does industry not turn to co-operation with labor, why does it not turn toward the ways of peace, toward the ways of justice? Why does greed so lure the minds of men that they lose their reason? It is not an easy question to answer.

But, whether or not there is an answer, there is a cure. The workers are on the march to apply the cure.

If employers could but get some sense into their heads they would begin to realize this important thing:

That more and more workers are beginning to say, "Must it be always we who must back up?"

The fact is that just that is happening.

And more and more they are beginning to say: "No; it shall not be always the workers who back up, who give way, who go back to work under the old rules."

More and more they are saying: "This time we get what we want and what we need."

But of course employers never have been any too bright at reading the workers' mind. Too many of them have had gold dollars before their eyes to blind them, dividend checks stuffed in their ears so that they could not hear well.

Does any employer today ask himself what a worker thinks when he reads about the du Pont profits?

Does any employer ask himself what a worker thinks when he reads that the du Ponts bought control of General Motors with only a part of their war profits?

Does any employer ask himself what a worker thinks when he reads that textile mill dividends have grown this year while workers have slipped back until their average wage is less than $10 per week?

The chances are that only a few employers have ever asked those questions of themselves, because they very seldom think of workers as doing any thinking and if they did ask the questions they wouldn't know the answer anyway, because it is not in the nature of things that an employer should know the workers' mind.

Of course, to be honest about it, the workers are themselves to blame for a lot of this condition, because they haven't done any too much thinking themselves in the past.

Plenty of workers today are more interested in the world's series, as it is fancifully miscalled, than they are in their own job and their own freedom.

How that can be is difficult to understand, but that is the way it is, just the same.

But this condition of thoughtlessness is changing. There is today a lot of new thinking going on.

Workers are getting at the facts. They are looking at the big picture of things. They are making up their minds in a new way. If employers are wise—though they aren't—they will see that the old arrogance had best be laid away on a shelf high out of reach.

* * *

For a good many years now the workers have been talking about the extension of democratic practices in industry. For many years they just talked and didn't do very much.

During the past year they have begun doing things about it on a large scale.

They will keep on doing things about it.

And one of these days the trade union movement will be as fully accepted as the American constitution.

The faster there is this acceptance, the safer America will be from the fanatical notions of the revolutionists who don't know where they are going or how they intend to get there, except that they are willing to destroy all things on the way.

Assurance by Senator Nye, chairman of the senate committee investigating the munitions industry, that there would be no let-up in the inquiry, forecasts further startling revelations. Enough has already been disclosed to more than justify the investigation.

The state department is reported to have received sharp diplomatic protests as a result of disclosures regarding high officials of other governments as well as many of their prominent citizens. Secretary of State Hull is said to be in full sympathy with the inquiry, as is the president, and there seems to be no reason to believe the foreign protests will muzzle the inquiry.

To date, evidence has been presented before the committee to back up charges that the great munitions interests of the world are a big factor in making war. The committee has found that these "merchants of death" have no patriotism when it is a question of profits. A company will sell to potential enemies of its government as well as to its own government, as long as it gets the cash.

Obviously, the inquiry must go on until the full extent of the munitions racket is exposed.

World interests has been aroused by Upton Sinclair's campaign for the governorship of California. Labor, particularly, here and abroad, is watching Sinclair's campaign because it is based on his plan for taking care of the 1,250,000 unemployed he estimates are now within the borders of California.

Sinclair's plan is an experiment. States can make experiments which the federal government cannot undertake on a national basis. Witness Wisconsin.

Production for use describes Sinclair's plan. The unemployed will make the things they need and exchange their production with each other without utilizing the usual procedures of our present system. This will eliminate money, profit, interest, competition. For their individual work they will receive certificates exchangeable for such other needed goods as are made by the unemployed.

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED
HOW LITTLE IT COSTS
to own and use these appliances in your home?

THOUSANDS of people have bought new TVA model ranges, refrigerators and water heaters! Most of them find that these appliances—priced low, and using electricity at the present low rates—save enough money every month to pay the small monthly installments.

You will probably get the same pleasant surprise when you check up on your own costs. And after you make the last payment, the savings will continue, putting dollars back into your pocket every month.

You can buy the TVA model electric range shown here for $75.50 cash, the electric refrigerator for $79.50 cash, the automatic water heater for $60.50 cash. A small carrying charge is added for terms.

When only one appliance is purchased, terms are as follows: Electric Range—small down payment—$2.41 a month for 36 months. Electric Refrigerator—small down payment—$2.54 a month for 36 months. Electric Water Heater—small down payment—$2.31 a month for 30 months.

Purchase all three for $6.50 down, $5.33 a month. Payments may be extended over 48 months if more than one appliance is purchased at the same time. Stop in at any of our stores and get complete details.

Small additional charges are necessary for the plug and cable to connect the Range . . . for the pressure relief valve on the Water Heater . . . and where a wall plug is necessary for the Refrigerator.

The Bell Telephone System is so organized and regulated that your interests as a user of the service are safeguarded, as well as the interests of the 300,000 or more individuals who have invested their savings in the business. The welfare of the army of 270,000 Bell telephone workers who build, maintain, and operate the business is equally safeguarded. To favor any one of these groups at the expense of the others would not only be poor judgment, but contrary to the fundamental policy of the business.

If the best interests of all the people are to be served, then revenues should be sufficient to assure the continuation of the best possible grade of telephone service and to insure the continued financial integrity of the business.

The earnings of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company during the best years of its history have never exceeded 7% on its investment.

During the past three years the average was less than 5%, and in 1933 it dropped to about 4%.

Such inadequate earnings might easily have endangered the foundation structure of the business and hampered the service but for the Company's farsighted policy of retaining each year a small part of the earnings to care for financial stress during unprofitable years.

As a result of this sound policy, telephone service has not been allowed to suffer, but on the contrary has been constantly improved during the past four years. And the scope of the service has been extended to the far corners of the earth, so that you can now talk to almost anyone, anywhere, at any time, quickly, and at a surprisingly small cost.

In this way the telephone company has fulfilled and will strive to continue to fulfill its obligation to the public, that of furnishing the best possible service at a cost as low as is consistent with financial safety.

BLAME PUT ON MANAGEMENT FOR FAILURE OF PEACE MOVE

Employers Will Be Held Strictly Accountable for Stand, Strike Head Declares—Strikers Urged to Hold Fast Lines and Permit No Provocation to Drive Them to Violence.

Washington, Sept. 20. — Textile workers on the national strike front have "dug in" and are ready for a long struggle, following rejection of labor's arbitration proposals by the cotton manufacturers.

As the proposal of the United Textile Workers of America for arbitration expired and the manufacturers breathed defiance of the workers' demand for justice, Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the union's special strike committee, said:

"We are preparing for at least a month of struggle to win the textile strike. Proposals for settlement now must come from employers. They must come from each division of the industry long before a month has expired.

Serious Issues Involved.

"Issues of the most serious kind are involved in this strike, and any fight that wins is worth the making, no matter how long it takes. Most of the workers in the textile industry can be no worse off on strike than they were at work. And fully half of those normally employed were out of work when the strike began."

Management will be held "strictly accountable" for the failure of arbitration by the presidential board, Gorman declared in commenting on the employers' stand.

"On the heels of the board's statement that management would not yield," he added, "Mr. George A. Sloan issued a statement in which he attempted to justify his position. It was a weak and pitiful effort—a tragic thing for management to do in a crisis so tremendous. It was a sardonic jeer at the fate of a million wage-earning Americans.

"The American people generally constitute a fair jury. If Mr. Sloan is satisfied to rest his case, as he has made it, with that great jury, the United Textile Workers of America certainly will. We always have."

Board Still Hopeful.

First announcement of the rejection by the employers of arbitration proposals came from the president's special mediation board, which issued this brief statement:

"After two days of effort we have been unable to secure an agreement from the group of manufacturers on any basis for an arbitration or its equivalent. We regret this deeply, but believe that other methods of procedure can be found which may lead to a prompt, effective and just method of settlement."

Employers issued their statement through the cotton textile code authority, saying that the proposals of the union leaders were "impossible" and that any changes as to hours of work and wages as well as problems of the "stretch-out" and collective bargaining must be adjusted through the established NRA machinery.

In issuing their statement through the code authority, the manufacturers evidently sought to show that they were working through NRA machinery and abiding by NRA practice. It is significant that the three government members of the code authority, although invited, were not present at the meeting at which the statement was adopted. The three government representatives are Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator; Leo Wolman, member of the NRA labor advisory board, and Nelson Slater, industrialist.

Green Attacks Employers.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, assailed the employers for assuming an arbitrary attitude and declared their attitude was barring a quick settlement. He said:

"The president's board has explored the situation. They are convinced no agreement can be reached with the manufacturers. I should judge the next step would be a report to the president.

"The manufacturers assumed an erroneous and unsound position. In the midst of a great emergency they owe it to the public to agree to some form of arbitration by which the issues can be judicially determined. The board is to be commended for its fine service. The workers have shown a willingness to arbitrate. They still are willing. The arbitrary attitude of the employers has prevented a speedy settlement."

Use of Troops Assailed.

Vigorous protest against the use of national guardsmen to break the strike was made by Chairman Gorman in telegrams to President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Dern and governors of states when troops have been ordered out.

"So far as we can learn and observe, the principal function of the troops is to protect strikebreakers," the president was told. "I know that governors have full control of their state troops, but I feel sure at the same time that a word of advice from you urging fairness and the use of troops where used at all in a strictly impartial manner would be helpful. We know that there is no need whatever in any case for state troops and we protest most vigorously their use as aids to strikebreakers."

Condemning violence and charging management has placed itself above the law, Gorman said:

"Violence is no part of our program and I call upon all members of the United Textile Workers and all strikers who have not yet joined the union to make no resort to violence," said Gorman.

Demands Are Just.

"This strike is founded upon just demands—minimum demands. The workers, a half million strong, have shown their power to stop the wheels of the mills by simply walking out. Without labor power the mills do not run.

"Our strike line is in magnificent condition. The strike committee relies upon the discipline of our members everywhere to keep it so. To permit our members to be drawn into conflict with troops anywhere is to invite defeat. I hold every squad captain strictly accountable and the strike committee expects discipline—that is what has brought us to this high point and that is what will carry us on to final victory.

"The American people, through their elected representatives, wrote into the law the guarantees of our rights which management now is violating. The people did the right thing. Management has placed itself above the law—and we think beyond the law.

"The strike goes on. Our men have been shot. They have stood their ground. I know textile workers. I am one. They will stand their ground. This strike shall not be in vain and I demand that governors protect our lawful rights as well as they protect the rights of scabs. There is a lawful right to picket and we intend to preserve that right."

ACCUSED OF CODE VIOLATION.

A criminal information has been filed in the federal court for the western district of North Carolina against the Statesville Plywood and Veneer company for violation of the lumber and timber products industry code. Three officers of the company were arrested and were released under bond of $1,000 each.

Black-Draught Brings Refreshing Relief of Constipation Troubles

Constipation produces many disagreeable sensations, several of which are mentioned by Mr. T. E. Stith, of Boonville, Ind., who writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught many years when needed for biliousness and other minor ills when a laxative was needed. I have a tight feeling in my chest when I get bilious. I get dizzy and feel very tired, just don't feel like doing my work. After taking Black-Draught, I feel much better. This is why I continue to use it when needed." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught is a good, purely vegetable laxative, obtainable for 25¢ a package.

local NRA board with complaint.

Worker told "if he belonged to union he would have to pay cash for coal."

Laid off because she was "messed up in this union business," quoting superintendent.

Inspector for two years; code task 125 dozen, 10½ hours; increased to 160 dozen in eight hours, and when she protested it was impossible, superintendent told her she might be rehired as learner.

Superintendent told one worker, "I know all the officers of this local union, and all who have joined. I am going to fire everybody who belongs, one at a time, slip them out and get them out of the way. You can't get another job, and your family will suffer and you will be walking the streets. One man cannot run this government, and we will close down before we will recognize any union."

Foreman said: "I have always been a friend of yours, but if you join the union I will have to fire you. I have three on my books I have to fire. I hate to do it, but the boss told me to."

Woman worker told superintendent it was impossible for her to reach increased task. Was told, "I picked you out of the gutter and gave you a job. You'll do it or get the hell out of here."

Woman worker testifies she knows of employes who have worked in one mill for ten years who have been forced to sign agreements to work as learners.

One mill executive declared the NRA is unconstitutional and his mill would co-operate only to the extent it was forced to do so.

Superintendent said: "I am going to put you on the day shift, doing extra work. You are a disadvantage to the company, as you are encouraging the boys to join the union, and I will put you where I can watch you."

The above, as stated, are selected at random from scores of affidavits recounting a sorry story of code evasions, lowered wages, increased tasks, discriminations, etc.

To tell the whole truth in this situation would require volumes, and we present them as merely indicative of a general condition.

Local textile workers, striking in protest against such conditions, have been maligned and ridiculed by the public press and through other sources.

We appeal to a fair-minded public to support us in our efforts to place the textile worker on an equal standing with other workers, and to enforce working conditions to which every American citizen is entitled. We have violated no law, and will violate none, but we are more than ever determined to stay out until fair conditions are gained and many abuses are corrected.

TEXTILE STRIKE POLICY COMMITTEE.

Hordes of Armed Guards Fail To Daunt Workers

Strikers Stand Firm in Determination to Win, as Bosses Find Armed Men Can't Run Mills.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The strike of the nation's textile workers grows in strength and impetus with each day, with the strikers facing the strongest pressure to force or intimidate them to return to work that any workers in this country have probably experienced.

The struggle becomes epochal from the stamina displayed by the strikers, and the forces of intimidation and terrorism mobilized against them by mill-owning interests.

In New England and the middle Atlantic states the strike is effective 100 per cent. In the south hordes of armed guards surround the mills, and throng the mill villages, armed with rifles and pistols and threatening and intimidating the workers into going back into the mills.

Mill Guards Patrol Roads.

Mill guards have been recruited by the thousands from the thug and riff-raff elements of the mill towns, and are patroling the state highways like state policemen. Travelers are stopped and their vehicles searched. Men and women go into mills to work throughout the day or night under the eye of armed hirelings mustered in as deputies to "break the strike."

Martial law prevails in Georgia and strikers and strike leaders are herded into concentration camps.

The state militia has been called out in Maine, hode Island, Connecticut, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. Mill workers are driven before the bayonets in the hands of these armed men—whose rifles, uniforms, bayonets, and every other article of equipment is loaned to them by the war department of the federal government and belongs to the federal government.

Unprecedented Intimidation.

Not before have state governments and state governors resorted to such desperate means and methods to intimidate and frighten striking workmen.

Letters by the thousands pour into the strike headquarters of the United Textile Workers of America from mill workers in the southern towns and villages overrun with militia and armed guards to the effect that they are being herded and driven to the mills, but that "we are still union 100 per cent."

As the executive council of the United Textile Workers went into session in Washington to hear reports of the special strike committee, Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, said that every vice president arrived with the most encouraging reports.

Strike Held Unbreakable.

"Strike lines are growing daily and the strike is unbreakable, except by the granting of our demands," the strike leader said.

Replying to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's attack on the textile strike, pointing out the importance to labor and the nation of the great struggle and emphasizing the determined spirit of the strikers, Gorman said in a radio address:

"Last night Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, broadcast an attack upon labor in general and the United Textile Workers in particular. His attack was untrue, unwarranted and would be unaccountable if we did not know Gen. Johnson.

Just prior to that time it was announced in Washington, apparently for publication in the south, that a group of industrialists headed by Mr. Clay Williams, former president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company and chairman of the Business Advisory and Planning council, was undertaking an investigation of the textile strike. The Business Advisory and Planning council was appointed by Secretary of Commerce Roper, and Secretary Roper is reported as saying that he will transmit the report of this board of big business men directly to the president, over the head of the Winant board, which the president himself appointed to deal with the textile strike situation.

"In this conference with Mr. Williams, who operates a non-union tobacco factory, were Edward Stettinius, chairman of the finance committee of United States Steel, and Harry P. Kendall, of Boston, who owns mills in the north and in the south.

General Fight on Labor.

"Grouped with these events is the fact that the National Association of Manufacturers this week advised all of its members to disobey the decision of the national labor relations board in which the board held that if a majority of a company's employes vote for the union, then the union must represent all the employes.

"There is a ring of steel being drawn around the textile workers —a ring of steel, a ring of gold and a ring of that economic and financial might that has never lost its hope of dictatorship.

"Gen. Johnson's attack was against all labor. The program of the Williams board is against all labor. The National Association of Manufacturers' recommendation is against all labor.

U. T. W. Center of Attack.

"The United Textile Workers are the center of attack because they are on the firing line. They are on strike. But, mark my word, if the textile workers can be beaten back, then the pressure of great wealth will go on all down the line until our whole movement feels the fresh impact of the assault.

"We know what is being planned. We know that the Williams board is moving in a flank attack to go over the head of the special board headed by Gov. Winant. We know that Gen. Johnson is following a plan to the same end. We know that there is a tremendous fear that the Winant board will deal out justice, and justice is the last thing on this earth the textile industry and its friends want or dare to contemplate.

Blame Put on Johnson.

"I am not going to deal at any length with Gen. Johnson. He has forfeited all right to serve as a public administrator. He has become a partisan in behalf of the most mismanaged of all industries. He has become a partisan of an industry in which the wages average less than $10 a week.

"Now I charge that Gen. Johnson is as responsible as any single individual for the textile strike. We made an agreement with him on June 2 and he did not keep the agreement. He broke it. He says our strike is a breach of faith. Our strike is the result of intolerable conditions which were permitted to grow under the code and in direct violation of the code and as a result of the broken agreement of June 2, for which Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is himself responsible as the party of the first part.

"But there is a more serious aspect to this whole situation. The president has appointed a special board, a high-minded, sincere and able board, to deal with the textile strike situation. Gen. Johnson has gone out of his way to embarrass the president's board and so, to embarrass the president himself. I do not see how Gen. Johnson can justify himself or how he can, in good conscience, remain administrator of NRA. Unless I am completely wrong, he has ahead of him only one appropriate action and that is to resign forthwith, so that he may devote all of his time to the cause which he espoused in his radio address of last night.

Anti-Unionists Seek War.

"There is an enormous and astounding textile strike on. It has swept the textile mills like an all-enveloping and cleansing storm. And let me say to you, ladies and gentlemen, the textile strikers are standing their ground. But this is more than a textile strike, and such men as Johnson and Roper are making it so. They are helping to force a greater and much more far-flung conflict. They are seeking to concentrate the whole anti-union business and financial structure of the nation into one climatic conflict to save business for autocratic control and to prevent the spread of the thoroughly American concept of democratic practice and human freedom.

"If that is their goal—and I hope there will be the wisdom of restraining among the men of management—we shall have to meet the issue and we will meet the issue.

"Now let me talk to wage-earners —to strikers. All real forward progress is built on organization. All labor progress is built on unions.

"The United Textile Workers of America, the union of the workers in the mills, is leading the way to what the president calls more abundant life in the textile mills. I am a mill worker. For the present you have taken me out of the mills to be an officer of the union. I know mill life and mill suffering. I know what this strike is all about, just as you know. I have been on the picket line and I know what that is like. I know what it means to be hungry.

"But let me say this: No great struggle was ever won in arm chairs. There was hunger at Valley Forge. There was suffering, such as nobody in this strike knows anything about. The pioneers who cut away the wilderness where the mills now stand were hungrier than any striker. They suffered more, but they didn't lose their nerve and they didn't lose sight of their goal. Our strikers are not going to lose their nerve.

"But all down the line, in this strike as in every human endeavor, struggles are won by organization, by discipline and courage. Remember there are ten million workers unemployed in America. Some of them have been literally unable to get work for two and three years. We know—our strikers know—that in two weeks of strike men cannot get as hungry as in three years of unemployment.

"The American Federation of Labor is wheeling into action on the relief question and on that score we have no fears whatever. There is a determination back of this strike that will surmount every obstacle until the strike is won."

WHY ROY M'DONALD'S SO-CALLED 'HOME STORES' ARE BEING PICKETED:

Anti-union policy of McDonald's organization is a matter of long standing. In years gone by the Chattanooga Typographical Union has repeatedly made efforts to secure the co-operation of Roy McDonald with the labor movement of Chattanooga, but always met with the excuse that the size of his printing plant did not justify the full-time services of a journeyman printer. The union offered to grant him the use of the union label in his shop on a part-time employment basis, but this offer was refused. Due to the fact that the McDonald printing plant was a small one and he did not enter into competition with other printing plants in the city no campaign was waged against his plant.

A little more than a year ago Roy McDonald enlarged his printing plant and took over the publication of E. T. Bales' weekly sports paper, changed the name to the Chattanooga Free Press and started distributing it free as a booster sheet for his grocery organization. Mr. Bales' sports paper was being published in a union printing plant.

A committee from Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89 conferred with McDonald in an effort to secure an agreement whereby union printers and pressmen would be employed in his plant. McDonald refused to consider such a proposition, stating he was an "individualist," and would not allow any organization to control his employes. He stated that his employes would "work any hours I see fit to designate and perform any task I may require of them." He further stated that "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 by not ordering all wages cut 50 per cent," claiming that such action would have immediately ended the depression.

A committee from the Trades and Labor Council also conferred with McDonald and met with the same attitude from him as did the Typographical Union committee.

He then imported a printer and a pressman from another state to work in his plant when there were many unemployed printers and pressmen in Chattanooga—local men whose homes are here.

Because of McDonald's attitude the Trades and Labor Council placed the McDonald organization on its "unfair list" more than a year ago. During the past year the Chattanooga Typographical Union has waged a silent but effective publicity campaign against the McDonald organization. The McDonald throwsheet, at the time of its inauguration, was ballyhooed by McDonald as being a wonderful opportunity for the downtrodden merchant to secure cheap advertising in a widely distributed medium. Mc Donald expressed hopes of entering the daily newspaper field within a few months. A number of Home Stores have been closed, several have been "consolidated," and at least two have been disguised with a different color front.

Heretofore we have not found it necessary to use the daily press in our fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization. Neither have we previously deemed it necessary to picket the Home Stores, although we have considered such action several times.

However, we believe the public should be informed of the real issues behind the prsent picketing of the Home Stores, and for that reason present the above facts.

Last week we authorized the picketing of the Home Stores because of McDonald's latest alleged affront to labor — the discharge of a valued employe because he extended aid to striking textile workers. Inasmuch as that action was the direct cause of placing of pickets, it is not the sole reason for picketing of the Home Stores, as we show by the above statement of facts. Eventually we would have been forced to picket the Home Stores—the action mentioned above merely brought the situation to a head sooner than was expected.

We wish to thank the public for the splendid co-operation it is giving us in our fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization, and to assure everyone that picketing of the Home Stores will be conducted in an orderly manner with the sole object of reminding the public of the unfairness of the McDonald organization.

The picketing is being done in the name of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council because the Council is the representative body of organized labor in Chattanooga and the fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization is being waged for the entire organized labor movement of Chattanooga and surrounding territory.

TEXTILE MILLS' ATTEMPTED DISCRIMINATIONS WIDESPREAD

"Ready, Willing to Confer," Says Aymon

BLAME PUT ON BOSSES

Workers Prepared to Return to Jobs

OWNERS WOULD OUST UNION MEN

Federation Representative Places Responsibility for Continuance of Textile Strike Squarely on Mill Owners.

Responsibility for prolonging the strike of textile and hosiery workers in the Chattanooga territory was laid directly at the door of employers Friday morning by Paul J. Aymon, Chattanoogan and representative of the American Federation of Labor.

The reason why most of the mills are still closed, Mr. Aymon said, is that the employers refuse to give guarantees that discrimination will not be practiced, as has been the case for the past year or more, against those employes who have exercised the right given them under the law to join the organization of their choice.

"We are ready to confer at any time," he said, "with employers, singly or jointly, and we also are perfectly willing to submit our case to any impartial board of business men or citizens. Although we are hopeful of settlement with some mills with whom we are now conferring, others have maintained the same autocratic and unpatriotic attitude which was one of the main causes of the strike.

"Determination to break up the organization of employes seems to be the sole stumbling block in the way to complete settlement of present difficulties," the labor representative continued, "and in view of the fact that some of these employers appear to have a horror of signing agreements, we will state that a notice posted in any plant, of which we will be furnished a copy, stating the policy of the company and guaranteeing against discriminations, will be accepted as cause for ending the strike in said plant. This has been done in one large local hosiery plant, and the workers have returned to their jobs.

"On the other hand, we have some employers who absolutely guarantee nothing, and some who have attempted to trick us by a general statement or promise against discriminations. However, with some we have had very unsatisfactory experiences regarding mere promises, and we insist on something more substantial than a general and blanket promise to obey the law and carry out the request of the president of the United States.

Newspaper Photographers Fake Pictures of "Violence" During Strike

New York City, Sept. 27.—How some textile strike photographs were produced for the daily press is explained by Marlen Pew, editor of Editor and Publisher, organ of newspaperdom, in his department, "Shop Talk at Thirty." Says Mr. Pew:

"Pictures don't lie! Do tell!

"Three responsible reporters working on the New England mill strike have reported to me that certain photographers from Boston and New York newspapers have not only faked pictures to indicate violence in the Saylesville, R. I., labor disturbance, but have actually encouraged young hoodlums to assault guards and thus start action for pictorial purposes.

"Sevellon Brown, managing editor of Providence (R. I.) Journal and Evening Bulletin, told me that he had eye-witness proof that several Saylesville pictures were posed fakes, for instance, one showing a striker's bandaged head and another a bruised back, all doctored up with mercurochrome to gain bloody effects, and paid for at the rate of $5 a shot. Boys in Hollywood spirit were led into flinging apples and rocks at mill guards to 'start something' for cameramen.

"Apparently, there isn't enough hell in the world for the sensation mongers, so they invent more, trifling with human life and with the good name of the American press.

"I'm just an old fogy to complain of such things, of course, but my criticisms will be valid some day when public indignation boils over and scalds the press, guilty and innocent alike, as it has recently done in the case of movies."

'LET 'EM STARVE' PLEA MADE BY JOHN EDGERTON

Delivers Bitter Attack on Workers.

"DEACON" RILED BY TEXTILE STRIKE

Wild Tirade Accompanies New Appeal for Funds to Fight Labor.

John Edgerton, president of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association, who boasted before his national body of the "increased production" in his mill at Lebanon by reason of a system which opened the day's work with prayer, has outdone himself for vicious and unrestrained attacks on working people, according to a printed sheet described as a "news release by John E. Edgerton, president Southern States Industrial council," and included along with the usual appeal for funds, in a letter addressed to employers, one of whom happened to be a fair-minded local manufacturer who sent the letter to he Labor World and paid his respects to Edgerton's tirade in no uncertain terms.

The sheet, titled "The Textile Strike," is one of the most bitter and at the same time most asinine tirades which, perhaps, has ever been broadcast in the state of Tennessee, and aside from libeling millions of patriotic citizens, indicates Edgerton's opinion that the textile workers should be starved to death for their temerity in seeking to better their condition and shake off the yoke of tyranny which has been forced on them by many textile mill operatives of the Edgerton ilk, particularly in our own beloved south.

Edgerton's screed follows. Read it once, then again, and take it to Sunday school with you Sunday morning and ask your teacher what he or she thinks of it as coming from an apostle of brotherly love and the teachings of the Lowly Carpenter two thousand years ago:

> The textile strike which has been ordered by the labor aristocracy is the illegitimate offspring of Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act as its sire, and the very unfortunate official commitment, "no one shall go hungry in this country," as its mother.
> Without reference to previous harmonious relations between employers and employes in most instances, or of the fact that there has been no appreciable dissatisfaction in most of the plants involved, this unnecessary, uncalled

WASSON TELLS LABOR BOARD HIS TROUBLES

Says Local Bakers Guilty of Violence.

GETS RESPECTFUL HEARING OF CLAIMS

Union Representatives Offer No Rebuttal to Unfounded Charges.

BAKERS CALLED IN SPECIAL MEET

Local Bakers and Bakery Salesmen are called to meet Saturday at 5 o'clock, at Roosevelt Hall, officers announce. Matters of vital importance to each and every member will be discussed, it was explained, and a full attendance of the membership is urged.

Members of the local Bakery Workers and Bakery Salesmen are guilty of "violence and intimidation," because Chattanooga Trades and Labor council declared the Colonial bakery "unfair to organized labor" and friendly merchants are refusing to handle Colonial products, according to Hugh Wasson, manager of the Colonial, who appeared before the Atlanta regional labor board Thursday in behalf of his complaint against Central Body's action.

Asked by a member of the board to present proof of his charges, Mr. Wasson is said to have stated he had no such proof.

Such is the story told by two representatives of the local bakery organizations, Curtis R. Sims and R. J. Gentry, who appeared before the Atlanta board Thursday to "listen in" on a complaint of Wasson seeking some kind of action by the board. Just what the Colonial management expected the board to do was not made exactly clear, the local unionists reported, and the board, so far as could be learned, took no action.

Wasson, they said, appeared with a brief which consumed almost an hour in reading, making various and sundry allegations, including violence and intimidation. The union representatives made no statement whatever, it was said.

Labor World readers will recall the history of the Colonial affair, which covers more than a year of fruitless effort on the part of Chattanooga laber representatives to reach some kind of an understanding with Wasson. When the local bakers' union was formed, it was recalled, Colonial employes applied for and signed the

MR. GORMAN TO MR. TALMADGE

Telegram of Francis J. Gorman, chairman strike committee, to Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia:

"Your statement in an Associated Press dispatch appearing in newspapers of Georgia under date of Sept. 14 to effect that textile workers are promoting, encouraging or participating in violence, or seeking to cause violence in Georgia is contrary to every report received in this office. We have no reports indicating violence in or about mill properties except where instigated by armed thugs in mill employ or by militia called out by yourself to drive mill workers back into these mills and to force a surrender of their cause to mill owners.

"You say that mill workers have petitioned you to call out the national guard. I challenge you to produce a single petition of this nature that was not signed by mill employes under intimidation, coercion and threats of mill management. You are quoted as saying mill workers have petitioned for different code and for 30-hour week. Mill owners are not asking code amendments and strike has no reference or relation to code.

"We are striking against management and that only. You misrepresent the facts when you attempt to make citizens of Georgia believe the code is a law and that to strike is a violation of the law and I think you know it. Moreover, the code fixes only the minimum wage and the maximum hours leaving all wages above the minimum and all decrease in hours to management and employes, and the law guarantees the right to organize and bargain collectively for that purpose.

"You say no one has authority to make such petition except the code commission of NRA. If you refer to the code authority you are informed that no such exclusive powers are lodged in this or any other code authority, nor does this or any other code endow the authorities and these industries with any vested power of the federal government or make such industry or industries an adjunct of the federal government.

"You say that when any citizen of Georgia wants to work they have an inalienable right guaranteed by the constitution to do so. They likewise have an inalienable right to strike and to picket peacefully and they also have a right under the law which you are sworn to enforce to protection from armed thugs of mill managements sworn in as public officers to intimidate, threaten, beat and otherwise abuse them. If government in Georgia is a government of mill managements with intimidation and threat of workers a policy of state government, then this fact should be frankly stated by yourself and not attributed to unsupported allegations on your part that these mill workers have indulged either in violence or in violation of any law. From your conduct I am convinced you do not understand the NRA, the issues in the strike, or your duties and obligations toward the people of your state.

"I ask you to remember that workers also have rights. You have proven yourself an arch enemy of labor using the armed forces of your state to drive men back into starvation conditions and absolute subservience to mill owners. Your troops have destroyed civil rights and made a mockery of your state laws. You do not seem to even be aware that the United States constitution exists or that there are federal laws which guarantee to workers of your state and all states the right to organize into unions and to bargain collectively through those unions with mill management. The first violence in this strike occurred in your state because it was in your state that armed and irresponsible agents of mill ownership opened fire on defenseless and law-abiding workers. You are writing a record that is inexcusable and that recalls the terrors of Middle Ages when workers were serfs and slaves either in bondage or ownership.

"Must this state of things continue in Georgia? The United Textile Workers strike committee has this to say: The workers will win their freedom and their rights. The strike goes on. You may kill workers with your guns but you cannot forever defeat them nor can you weave cloth with them. I hope for a return of decent government in Georgia."

Leading Seamless Hosiery Firm Signs National Pact With Union

Norristown, Pa., Sept. 27.—One of the most significant advances that has ever taken place in the seamless hosiery industry occurred when Rambo-Regar, Inc., of Norristown, an old firm and a key manufacturer, signed the national labor agreement with the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

The agreement provides for union-label merchandise and is the first of its kind in the seamless branch of the industry.

For months, Alfred "Tiny" Hoffmann, a leader in the organization of seamless workers which just a year ago taken into the federation, has been collecting data and statistics to set up sorely needed bases in the industry. The contract is a result of Hoffmann's work.

In the Rambo-Regar plant, with the aid of the union, the management is setting up a unique experiment in an effort to absorb workers heretofore considered too old to remain in industry.

Rambo-Regar manufactures baby hose, children's and misses' hose and anklets, men's half-hose, boys' golf socks, and is redesigning its machinery to manufacture men's work socks.

The union will institute a union-label educational campaign to push the label products of Rambo-Regar and Phoenix Hosiery mills of Milwaukee, Wis., which signed a national labor agreement some weeks ago.

Recently, special contracts providing for wages, hours and impartial arbitration have also been signed by Sportswear of Philadelphia and Herbert of Norristown. These are not the national labor agreement.

RAIL WORKERS TAKE POT SHOT AT M'DONALD

"Home Store" Chief Denounced by Trainmen.

EAST LAKE STORE LATEST TO CLOSE

Sign on Door Says "Closed for Repairs"—Another Suit Filed.

Mrs. Henry B. Jones lodge, No. 215, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, last Sunday adopted a resolution condemning the labor policies and attitude of Roy McDonald, president and manager of the so-called "Home Stores," as "violative of the principles of this Brotherhood."

The resolution declares that McDonald has been quoted as declaring railway employes should be put on a 12-hour-day basis, with a 50 per cent wage cut.

Pickets which have patroled practically all of McDonald's stores since his discharge of a manager and others at one of the units allegedly for donating, from his own funds, a pound of coffee to the textile strikers, continue to tell the public of McDonald's attitude, and it is announced that this system will be continued indefinitely.

A development in the Home Store-labor controversy came this week in a report from East Lake that a store in that territory displayed a sign in the window telling the world that it is "CLOSED FOR REPAIRS." A local trades unionist facetiously suggested that possibly the cash register had not been working; another, recalling McDonald's statement that anyone who worked for him would perform whatever task he (the boss) laid out for him, professed to wonder if the Home Store printer, bookkeeper, or office boy would be sent out to make the necessary repairs.

Local daily papers noted another suit against the Home Stores this week, the result of an automobile collision this time, and not of buying merchandise sold by McDonald.

The East Lake unit is the only one reported to The Labor World this week as having closed its doors, although rumors have been rife for

ERROR DOES ROTARY CLUB AN INJUSTICE

Labor World Editor "Pulls a Boner."

MIXUP IN NAMES BRINGS CENSURE

Strike Resolution Charged to Wrong Organization by Correspondent.

An unfortunate oversight on the part of the editor of The Labor World last week did an injustice to the Chattanooga Rotary club and its membership. A correspondent, signing himself "Striker," called attention to a resolution passed by the Kiwanis club, and in the presstime rush the type charged the resolution to Rotary.

Mr. A. Shelby Ochs, president of Rotary, immediately called the attention of the editor to the error, who quickly dispatched an apology to the club head. The editor hereby makes said apology publicly, and asks the indulgence of the civic organization for a most distressing "boner."

Mr. Ochs asked The Labor World clear the matter up, and the following correspondence is printed for our readers, in conformance with his request:

Chattanooga, Tenn.,
Sept. 22, 1934.

Mr. R. M. Cooke, Editor,
Labor World,
City.

Dear Mr. Cooke:

The current issue of The Labor World published a letter signed "Striker" complaining of the inaccuracy of the "local newspapers." Among other things you published the following paragraph:

> "Mr. John Fletcher introduced a resolution before the Rotary club condemning the strikers. The papers quoted 'Mr. Fletcher, attorney,' but by some typographical error or something left out 'for the Chattanooga Manufacturers' association.'
> "STRIKER."

This paragraph may or may not be accurate in the main, but we would like to point out the following facts which we hope that The Labor World, if it desires to be accurate, will give to its readers:

(1) Mr. John Fletcher has never introduced any kind of resolution before the Rotary club.

(2) The Rotary club has never discussed the strike, and has never referred to the strike.

(3) Mr. John Fletcher is not a member of the Rotary club.

Thanking you for the courtesy of giving this letter the same prominence in your next issue as

UNION ACCEPTS PEACE PLAN, BUT BOSSES BALK

Attempted Discriminations Are Widespread.

GOVERNORS AID ANTI-UNIONISTS

"Stretch-out" Killed as Code Authorities Are Shorn of Power.

Washington, Sept. 27.—With the findings of the Winant board in its report to President Roosevelt accepted by the United Textile Workers of America as a basis for ending the textile strike, the mill owners, sullen and sulking, have given no word as to either their acceptance of the findings or of their intentions in a settlement of the strike.

Word Sent to President.

A telegram was sent to President Roosevelt as follows:

"By unanimous vote of the executive council of the United Texitle Workers of America and upon the unanimous recommendation of the national strike committee the textile strike has just been ordered terminated and all workers have been instructed to return to work.

"Francis J. Gorman."

The fateful words of Gorman's messages were ticked out from his desk over a Postal Telegraph network by Robert Shearly, a member of the Commercial Telegraphers union.

Mill Owners Mum.

From the mill owners came no word of approval or acceptance of the findings of the Winant board. George Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, and spokesman for the mill owners, remained silent.

In the southern states, and in many of the mill centers of the northern states, a virtual lockout existed against the strikers, with more than 80,000 in the south alone denied the right to return to their work. It was frankly stated that the denial was because of their connection with the union and with the strike.

State militia still patrolled the mill premises in the south and workers were driven back as they approached the mill properties in response to the call to end the strike. Strikebreakers, brought in during the strike, continued in some mills. Other workers were recruited from adjacent farms. Eviction notices were served on workers who went on strike to vacate the mill owned homes which they occupy.

Governors Aid Bosses.

Governors of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama gave active aid and encouragement to the mill owners in their efforts to break up the union of textile workers by placing state troops around the mill premises, and driving back the workers with bayonets as they approached the premises. Armed guards in hundreds and thousands, recruited by the mill owners, patroled the mill towns and prohibited the assembly of the workers.

Union Drive Planned.

In its report to the executive council recommending termination of the strike the national strike committee said that the textile workers had gained as much as they could hope for out of the strike and declared that continuation was not necessary. The time had come when the strike should be brought to a close so that a "triumphant campaign of organization" could be started.

"Moreover," the report said, "we cannot refuse to co-operate with the president, as he has asked us to do.

"It is a simple and cold statement of fact that our strike has changed the whole relation of the government and of NRA to labor and we have utterly abolished the control of labor relations by code authorities. That is an achievement which cannot be too

The Union

In every town and city some people can be found,
Who spend their time in grumbling
at everything around;
Especially at the picket gate some curious things they say,
But if we're true to the union, we are sure to win the day.

Chorus:
Oh, we work for the union and persecutions bear,
And when we get to heaven,
there'll be no pickets there;
Oh, yes, we'll work for the union,
and persecutions bear,
And when we get to heaven,
there'll be no scabbing there.

II.
They grumble at the president,
and say he is not fair,
But if they understood the union, they'd quit their grumbling
there;
They persecute the union, and
everything around;
Still they keep on grumbling while on the picket ground.

Messengers Win Short Walk-Out

Local Western Union messengers who walked out last week when demands for increased pay and improved working conditions were refused, returned to their posts this week after conducting their strike in approved trade-union style and winning their battle.

Pickets were maintained at the local office for several days, and some of the boys were given a free ride in the "hurry-up wagon" when the police decided they were out of order. However, they were immediately released by Chief Bryan, and appeared none the worse for the experience.

They were advised by veteran local trades unionists, and set a fine example for workers in other lines of more age.

The Labor World congratulates the youngsters, and foresees the development of some good union leadership among them in the future.

We always like those people who are kind to dogs and horses.

Meaning of the "Stretch-Out"

The "stretch-out" system as practiced today in the textile industry is a challenge to the economic thought and business structure of the country. This is a term used to indicate the increased machine load per worker, and raises the question of whether the individual is to be displaced by the machine monster or ground down to the level of the common laborer.

In no other field in recent years has machinery made such inroads upon hand labor and upon the employment of human beings as in the textile industry. It reaches its climax in the Southern states where the workers, ground down to abject poverty by low wages and with organization resisted by every resource of the inventive genius of mill management, have been helpless to prevent their displacement by the machine.

A little over 100 years ago, when cotton manufacture first began in this country, each loom in use required the attention of not less than three skilled and expert weavers. But as improvements were made in loom machinery, the proportion of looms to workers gradually increased to a point where, twenty years ago, the number of looms to the single worker had been raised to twenty. Today in some of the big cotton mills of the nation, especially those producing gauze and cheesecloth, the single weaver is caring for 148 looms.

This is an increase of 444 in the ratio of machinery to human workers. In other words, 443 workers who would have been employed a little more than 100 years ago are today displaced by the machine.

It should be borne in mind, however, that whether the individual worker is attending 60 or 148 looms, the work load has been stretched to the limit of his physical endurance, and that mill managements are making constant studies of ways and means by which this work load may be increased, or, in other words, the human being further displaced by the machine.

Textile workers are protesting this condition because they have seen the machine output enormously increased without any corresponding increase in pay and by a constant reduction in their ranks of employed. The facts are that machines have been so perfected and made so automatic that they constantly need less skilled attendants, with the rates of pay far below what they were before the machine loads and work loads were so multiplied.

In the Southern states the "stretch-out" system is being used at its maximum, with weavers and other highly skilled workers virtually reduced to the status of common labor and drawing common labor rates of pay. And in addition to this, these mills have been the most obstinate in yielding to any system of collective bargaining, or making any concessions whatever in recognition of the human or legal rights of their employes.

No matter what attitude the individual citizen may take toward the general strike of the textile workers, he must give recognition to the fact that the skilled textile worker has a real and fundamental grievance against the machine monster, which is slowly trampling him down, and that this individual problem of his own is likewise a national problem that challenges the attention of the economic thought and business genius of this day.

TEXTILE STRIKE CAUSED BY LOW PAY, SPEED-UP, MORRISON SAYS

Workers Discharged by Thousands for Exercising Right to Organize, Guaranteed by Recovery Act—Johnson Condemned for Attacking Textile Union for Violation of an Alleged Agreement Not to Strike.

New York, Sept. 26.—Low wages, the stretch-out, speed-up system of exploiting workers and the discharge of thousands for joining the United Textile Workers of America were stressed by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, as the major causes of the nation-wide textile strike in a radio address here over the network of Station WEVD.

Wage Slashes and Speed-Up.

"Hours of work were reduced earlier in this year from 40 to 30, with no increase in hourly wages," Mr. Morrison said. "This means a decrease in weekly earnings which has largely destroyed whatever wage advantages the workers might have secured under the code. Men and women are apparently expected to live upon wages as low as $7.00 or $11.00 per week.

"At the same time that weekly earnings were cut, working conditions were growing steadily worse. The speed-up in this industry has been so great that in many mills men and women are now forced to do twice as much work as they did a few years ago for the same amount of money, or less. This constant effort on the part of the employers to secure more and more work out of each employe is one of the primary causes of the present strike.

"The cotton textile industry in America continues its centuries-long record of being one of the sweat-shop industries of the world. The prosperity of cotton mill owners has been and continues to be based largely upon the inhuman exploitation of workers in the mills.

"Workers have been discharged by the thousands for believing what the national industrial recovery act said—that they had the right to organize. The board set up under the cotton textile code for the adjustment of complaints and disputes in the industry has proven entirely inadequate to deal with them. If problems in the industry are to be settled peacefully there must be a permanent board set up in which the confidence of the workers is justified."

Employers Refuse Arbitration.

Stressing the impartiality of President Roosevelt's board of inquiry for the cotton textile industry, no member of the board belonging to a labor union, Mr. Morrison strongly criticized the Cotton Textile institute, representing the cotton textile manufacturers, for refusing to arbitrate the questions involved in the strike in accordance with the offer made by the United Textile Workers of America. He also deplored the attitude of some state governors for sending armed soldiers to shoot and cow the strikers into subjection.

Turning to the unwarranted attack made on the United Textile Workers by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, Mr. Morrison said:

"At a meeting of the national recovery administration code authorities at Carnegie hall, Sept. 14, Gen. Johnson charged that 'the textile strike was in absolute violation of an agreement made by the United Textile Workers with the federal government last June in settling the strike threatened at that time. * * *' He further stated that 'if such agreements of organized labor are worth no more than this one, then the institution is not such a responsible instrumentality as can make contracts on which this country can rely.'

"Gen. Johnson's statements with regard to all organized labor are not justified because organized labor keeps its contracts; it is a responsible agency, one which recognizes the sanctity of contracts and has declared by resolution that labor contracts must be kept inviolate.

Strike Did Not Violate Agreement.

"Gen. Johnson's statement that the textile strike was in violation of an agreement with the federal government cannot be accepted by any thinking person who is familiar with the terms of the settlement to which he refers. The first clause in this settlement reads as follows:

"'1. Strike order to be countermanded without prejudice of the right to strike.'

Labor Representation Demanded.

"The settlement terms set forth by the United Textile Workers provide for labor representation from the cotton textile industry on the labor advisory board and revision of the cotton textile national industrial relations board to include 'one representative of employers and one representative of the employes from the cotton textile industry.' The division of planning and research in conjunction with the revised industrial relations board was to co-operate with the industrial relations board in completing studies in work load for the use of the board in dealing with all controversies over the stretch-out or specialization system.

Promised Reports Not Made.

"First and foremost, I call your attention to that clause in the settlement which definitely states 'without prejudice to the right of labor to strike,' but further only two of the reports which were to be made under this settlement are yet available. The industrial relations board was not revised for these studies as specified in the agreement. In no case has there been any violation of this agreement on the part of the textile workers.

"The strike lines are holding despite tremendous pressure by employers and by state governments in many places. Already a number of mills have asked for contracts on the union terms. The strike enters its third week with the workers as determined as ever to win a struggle which they undertook only because a strike was the only way left to them to right the great injustice under which they suffered."

TALMADGE SETS UP DICTATORSHIP OF SOLDIERS TO OVERAWE TOILERS

Georgia Executive Began Drive to Herd Workers Back to Mills Soon After Renomination — Constitutional Rights of Labor Wiped Out as Militiamen Took Over Local Governments.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26.—Martial law, with military powers invoked to close down courts, take over municipal governments, ban all meetings, close all businesses, and even install a press censorship, was brought into existence by Gov. Talmadge, of Georgia, as a means of breaking the strike of the textile workers, and tightening the stranglehold of mill owners against unionization.

This step was taken by Talmadge within a few hours after he had been renominated for another term as governor, with the votes of textile workers cast in his behalf on the belief and representation to them that he would maintain a fair and impartial attitude toward them.

With the state militia called out and hurried into every mill center, stockades were quickly built of barbed wire and striking pickets and mill workers herded into them. Here they slept on the ground under such rude sheds or shelter as they were able to provide for themselves.

Talmadge had his military proclamation written and signed for four days before he made it public. It came to light only when discovered by accident by a newspaper writer. Strikers were dragged from their automobiles; strikers were forbidden to leave their homes, even to buy food; strikers were forbidden to attend to live stock in their own back yards; strikers were forbidden to assemble or hold meetings.

Union leaders were beaten by armed thugs in mill employ and driven from their towns. Some of them were given fifteen minutes to "leave town and never return." Schools were closed in some mill towns; warrants were sworn out for union men and union members on fictitious charges, or on practically no charges at all, and they were rushed away to some obscure jail and their whereabouts concealed.

This reign of terror and intimidation of textile workers, loosened upon Georgians by their governor, reached its high peaks in the mill villages of western and northwestern Georgia. Here the militia congregated, lashing and slashing at pickets with bayonets and driving men and women strikers before them into their own yards.

JOHNSON'S CHARGE THAT TEXTILE WORKERS VIOLATED STRIKE PACT IS RIDDLED BY WINANT REPORT

Washington, Sept. 26.—The Winant inquiry board to investigate the textile strike did not mention specifically the charge made by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, in his speech in New York that the United Textile Workers of America "broke faith" with him in calling the textile strike and violated an agreement made with him on June 2. The board did, however, deny the accuracy of Johnson's statement. Referring to the tentative strike called by the Textile Workers in protest against the three-months' curtailment program, the board said:

Right to Strike Preserved.

"A general strike was tentatively called for the first week in June. Officials of the national recovery administration held conferences for several days with union leaders in an effort to avert the strike. The head of the code authority of the Cotton Textile institute attended these conferences, but in a personal capacity. On June 2 a basis of settlement was reached between the union and NRA officials. Under the terms of this settlement the strike order was to be 'countermanded' without prejudice to the right of labor to strike" (NRA release 5514, June 2, 1934).

"The settlement by which the strike order was countermanded on June 2 did not, in the opinion of this board, go to the roots of the difficulty. Consequently the settlement was short-lived.

Agreement Included Strike Right.

"The question has arisen whether the United Textile workers were under legal or moral obligation by reason of that settlement not to call the present strike. While we do not consider it the function of this board to go into that question, it should be pointed out that the agreement was made not with the employers of the industry, but with officials of NRA, and that members of the union and others present at the conference contend that the agreement to 'countermand' the strike order 'without prejudice to the right of labor to strike' was intended to leave them free to enforce their demands by strike if the conditions against which they were protesting were not remedied."

FUNDAMENTAL HUMAN RIGHT DECLARED AT STAKE IN BIG TEXTILE WORKERS' STRIKE

Honea Path, S. C., Sept. 20.—The Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, officiating at the funeral of textile mill strikers killed at Honea Path, deplored "this tragic and utterly unnecessary taking of human life, when the principal objective of the strike, that of the organization of labor, is one of the most fundamental of human rights which should be granted by employers without the necessity of a strike at all."

He called upon strikers "to avoid violence as their leaders have urged" and also expressed the hope that the employers will avoid inciting to violence through the use of armed deputies or any unnecessary calling in of the militia. He condemned the "long years of economic intimidation by employers in most mills which has resulted in discharging men merely for joining a union when the issue has been drawn, and has built up a "wall of bitterness in the hearts of the workers."

"My interpretation of the textile strike is exactly the opposite of that announced by the National Association of Manufacturers," said Mr. Myers. "They have declared that 'the strike must be viewed as a direct threat to orderly government.' The facts, however, will bear me out when I say that there has never been in the textile industry an orderly government in which the American principle of democracy has been recognized. This is the chief issue of the strike. Organized labor demands and is entitled to recognition and a voice in the councils of industry. Repeated declarations by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches have asserted this right for labor, but it has not yet been granted by the employers in this industry."

Mr. Myers felt that there were personal religious issues in the situation for all textile workers. "Personally, I should like to appeal to all church members among textile workers to join the union. This seems to me to be a religious duty. To my mind it is evidence of Christian character on the part of workers when they join a labor union. By that act they exhibit an unselfish devotion to improve the lot of all the workers in industry. The man who refuses to join a union is ordinarily seeking his own individual gain at the expense of the general welfare of his fellows. For only through national organized labor unions can workers ever hope to raise the standards for all."

MILL BOSS TURNS DIETICIAN, SUGGESTING FOOD PERFECTLY SUITED TO PRODUCE PELLAGRA

Washington, Sept. 20.—If one is looking for a sample of the all-embracing stupidity and arrogance of cotton mill barons, here is a candidate for the position.

On Sunday, Oct. 1, 1931, William D. Anderson, president of the Bibb Manufacturing company, had some 1,200 of his workers assemble at what he called a "rally" in a schoolhouse of Columbus, Ga.

Anderson had brought these mill workers together to enlighten their minds. They were already on short time, and cotton mill wages on full time are pretty scanty. But Mr. Anderson told them that they would have no trouble in caring for themselves if they bought the right foods. Here is a list of supplies which he set forth as ample for a textile worker's family of four persons for a week:

24 pounds flour	$ .60
4 pounds lard	.35
8 pounds potatoes	.16
1 peck corn meal	.25
Total	$136

If their souls and bodies still hankered after the flesh pots of Egypt, Mr. Anderson, a truly accommodating man, was ready to make some concessions. They might have one package of coffee a week at 12 cents, and two pounds of fat back at 20 cents. The total cost of this "diet" for four persons works out, in cheap stores, at $1.68.

It will be noticed that no salt is provided, no sweetening—not even 'lasses, no vegetables except potatoes. But the omission of vegetables, fresh meats, and above all fresh milk, raised a question which it seemed to have an expert answer.

The United States public health service was called up, and the Anderson diet was read to them.

"What do you think of it?" asked the inquirer, when he had finished.

"I don't think you could find a more perfect prescription for producing pellagra," was the answer.

Observe, now, the number and variety of undesirable qualities which Mr. Anderson managed to display.

First, arrogance. What right had he to gather people who made his money for them and prescribe their diet?

Second, bad taste. For a man in his financial position to condescend to half starved textile workers on the food question is about as vile a piece of bad manners as can be imagined.

Third, ignorance. He didn't know what he was talking about. He didn't even know enough to know that he didn't know. His mind was a total blank on all information about diet.

Fourth, recklessness. Not even a mill boss can be ignorant that pellagra is rather common in the south, and that it is a disease caused by faulty diet. Knowing that, no man in Anderson's position had a right to give advice without looking up the facts.

arter, but shortly thereafter they e and all failed to put in an ap- arance at the meeting place.

Investigation disclosed several rea- ns for the change of heart on the rt of the Colonial employes, chief ong which was that Wasson had ated to them that if they organized would be forced to install machin- which would displace half of m and when this was done the re- ining 50 per cent would be "too w," and he would have to send "up th" for faster workmen. He is d also to have offered the most ive member in the organization vement the title of "assistant su- intendent" or something, with, wever, no increase in pay.

Subsequently many conferences re held with the bakery manager, presentatives of Central Body ending much time and patient ef- t to prevent an open break with concern.

These efforts were futile, however, d at a recent meeting of Central y Colonial products were declared fair to organized labor," and a paign of publicity was begun ex- ining the attitude of the bakery d toward union labor.

Friends of organized labor among merchants are handling only bread and cakes baked and delivered under union conditions, it was said, and this is declared to have irked Wasson to a point where he was constrained to make his wild and unfounded charges before the regional labor board. The gentlemen of the board, however gave a patient, courteous hearing to the Colonial manager, it was said, and offered to report a "finding of fact" to the national board if Mr. Wasson so desired.

In the meantime, the campaign of publicity continues, and will continue, unionists declared, until the Colonial management sees fit to change its attitude toward organized labor in Chattanooga.

Forbes Indorsed For School Board

George Forbes, assistant postmaster and veteran labor official, was indorsed for membership on the Hamilton county school board by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular session Monday night.

Mr. Forbes had previously been put forward for a position on the board, but had failed of appointment.

It is said that the county court, at its regular quarterly session Monday, will replace D. M. Raulston, another postal employe, and it is believed Mr. Forbes will succeed him. The appointment is for seven years.

for and altogether vicious strike has been called merely to further the establishment of a complete dictatorship of American industry by a comparatively small group of ambitious labor nabobs. Except for two things, this strike would have never been considered. One of these is the one-sided, wholly partisan, unjust Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act, which was written into it by the mailed hand of the American Federation of Labor. The other is the commonly accepted, blank assurance that nobody shall go hungry. Even God Almighty, infinite in love, mercy and justice, the eternal champion of all "human relief" and the recognized source in this country of everything good, never promised anybody that he should not suffer from hunger or any other physical or spiritual discomfort. He based every right given to man and the fulfillment of every promise upon the performance of clear obligations, specifically laid down. He warned us that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." He did not say that "ye shall reap everything sown except that which shall be plowed under or killed off." He did not say that man can sow idleness, violence, distrust, and hatred and from this sowing, reap eternally higher wages, shorter hours and the privilege of running the other fellow's business. Every guarantee of prosperity of any sort and of every human happiness was made emphatically dependent upon the worthiness of the individual, to be established by the exhibition of a "pure heart and clean hands."

It seems to me, therefore, that the sooner the people of this so-called Christian nation recognize that the congress of the United States cannot repeal the laws of God, and that prosperity and human happiness cannot be conferred upon men by executive decree, the sooner we are going to emerge from the unhappy state into which our follies have plunged us.

In the instance of this textile strike, as well as of its predecessors during the past twelve or fourteen months, it is to be noted that it is not the six or ten millions of the unemployed who are disturbing the peace of the nation, nor is it the millions of others who are co-operating with their employers in trying to re-establish normal conditions. But it is a small, blind and bull-headed group of labor leaders who represent in their authority less than 10 per cent of the wage-earning masses, yet who are endeavoring to force their unwelcome and selfish wills upon the peace-loving majorities in most all of the plants and establishments in this country. Certainly, they have a right to call a strike, and the voluntary members of their union have a right to quit work when they please. But when they undertake to destroy the right of other people to work and earn their bread, they forfeit their claim upon public tolerance or upon governmental sanction. These leaders know in advance that there will be no violence and bloodshed, as there usually are on such occasions. The contest in the last analysis is not between employer and employe. It is between the government of the United States and its subdivisions, and the American Federation of Labor.

But the gloomiest aspect of the whole affair is the reliance that these strikers will put in the promise that regardless of their violence and voluntary abandonment of the opportunities to work at the highest wages and shortest hours they have ever known, none of them shall go hungry. They have indicated shamelessly that they expect the government to finance their errand of folly and enterprises of destruction. In that case, of course, every man and woman in this country who has anything or who is working will be contributing through taxes to the support of the strikers. It seems to me that it is time for all liberty-loving, law-abiding, God-fearing and proud Americans to assert their right to some consideration in these contests which are precipitated by self-seeking interests. A group of so-called working men have no more natural right to set themselves up as a special interest entitled to special privilege than has a group of Wall Street financiers, or Chicago gangsters. In its war upon special privileges, if the new deal does not include the American Federation of Labor among its objects of hostility, then, it will show itself to be a house of cards built upon the sands of injustice. If the laws which are on the statute books of the cities, states and the nation to protect the rights of all men and property are enforced in accordance with the various oaths of public officers, the textile strike will not last for two weeks. And if it should be authoritatively announced that the government of the United States is not going to finance the strike by supplying sustenance to the strikers, it will probably not last for more than one week.

New Boxing Card Looks Promising

Complete boxing card for the Rossville arena Monday night was announced Thursday morning by Promoter Buren Morgan. Jake Denning, who fights Berry Baggett in the feature 10-round bout, is the champion of the Carolinas light-heavyweights and a very colorful fighter. Baggett is a Chattanooga youngster who is expected to go far in the fighting game.

The card:

Berry Baggett, 180, Rossville, vs. Jake Denning, 172, Durham, N. C., ten rounds.

Grady Gentry, 134, Dalton, vs. Jack Lively, 140, Chattanooga, eight rounds.

Pat Glarherty, 160, Savannah, vs. Pug Weston, 160, Fort Oglethorpe, six rounds.

George Morgan, 109, Round Mountain, Ala., vs. Roy Bidwell, 115, Chattanooga, four rounds.

Cornbread Griffin, 123, Rossville, vs. Jim Blake, 123, Rossville, four rounds.

The first bout will get under way at 8:15 o'clock. A record crowd is expected.

Student—Yes, but I am a student.

Barbers to Hear Report of Perry

A full attendance of members of Local 415, Journeyman Barbers, is expected at the regular meeting Monday night, a special feature of which will be the report of President Geo. W. Perry, who returned this week from the annual convention of the international union at Indianapolis.

Mr. Perry told The Labor World Friday he will have some interesting items for the membership in reference to some declarations of policy as well as some changes in the laws adopted at the parent body's meeting. The convention, he said, was attended by a large number of delegates from all sections of the country, and a most constructive program was outlined for meeting the problems of the craft in the immediate future.

W. C. Birthright, former secretary of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the international union without opposition, Mr. Perry said.

Dairy Workers Give Home Store Position

Position of organized labor with respect to the policies of Roy McDonald and his so-called Home Stores is backed by Local 428, Dairy Workers, in a statement made by circular this week and addressed to the public.

"It is our sincere opinion and belief that Roy McDonald and his Home Stores are thwarting every move of the president's recovery program," the circular says. "Is there any single act that McDonald has done to aid recovery? If so, it has not come to our attention; has it to yours? Spend your money with grocers who are helping the president in his great effort in your behalf."

The circular lists union dairies as follows: Blue Grass Dairy; Cream Top Creamery, Grant-Patten Milk company, Koons Dairy, Morning Star Dairy, Sterchi & Son, United Dairies.

"The dairies listed below are non-union, and show no inclination to co-operate in the union movement," it continues: "Meadow Brook Farms, Fay B. Murphy, Southern Dairies."

On the Picket Lines

Editor The Labor World:

And the President said: "Hugh, go reat!"

* * *

If the textile strike did no more, it has smoked out Johnson, whose bitterness toward organized labor has been manifested on more than one occasion.

* * *

The textile code authority, composed wholly of employers' representatives, published a full-page advertisement in daily papers pointing out what Johnson and "those close to him in Washington" thought of the textile strike, the inference being that President Roosevelt backed the military gentleman's outburst against the union. Use your own judgment.

* * *

The incident at the Bryan Hosiery mills this week, where some sixteen workers returned to work under police protection before the management decided to close, brought out a number of interesting comments. For example, one young lady striker, espying a daily paper representative, said sweetly but clearly: "Oh, Mr. Reporter, be sure and print in your paper that the Bryan mill is running full blast, with everybody satisfied. Just one big happy family."

* * *

It may or may not be significant, but the first blow of a practically four-weeks strike involving 10,000 textile workers was struck on the day the police were called in to "quell a riot."

* * *

Lookout Oil Refining company, according to daily paper announcements, has announced a general wage boost of 8 to 10 per cent. Better business is given as the reason for the action. The Lookout plant has also been recently organized.

* * *

"I urge that every one of you consider and analyze the source and motive back of every report you read."—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

* * *

When Johnson, former NRA head, proclaimed that the textile workers had violated an agreement not to strike, that was NEWS. It rated a streamer head in the daily press. But when the Winant committee, upon investigation, found the right to strike was fully reserved in the June agreement, that was placed 'way down in the body of the report, and "made" the market page in most papers in one short sentence. Three cheers for the Fourth Estate—the great "molders of public opinion."

STRIKER.

The creation of civilized order is the victory of persuasion over force. —Plato.

H. Arnold Morgan Attorney-at-Law

In the stress occasioned by the textile strike and other major matters during the past few weeks, The Labor World overlooked an item of interest to trades unionists generally in Chattanooga and vicinity.

On or about Sept. 15, it was announced that Horace Arnold Morgan had passed the bar examination and been admitted to practice in the state of Tennessee. Mr. Horace Arnold Morgan, ladies and gentlemen, in case you didn't know, is business agent of Local 428, Dairy Workers, and to his untiring efforts and level-headedness is due in large part the fact that the local dairy workers are progressing splendidly with their organization movement, having signed contracts with all local plants except three, two of these being small.

Mr. Morgan received high honors for his class at the Chattanooga College of Law, and The Labor World reflects the sentiment of scores of local friends when it wishes and predicts for him a most successful career in his chosen profession. He is now employed at the United Dairies, but plans to open a law office at some time in the near future.

STRIKE BLAME

"Certain of the employers are taking the position they will not re-employ workers who have been guilty of 'overt acts,' they alone to be the judges of what constitutes an 'overt act.' They say nothing, however, of many overt acts committed by foremen, superintendents and straw bosses who have for the past year aggravated the situation by petty intimidations, threats, etc., against the workers.

"It is not now and never has been our policy to uphold lawlessness, but there are unquestionably some acts committed under stress such as we have experienced for the past four weeks which under different circumstances would be regarded as absolutely harmless and unworthy of notice.

"As I stated in the mass meeting for workers and their friends at Warner park last Sunday, there has been absolutely no violence or untoward acts of lawlessness, and the governor, the sheriff, the police commissioner and all law-enforcement agencies are entitled to credit for having kept their heads and refused to be swayed by the appeals of newspapers and labor haters in their effort to create a militaristic reign of terror such as was experienced in Georgia, North and South Carolina and other states, and which was indirectly responsible for major riots and the taking of several lives."

Situation at presstime was unchanged so far as practical results are concerned, but representatives of the strikers expressed hope of at least some agreements through conferences with various mill representatives which were scheduled for the day.

In the meantime, striking employes of every mill are more than ever determined that they will secure some guarantee of protection against discriminations and intimidations before they will return to their jobs.

strongly emphasized. It is a tremendous thing to have gained.

"Hitherto all the code provisions have been subject to rule by the code authority. The stretch-out has been imposed upon us by the Bruere board under the code authority.

"Stretch-Out Killed."

"Now, on the basis of the Winant board's report we shall have at once these things:

"First, a textile board of labor relations, with jurisdiction over the entire textile field. This board will have in its hands the administration of the labor provisions of the code. It will be an impartial board and we have reason to believe it will rank with the steel board of labor relations, which labor unanimously supports. It will be an impartial board, completely beyond the influence of mill management. This board also will handle 7-A complaints.

Second, a textile work assignments control board, to deal with the stretch-out, this board to contain a representative of labor, a representative of employers and an impartial chairman. The work-load cannot be increased until Feb. 1 and thereafter it can be increased only upon proof by the employers. The period from now to February will be a period of study which will result, we are confident, in real reduction of the stretch-out. We have at least killed the stretch-out.

"This machinery is to be fixed in the code by presidential action.

"The president undoubtedly will act swiftly, by executive order."

Code Authorities Lose Power.

The report pointed out that the Winant board recommended that the proposed textile labor relations board have full jurisdiction over the administration and enforcement of not only Section 7-A, but also of all other labor provisions on the textile codes, including such provisions as have been adopted with reference to the stretch-out. It adds:

"In other words, the whole administration of the labor provisions of the textile codes is taken away from code authorities, and given to an official impartial federal board. The gain of that one thing alone is worth the whole cost of the strike."

The substance of the Winant board report is declared to be a "flat contradiction of the claims of the employers with respect to the present stretch-out practices of textile mills; and has completely cleared the good faith of the United Textile Workers in calling the strike."

some time that others would be "consolidated."

The Trainmen's opinion of McDonald's policies, sent The Labor World this week by Secretary J. M. Brien, of Lodge 215, follows:

Whereas, we have operating in our community a chain of stores known as the Home Stores and in connection therewith is operated a bakery, a dairy, a restaurant and a print shop which produces the Free Press. We are reliably informed that one Roy McDonald is owner, general manager and general dictator of these stores and their subsidiaries. This is the same Roy McDonald who is self-styled an individualist, with great knowledge of our social and economic conditions and often has spoken on these subjects before civic clubs and made other public utterances; and,

Whereas, Mr. McDonald has been quoted in substance as saying that he is opposed to organized labor and collective bargaining, to labor's present high wage scale and standard of living; that wages, generally, should have been cut in half in 1929 and that the present depression will not end until wages are cut further and further; he has also been quoted as saying that railway employes should be put on a 12-hour basis with the referred to wage-cut; that he refuses to employ union men of the building trades or pressmen's union and employs out-of-town men instead of our union tradesmen here, who are out of employment; apparently, he discharged or "fired" one of his store managers because he donated, from his own pocket, to help feed some laboring people in East Lake, probably because they were on an authorized strike; and,

Whereas, a few years ago, Mr. McDonald's Home Stores advertised extensively in the Chattanooga daily papers, all of which employ union men and operate under union regulations, but apparently, this did not coincide with his rugged individualism, so he began to publish his non-union throw-sheet, the "Chattanooga Free Press," which is his appeal to laboring people to spend their union-earned dollars in a non-union market; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this lodge take official cognizance of Mr. McDonald's actions and attitude toward labor generally, that we acquaint our membership with same in order that they may spend their earnings where they will be appreciated and that we condemn his actions and attitude as violative of the principles of this Brotherhood; and, be it further

Resolved, That copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this meeting and made a part thereof, and also, copies be furnished both our daily papers and The Labor World, notifying them of our action.

MORE ABOUT

ROTARY CLUB

was given the misleading letter signed "Striker," I am,

Sincerely yours,
A. SHELBY OCHS,
President,
Chattanooga Rotary Club.

Sept. 24. 1934.

Mr. A. Shelby Ochs, President,
Chattanooga Rotary Club,
City.

Dear Mr. Ochs:

We have your letter of the 22nd, complaining of a statement made by a Labor World correspondent that Mr. John S. Fletcher introduced a resolution before Rotary condemning the textile strikers.

I am very glad you called our attention to this obvious error, and hasten to express sincere regret. You are doubtless aware, by this time, that the reference was to another civic club, and, being a newspaper man yourself, will understand how such unfortunate mistakes occur.

Had I given the matter proper attention, would have known Rotary could not have adopted such a resolution, in view of its principles of Brotherly Love as expressed through a framed declaration which hangs in your office. It is to the everlasting credit of your organization that no such resolution was passed, and The Labor World is deserving of censure for seeming carelessness in so stating.

Our correspondent, of course, was chiding the daily papers for their highly colored and biased "news" and editorials with reference to the textile strike, and I assure you the paragraph was correct in the main.

Your members are doubtless aware, as is a great majority of our citizenship, of the bitter and acrimonious attitude of the daily papers during this strike, and I am quite sure they will be tolerant with our little "slip."

Regret very much your implied doubt as to the desire of The Labor World to be accurate, and assure you it has been a set purpose of this publication during its eighteen years' existence to observe all the ethics of the profession, and to fairly, accurately and truthfully present and defend the cause of the workers, without fear or favor.

May I congratulate the gentlemen of Rotary on the fact that they did not add to the stress of one of the most tragic experiences through which our beloved country has ever passed.

Will gladly make correction in our next issue.

Sincerely yours,
R. M. COOKE,
Editor The Labor World.

Standard Pickets Report All Quiet

"Everything is still quiet at the Standard and Thatcher plants," says a report from the pickets at those places. "We have had good order all the time we have been on strike, and we hope we can keep it that way. Following are some that have contributed supplies this week: Rogers grocery, Red Bank; farmers at Falling Water, A. C. Kidwell, Cagler restaurant, H. H. Price, Pierce Cash Market, Robinson drug store, George Anderson, G. W. Baker, R. S. Simpson and W. H. Graham.

"The Modern Beauty shop has also given the girls free shampoos and hair sets, devoting each Tuesday to this complimentary service."

The report is signed by H. D. Ransom, W. L. Williams, B. O. Lawson, Maud Walker, Lona Gill, Mrs. R. C. Stowe and Edith Nuckolls.

VOLUNTEER WORKERS REPORT.

Following report, signed by Mary Lou Agee and Lester Wade, is from strikers at the Volunteer:

"We wish to thank the following for their assistance: Clark Bros., for radio; Dan Garvin, tent; Willingham & Co., lumber; Hatfield & Keef, stove; DeArmond's, sandwiches and coffee; American Lava company, electricity; McPherson Market, Krystal No. 2, Quick Lunch, supplies."

WHY ROY M'DONALD'S SO-CALLED 'HOME STORES' ARE BEING PICKETED:

Anti-union policy of McDonald's organization is a matter of long standing. In years gone by the Chattanooga Typographical Union has repeatedly made efforts to secure the co-operation of Roy McDonald with the labor movement of Chattanooga, but always met with the excuse that the size of his printing plant did not justify the full-time services of a journeyman printer. The union offered to grant him the use of the union label in his shop on a part-time employment basis, but this offer was refused. Due to the fact that the McDonald printing plant was a small one and he did not enter into competition with other printing plants in the city no campaign was waged against his plant.

A little more than a year ago Roy McDonald enlarged his printing plant and took over the publication of E. T. Bales' weekly sports paper, changed the name to the Chattanooga Free Press and started distributing it free as a booster sheet for his grocery organization. Mr. Bales' sports paper was being published in a union printing plant.

A committee from Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89 conferred with McDonald in an effort to secure an agreement whereby union printers and pressmen would be employed in his plant. McDonald refused to consider such a proposition, stating he was an "individualist," and would not allow any organization to control his employes. He stated that his employes would "work any hours I see fit to designate and perform any task I may require of them." He further stated that "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 by not ordering all wages cut 50 per cent," claiming that such action would have immediately ended the depression.

A committee from the Trades and Labor Council also conferred with McDonald and met with the same attitude from him as did the Typographical Union committee.

He then imported a printer and a pressman from another state to work in his plant when there were many unemployed printers and pressmen in Chattanooga—local men whose homes are here.

Because of McDonald's attitude the Trades and Labor Council placed the McDonald organization on its "unfair list" more than a year ago. During the past year the Chattanooga Typographical Union has waged a silent but effective publicity campaign against the McDonald organization. The McDonald throwsheet, at the time of its inauguration, was ballyhooed by McDonald as being a wonderful opportunity for the downtrodden merchant to secure cheap advertising in a widely distributed medium. Mc Donald expressed hopes of entering the daily newspaper field within a few months. A number of Home Stores have been closed, several have been "consolidated," and at least two have been disguised with a different color front.

Heretofore we have not found it necessary to use the daily press in our fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization. Neither have we previously deemed it necessary to picket the Home Stores, although we have considered such action several times.

However, we believe the public should be informed of the real issues behind the prsent picketing of the Home Stores, and for that reason present the above facts.

Last week we authorized the picketing of the Home Stores because of McDonald's latest alleged affront to labor — the discharge of a valued employe because he extended aid to striking textile workers. Inasmuch as that action was the direct cause of placing of pickets, it is not the sole reason for picketing of the Home Stores, as we show by the above statement of facts. Eventually we would have been forced to picket the Home Stores—the action mentioned above merely brought the situation to a head sooner than was expected.

We wish to thank the public for the splendid co-operation it is giving us in our fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization, and to assure everyone that picketing of the Home Stores will be conducted in an orderly manner with the sole object of reminding the public of the unfairness of the McDonald organization.

The picketing is being done in the name of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council because the Council is the representative body of organized labor in Chattanooga and the fight against the unfair business policies of the McDonald organization is being waged for the entire organized labor movement of Chattanooga and surrounding territory.

Discrimination In Hundreds Of Cases Is Shown

Union Accuses Employers of Using Terroristic Tactics and Refusing Jobs to Employes Active in Big Strike.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The first series of complaints from the textile workers, arising out of discriminations by employers refusing to re-employ those who had been active in the national textile strike, were presented to the recently appointed textile relations board in Washington.

Formal complaint and petition was presented to the board, giving specific data affecting 555 persons refused employment in the mills at Columbus, Ga., including the Bibb, Muscogee, Eagle and Phoenix, Swift, Perkins and Bradley mills.

Thirty affidavits were included among the material also, showing the nature of the situation which these workers had to face, including evictions, treatment by militiamen and threats of mill bosses.

Material Speedily Prepared.

The speed with which this material has been assembled and prepared is evidence of the effectiveness of the organization which is being put together for the continued handling of such problems, as well as other problems growing out of the organization program of the United Textile Workers.

It is the intention of the officials of the union to press for swift decision in the handling of these issues by the textile labor relations board; and the board has expressed its desire to bring about a speedy clarification of the situation.

Thousands of Complaints.

"We do not yet know the total number of cases to be filed," said Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the organizing committee, "but it will run into thousands, all involving union members so far.

"We have every reason to believe that the textile labor relations board will proceed immediately and vigorously, making its own investigations if necessary. Just as fast as we can compile the complaints they will be filed. The volume of complaints shows clearly that textile manufacturers will comply with the terms of the Winant board's report only under pressure."

President's Plan Approved.

The United Textile Workers will gladly agree to the industrial truce proposal contained in the president's radio broadcast of Sept. 30, it was officially announced at headquarters of the union in the Carpenters' building here.

"Conditioned upon our right to organize freely, we agree to the proposal that there be a period free from industrial conflict," said Chairman Gorman. "This will be nothing new for the United Textile Workers of America. We sought peace throughout. The record speaks for itself. We offered to use the machinery created by the government in order to avoid conflict.

Anti-Union Employers Rebuked.

"We were faced by employers who thought they could break our union by resort to conflict. That test has been passed. The president's address was, as we see it, a cutting rebuke to that type of employers. This is true, not only in connection with the truce proposal, but in that portion of the address in which the president pointed out that while employers were demanding the right to organize themselves adequately to promote their legitimate interests it was but natural that the workers should seek and obtain a statutory declaration of their constitutional right to organize.

"It must be clear to all that the administration is determined that labor's right to organize and bargain collectively shall be fully recognized. On that basis and with proper governmental machinery available, as it now is in our industry, a truce is the only sensible proposition. As for the textile industry, our purpose now is to proceed to a stabilization of the industry and the creation of a new prosperity that shall include all who have their being within that industry.

"The president's speech has put anti-union employers in a position in which it will be extremely difficult for them to maintain their practice of discrimination. He has pointed the way to them and they can take their choice as to whether they are on their honor or on the spot. We shall use to the full the machinery of peaceful adjustment. If there is conflict it will have to be forced by employers."

HEDGES-WALSH-WEIDNER WORKERS STILL OUT.

Approximately 550 Machinists, Boilermakers and Electricians who walked out of the two local plants of the Hedges-Walsh-Weidner company this week, were still out Friday. Sam C. Godfrey, representative of the Boilermakers' International union, arrived in Chattanooga Friday to assist his members, while W. R. Barney, business agent of Lodge 56, and a representative of the Grand Lodge, and E. E. McDaniels, of the Electricians, are representing their respective crafts.

Federal conciliation was in prospect Friday morning, it was said, but nothing of a definite nature concerning a settlement could be announced at presstime.

Crane Workers Will Discuss Co. Proposal

Employes of Big Local Plant Will Meet Saturday Afternoon at Roosevelt Hall.

Strikers at the Crane Enamelware company, closed recently by a walkout, will meet Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Roosevelt hall to discuss the terms of a counter-proposal offered as a basis of settlement by officials of the company.

The walkout, which followed 100 per cent. organization in the enameling department, affected the entire plant when workers in other departments organized and became members of the various crafts represented.

Efforts to secure an agreement prior to the strike proved futile, but since the plant was closed negotiations have been in progress which it is believed will result in a settlement of the differences existing.

A full attendance of the workers affected is requested at the meeting Saturday afternoon.

Tennessee-Georgia Textile Council to Meet at LaFayette

Announcement was made Friday by John Broom, of Dalton, president of the Tennessee-Georgia District Textile council, that the council will meet at Hosiery Workers' hall, LaFayette, Saturday, Oct. 6, at 2:30 p.m.

"Any local affiliated with the United Textile Workers which wishes to affiliate with this council may do so," Mr. Broom said, "by sending delegates to this meeting."

USE OF TROOPS PROTESTED.

Jackson, Miss.—Representatives of five railroad brotherhoods in McComb passed a resolution condemning action of business men in asking that national guardsmen be sent there in connection with the textile workers' strike.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS GAIN THROUGH A. F. L.

Hatcher Lists Many Betterments Secured.

STATE SECRETARY GOES INTO RECORDS

Points Out Benefits of Co-Operation With American Federation.

Following article concludes an interesting series written for Labor World readers by Mr. E. R. Hatcher, of Nashville, secretary of the Tennessee Federation of Post Office Clerks. This concluding instalment points out the many benefits secured by the Postal Workers through affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and The Labor World expresses appreciation for its readers to Mr. Hatcher for his timely and interesting series of articles:

The first big accomplishment of the postoffice clerks after their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor was the abolishment of the fining system. There had been instituted a system by which an employe charged with any shortcoming or disobedience of the rules, no matter how trivial, was assessed fines ranging from 25 cents to $25.00, which were deducted from his meager salary. A suit was instituted by the union clerks in the court of claims for the recovery of fines thus assessed. The winning of this suit put a stop forever to this practice.

The major activities of the federation were directed toward the removal of the so-called "gag" orders which deprived civil service employes of the constitutional right to directly petition congress for the redress of grievances or to engage in any activity seeking to improve their working conditions. This fight was won on August 24, 1912, when the 62nd congress enacted the Lloyd-LaFollette bill restoring the right of petition and reaffirming the right of government employes to organize and affiliate with other organized workers.

This one activity in behalf of the postal workers by the American Federation of Labor fully justifies our contention that affiliation with labor is essential if we are to maintain our liberties and make proportionate contribution to labor's program for a fuller and freer life for all wage earners.

Were the gag orders in effect today there could be no open fight by postal employes for any sort of adjustments. There could be no insistent letters sent to members of congress to acquaint them of the desires of the postal workers. The great value of this legislation is today apparent. During all the years prior to the formation of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks not a single measure of remedial legislation was enacted. The removal of the gag orders were almost entirely due to the efforts of the N. F. P. O. C. and the A. F. of L.

The following list of legislative enactments represents only a portion of the progress made by the post office clerks and the other organized workers since affiliation:

1907—Salary Classification Law
1912—Eight-hour law
1912—Weekly rest law
1912—Right of Petition restored
1916—Compensation for injury law
1916—Holiday compensatory time law
1918—Salary increase legislation
1919—Salary increase legislation
1920—Retirement legislation
1920—Salary reclassification
1920—Sick leave
1920—Credit for substitute work
1921—Credit for military service
1921—Restoration of special clerks
1922—Amendatory retirement legislation
1925—Salary increase
1925—Liberalization sick leave law
1925—Higher rate of overtime
1926—Liberalization of retirement law
1928—Liberalization of sick leave law
1928—Wage differential for night work
1930—Liberalization of retirement law
1931—44-hour week law

With affiliation came the needed strength to make known to the public and the congress the postal workers' grievances and to secure the necessary legislative correctives. These workers should forever be grateful to the great organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L. for what they have done for them through all these years even through the last session of congress and for what they will gladly continue to do in the future.

Cement Workers Gain Through Organization

Secure Improved Conditions for Members by Collective Bargaining Route.

An outstanding example of the benefits of united action on the part of workers is seen in the improved working conditions secured for members of Local 18269, Cement Workers.

T. L. Sullivan, publicity chairman for the new local, explained to The Labor World this week a few of the benefits secured by the organization since its formation only a short time ago.

"We organized a little over a year ago, with just a few members," Mr. Sullivan said. "Now our mill is just about 100 per cent unionized. We have been recognized by our company, and have an agreement which includes increased wages and several adjustments in working conditions, one of which is that if a workman is called from his home to repair a breakdown he receives three hours' pay as a minimum. We have been holding interesting meetings, and our members are enthused over the progress we have made and prospects for the future."

Officers of Local 18269 are: President, T. J. Adams; vice-president, Will Gray; financial secretary, Fred Sullivan; recording secretary, Owen Barnes. The local is affiliated with Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

Shoe Repairers Continue Gains

Local 620, Shoe Repairers, continues to gain in membership and effectiveness, according to a report given The Labor World this week by F. L. Dixon and Frank Davis, as follows:

"Boot and Shoe Workers union, Local No. 620, met Thursday night in the Odd Fellows hall on Seventh street, with a good attendance present. J. R. Marshall presided, with F. L. Dixon, business agent, acting secretary. After the regular business of the local was attended to, several matters were discussed. J. R. Marshall led the discussion, announcing that he would like to have every shoe worker in Chattanooga become a member of the local, and from the attendance Thursday night it looks very favorable. Next meeting will be held next Thursday, when a much larger attendance is expected. Several matters of importance at that time will be taken up in the interest of the Boot and Shoe Workers union, as well as offering assistance to striking local workers. Let every member, if possible, attend.

"FRANK DAVIS."

LOSES BLUE EAGLE.

Washington.—The NRA has deprived the Finck Cigar company, San Antonio, Tex., of the right to display any NRA insignia. This action was taken on the recommendation of the national labor relations board, which found the company had discharged three employes in violation of Section 7A of the recovery act.

CONVENTION HEARS REPORTS OF GREAT MEMBERSHIP GAINS

Total of Idle Still Gaining, Green Reports

No Improvement Shown Up to Mid-August, Labor Head Says —Relief Rolls Show Critical Problem.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Unemployment continued to increase up to mid-August, according to American Federation of Labor estimates, based on government indexes, President William Green, of the federation, reports.

"The critical nature of our present unemployment is shown by the relief rolls," President Green said. "In June this year, the number of families on relief was 3,716,755 (preliminary), almost as many as in June last year when the figure was 3,789,026; preliminary reports for July indicate that relief need was greater in July than June, and well above the level of July of last year."

"Toward the end of August and the first part of September," Green further said, "industry began to quicken its pace somewhat with the fall busy season, but thus far employment gains this year have been far less than last year.

"In August, the number without work in industry was 10,834,000 (preliminary) compared to 10,793,000 in July (revised). The dull summer season in retail stores added 40,000 to the unemployed, and the drought on farms meant loss of work for nearly 50,000 farm laborers; railroads dropped 17,000 from their payrolls. These employment losses more than offset the slight gains in industries where the fall busy season was already beginning.

"In September, trade union figures show fall activity increasing. Reports from unions in twenty-four cities, covering the first half of the month, show that members were finding a few temporary jobs in street transportation, water transportation, manufacturing, clothing trades, theaters and printing, but employment gains were small.

"August and September this year show a strong contrast to the same months last year. In August last year, 800,000 went back to work in the president's re-employment program; this year no effort was made to create jobs and unemployment increased by 40,000.

"The number unemployed in August, 1934, was back almost to the level of August, 1933. Our estimate, based on government figures, shows 10,834,000 out of work in August this year; in August last year 10,960,000.

"Government emergency work gave employment to 2,249,000 in August—625,000 on PWA, 357,000 in conservation camps, and an average of 1,267,000 on the ERA (emergency relief) work program. This is nearly 100,000 more than in July, chiefly in the ERA work program. Deducting those on emergency work from the total without work in industry, we find that 8,585,000 were without jobs of any sort."

TRUCE PREVENTS STRIKE OF 40,000 LONGSHOREMEN

New York City.—A strike of 40,000 longshoremen in Atlantic ports from Maine to Virginia was stayed when representatives of the International Longshoremen's association agreed to accept a proposal by the steamship operators that they await the outcome of deliberations of President Roosevelt's arbitration board, now considering the situation on the Pacific coast. The strike had been expected to be called Oct. 1.

Total Strength Federation Near Six Millions.

ADD HALF-MILLION SINCE LAST MEET

NRA Criticized for Failure to Bring Expected Benefits — Demands Greater Labor Participation in Administration.

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—Emphasis on big gains in trade union organization and sharp criticism of the national recovery administration featured the report of the American Federation of Labor Executive Council, submitted to the federation's fifty-fourth annual convention here. The convention, which opened Oct. 1, was one of the largest ever held by the A. F. of L.

"Progress of organization has continued steadily and gains have been far greater than nominal gains on dues-paying membership would indicate," the report says.

"Low wages, irregular work, and deficits created by years of depression prevent many from complete identification with our movement," the report adds. "However, the tide of those who feel a kinship with the cause of labor—the cause of the underprivileged—steadily rises higher."

Half Million Gain Shown.

Membership of affiliated unions for the year ending Aug. 31, 1934, is given in the report as 2,608,011, an increase of 481,215 members over the average membership for the twelve months last year. Total membership for August, 1934, was 2,824,689, an increase of paid membership in August, 1934, over the average paid membership of the affiliated unions last year of 697,893.

The report points out that the figures include only dues-paying members and that a great number were unable to pay dues because of unemployment. It adds:

"There are many others who are just as loyal trade unionists and who are just as desirous to have the trade unions represent them in collective bargaining, but who are unable to keep their dues fully paid to date because of inadequate employment. On the basis of reports from our international unions and careful examination of the records of local unions affiliated directly with the A. F. of L., we estimate that the total organized strength of the labor movement at the beginning of September, 1934, was 5,650,000. . . We estimate that the total number who look to the federation as their representative agency cannot be less than 12,000,000. In making these estimates we have chosen always the conservative figures."

NRA Failure Charged.

The report devotes much attention to the national recovery administration and attacks it for failing to bring about the purposes of the national industrial recovery act. Perpetuation of the NRA is demanded, with stronger compliance machinery and strict enforcement of the collective bargaining rights of Section 7-A.

More power for labor in code enforcement and administration is also demanded in the report. Labor representatives on the code authorities, a better balance between labor and capital on the industrial relations boards and a provision that codes be reopened on request of labor are asked.

What Next!

Energy in ocean water is now being used to drive refrigerating machinery in a floating ice factory off the coast of Brazil. Warm surface water (about 75 degrees Fahrenheit) is pumped into a fireless "boiler." There a vacuum is maintained by water at about 60 degrees Fahrenheit, pumped from a depth of more than 2,000 feet. The surface water boils in consequence. The steam generated drives turbines which in turn cause refrigerating machinery to freeze ice at the rate of 1,000 tons daily.

FIVE-DAY WEEK PROPOSED FOR WOOL FELT INDUSTRY

Washington.—Public hearing on proposals for revision of the code for the wool felt manufacturing industry, one of which would establish a five-day week, have been scheduled by the national recovery administration. The hearing will be held Friday, Oct. 5, in Washington, under A. Henry Thurston, acting deputy administrator.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, rundown condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The Modest Proposal of the N. A. M.

The National of Manufacturers meets President Roosevelt's suggestion of an industrial truce by denouncing labor for striking, and making the following proposal:

"The employers of the nation will welcome the proclamation of a truce period, similar to that in the war, during which neither group nor the government will attempt to change existing relations by force."

In plainer words, N. A. M. proposes that the government, for an indefinite period, shall give up any attempt to enforce its own laws, which members of the association are breaking systematically and continuously, with the full approval and support of their organization.

The recovery act specifically confirms labor in the right to organize for collective bargaining, "without interference, influence or coercion" by employers. After ignoring and flouting that law for months, the National Association of Manufacturers now demands that this condition of organized lawlessness shall be sanctioned by the government for the period of the truce, and that labor shall not strike to enforce its legal rights.

A more impudent, preposterous proposal never was made.

If the association had any elements of candor or intellectual integrity, it would acknowledge that practically all the strikes of which it complains were efforts made by labor to enforce the law which employers blatantly and openly ignore.

Employers, for whom the association assumes to speak, have so far been the greatest gainers from the NRA. Profits have gone up faster than wages, and much faster than the buying power of wages. The National City Bank of New York—hardly a pro-labor institution—has given some figures showing the contrast between corporation profits in the first half of 1934, under the NRA, and the deficits of the same half of 1933, before the NRA, which are no less than startling.

> The iron and steel industry, taken together, ran up a deficit of $44,636,000 in the first half of 1933, and collected a profit of $6,129,000 in the same period of 1934. Bethlehem Steel was in the red $9,089,000 in the first period, and in the black $2,540,000 in the second. Cities Service lost $818,000 in 1933, and profited $2,797,000 in 1934. The Radio Corporation of America went in the red $1,268,000 last year, and took in profits of $1,772,000 this year.

While piling up these profits, which nothing but the recovery program can explain, almost every industry represented by the National Association of Manufacturers is breaking the law which brought it prosperity, and denying labor the right to organize. And the association now proposes to make this "existing relation" permanent.

For chilly impudence and immaculate nerve, that scheme certainly deserves the prize.

The Peace Outlook in Textiles

President Roosevelt's appointment of the steel labor relations board to double as the textile labor relations board is regarded in Washington as a masterpiece. This board, composed of Judge Walter P. Stacey, of the supreme court of North Carolina; James A. Mullenback, of Chicago, and Henry A. Wiley, retired admiral of the U. S. navy, has experience, character and prestige.

Judge Stacey's position speaks for itself. He has served on five railroad arbitration boards. Admiral Wiley has also served on railroad arbitration boards, and they keep coming back to him for further services. Mullenback got his start in labor relations by acting as peacemaker for the clothing workers of Chicago—no job for a timid man. Together, as the steel board, they held an election in the steel mills at Huntington, W. Va. The regular union had a majority of all votes cast, and the board, brushing aside the contention of the steel companies, that majorities do not count against a company union, certified that this corporation would have to deal with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The board has a very difficult job on hand in the textile difficulty. It used to be said that great numbers of people on both sides who lived through the Civil war never learned for thirty years that the aforesaid war was over. A similar state of what might be called "suspended information" seems to afflict a large number of textile mill bosses, particularly in the south.

They are refusing to put union workers back to work. In several communities, these workers are being evicted from their company-owned houses. One father writes from a textile town that his two sons have been discharged for the crime of going out with their fellows; and that one of them, whose wife is expecting an addition to the family in a few weeks, nevertheless has been thrown out of the house they occupied.

No good ever was done or ever will be by such tactics. They are merely instances of half-baked "frightfulness" which angers much more than it frightens. To be fair, only a minority of the mill owners have resorted to this stupid bullying; and it is believed that they will yield to the insistence of the new board.

Wages and Babies

Some years ago, the children's bureau of the Department of Labor studied the infant death rate in seven cities, and found a startling and very close connection between family income and child mortality.

In families where the father earned less than $450 a year, 167 babies out of every 1,000 born died before reaching the age of one year.

In families where the father earned between $550 and $650 a year, 116 babies out of each 1,000 died in their first year.

But in families where the father earned $1,250 or more, only 59 babies out of each 1,000 died before their first birthday.

With those figures in mind, turn to some other figures just published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, telling of the wages paid by textile mills in May of this year. Workers in cotton mills got $12.63 a week. From that the scale ranged upward until workers in carpets and rugs averaged $18.26 a week. If they lost no time, cotton mill workers would get $656.76 a year, and carpet makers $949.52.

In other words, none of these textile workers got enough incomes to give babies coming to the family a reasonable hold on life. And the actual receipts are decidedly lower than these figures, because of part time.

What civilized country can be contented when one of his big and basic industries is managed like that?

Another Big Step for Labor

Agreement between labor and the Aluminum Company of America marks another big step for labor. Perhaps the fact of unionization is the most important factor. Under the ruling of the national labor relations board, the union will speak for all employes where the union can show a majority within its membership. The Aluminum company has been a real foe of unionism and the ending of a strike in agreement is a matter of great importance to labor.

A Bad Smelling Business

And now the American people learn from the senate that American munitions makers are willing to sell gas bombs and machine guns to be used against their own countrymen who are striking against overwork and under pay. All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten a hand engaged in that business.

The Growing Munitions Scandal

The senate investigation of the munitions business has brought out a mass of facts, some of which might have been copied from the minutes of a swindlers' convention, and some from a comic opera.

King George V steps down from his throne, and uses his royal influence to get the Polish gun contract for a British firm, and edge out the intruding Americans.

American ships are sent to Turkey and to South America to serve, as Senator Nye well said, as a salesman's sample case for our own munitions dealers.

And, on the other hand, our war department releases the designs of the best known anti-aircraft gun so that it can be sold abroad; a lobbyist for the Electric Boat company writes his employers that he has fixed things in Washington to do away with "sales resistance" by government officials; and an assistant Secretary of the Navy promises in writing to do "everything in my power" to steer naval contracts to this same boat firm.

Of such as these are the kingdoms of munitions mongers. Some evidence, also, has been presented to show that the war profiteers deliberately foment international distrust and suspicion to boost their sales of arms; and more such evidence is promised.

If such intrigues cannot be stopped, congress had better begin drawing plans to make the supply of arms and munitions a government monopoly.

Coupon Clippers Lose Jobs

A considerable number of investors lost their jobs as coupon cilppers when the trustees for the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway announced that interest on the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham Railroad general mortgage 4 per cent and income mortgage 5 per cent bonds would be omitted.

As reasons for the omission the trustees cited the recent wage increase for railway employes, the possible burden the pension act for railway employes passed by the recent session of congress, and the possible enactment of an occupational tax, proposed in an ordinance pending before the municipal council of St. Louis, Mo., on each railroad per mile of all tracks inside the city limits.

The trustees said the bankers would not loan them any money, and that therefore they had to conserve their cash to insure the payment of actual operating expenses.

The coupon clippers who were dependent for their living on the bond interest, if any of them belong in that class, will now experience the sensations imposed by railroad executives upon thousands of railway employes who have been mercilessly tossed into the army of the unemployed in recent years.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers is evidently looking for trouble. The board advised employers to ignore the ruling of the national labor relations board requiring employers to accept the majority rule in collective bargaining with employers.

The majority was laid down by the labor board in the case of the Houde Engineering Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y., the board directing the corporation to recognize the United Auto Workers' union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and negotiate through it exclusively as the representative of the majority of the company's employes.

The manufacturers' organization urged employers to "continue to abide by the long-standing and authoritative interpretations upholding the minority groups to deal with their employers." Employers should uphold the minority group rights "until competent judicial authority has declared otherwise," the statement said.

As to what the courts will rule on the manufacturers' contention, no certain prediction can be made. But judging by recent decisions and the present temper of the American people, the courts will uphold the national labor relations board and the National Association of Manufacturers will find it has played the wrong horse, as it has so frequently done in its long career of anti-unionism.

All in all, the late World war was a pleasant episode for the officials of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours company. Before the war, they received bonuses of $135,000 in 1913 and $171,000 in 1914.

But in 1915 their bonuses jumped to $3,375,000; in 1916, to $6,514,000; and even after this country got into the war and tried to keep some rein on the munitions makers, du Pont bonuses were $2,927,000 in 1917, $3,170,000 in 1918, and even $857,000 in 1919. The officials of that company must have been sorry to see the war end.

The Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance knows the immense value of the labor press to the labor movement and frequently has emphasized that the labor press and its advertisers are deserving of the wholehearted support of every trade unionist. The recent convention of the organization in Minneapolis, in following up praise of the labor press in the past, said, in approving General President Flore's biennial report:

> "As has been so ably stated by our general president, we are deeply indebted to the labor press for the excellent co-operation shown us in our various campaigns of organization. The labor press throughout the nation has accomplished much to advance the interests of organized labor and has kept a large percentage of the membership advised on matters of interest and importance to our workers.
> "We concur in the request of our general president that we support the labor press and its advertisers. To reciprocate is but meeting the labor press half way. In its success is our success, and our support of its efforts will but result in greater benefits to our organization."

Signs along the road indicate a quick change in NRA.

Gen. Johnson, perhaps the one man who could have done the job to which he was assigned, is on the way.

So it is. They come, they linger a while and then they go. Napoleon, Caesar, Hannibal, Aristotle, Webster, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin—all long since on their way. But they left markers by which we still know they once walked the earth and swayed either the actions or the actions or the thought, or both, of millions.

Here is an item of interesting news.

Throughout the strike of textile workers, the union has not had one locked file case in strike headquarters—not even a place where so much as a postage stamp could be locked up. That's how secretive they are.

It is a strike conducted in a gold fish bowl. There probably are secrets, but they are kept in the heads of leaders. Records are the most open things in the world and there probably are few secrets not in the records, except for a constant knowledge of the plans of management.

Georgia has carved a new niche in the hall of shame.

Georgia has thrown men and women into a military stockade, just as if Georgia had forsaken civilization and gone feudal all over again.

Georgia has done a shameful thing. Gov. Talmadge, safe again after election, threw all impartiality to the winds and went after the textile strikers as if they were an alien foe.

Stories coming out of Georgia are heart-breaking and maddening.

"Can such things be?" is the question that comes naturally.

The answer is that they can be, they are.

Gov. Talmadge has written himself a record that stands among all the records of governors in the great strike as the high of governmental outrage.

* * *

While the strike raged at height there came out before the committee testimony about the ing wealth of munitions manufacturers. Gas bomb sales went up 5 to 10 per cent.

Munitions profits were above have been truly fabulous.

At the same time the textile ily came again into the picture.

On the one side enormous and swollen profits—on the other half a million strikers whose wages were so low that scarcely among them had savings enough keep them even two weeks from desperate hunger.

That's a picture of the fairness the economic world today.

Labor sees that picture and is getting tired of being the sacrifical goat. Management stands backed and asks labor to go on always. Labor says, you bend a little—give up a little. But has given until it has to be given, the fight goes on.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

GEORGIA BUSINESS INTERESTS HAIL TALMADGE TERRORISM AS BAIT TO CATCH NEW INDUSTRIES

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 4.—Business interests of Georgia hope to "cash in" on Gov. Talmadge's methods of handling the textile strike. Talmadge sent state troops into the mill towns, and either established barbed wire stockades into which strikers were herded, or forbade them to leave their homes.

The Talmadge reign of terror is being capitalized by the business interests and chambers of commerce of the state in an effort to persuade industries in other states to move to Georgia. Freedom from unionization of workers, and plenty of cheap labor at low wages, is held out as an inducement to industries to quit the northern states and move into the south.

M. O. Dunning, of Savannah, chairman of Coastal States, Inc., a promotional organization, has returned to Georgia from a business trip to New York, and predicts Georgia will get several new and large industries as a result "of the way Talmadge handled the strike."

Dunning said he conferred with northern industrialists seeking new sites for their plants, including textile, motor engine, aeronautic, automobile and musical instrument industries, and urged them to come to Georgia.

"All of those with whom I conferred were very warm in their praise of Talmadge in the way he handled the textile strike, and also of Gov. Wood in South Carolina," said Dunning.

TEXTILE RELATIONS BOARD NAMED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Personnel Regarded as Capable—Will Immediately Proceed to Investigate Alleged Discrimination Against Strikers — President Supports Majority Rule Under Section 7(a)—Other Progressive Features.

Washington, Oct. 4.—A textile relations board, as recommended in the report of the Winant textile inquiry board, has been named by President Roosevelt and will proceed immediately to attempt to straighten out the tangled situation existing in the exile industry.

The textile labor relations board, which will replace the Winant board, will be accountable, under the executive order, only to the national labor relations board. It will make quarterly and annual reports to the president through the parent board and the office of the secretary of labor. A fund of $50,000, to be expended under the direction of Secretary Perkins, is granted for the use of the board.

The powers of the new body include authorization to set up such agencies as it may see fit to investigate labor conditions affecting textiles, either on its own initiative or on complaints laid before it. It may also conduct voluntary arbitration proceedings and "exercise such powers as may be conferred upon it by any code of fair competition."

The order was issued after a final conference on its terms at the White House participated in by Donald R. Richberg, acting director of the executive council; Secretary Ickes, Charles E. Wysanski, Jr., solicitor for the department of labor, and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator.

Strong Personnel.

The membership of the board is regarded as very strong and likely to prove capable. Those named include: Judge Walter P. Stacy, of North Carolina, chairman; James A. Mullenbach, of Illinois, and Admiral Henry A. Wiley, retired.

Judge Stacy, the chairman of the new board, has had wide experience as an arbiter in industrial controversies, having been named chairman of the national steel labor relations board last June after previous experience on five railroad arbitration boards and numerous emergency boards.

Admiral Wiley has had a similar although not as broad an experience.

Mr. Mullenbach, a former member of the board of education of Chicago, is a member of the petroleum labor policy board and was appointed to the steel labor board. He has been active as a labor arbiter in the clothing trades in Chicago, where he began such work in 1912.

Gorman Charges Discrimination.

Immediate work for the new board was forecast by Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, who charged that some mill owners intended to ignore President Roosevelt's request that strikers be returned to work without discrimination. He said that "discrimination" could be proved.

Mr. Gorman, in announcing his complaint on behalf of strikers, charged that George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, indicated that individual mill operators mean to re-employ strikers according to their own dictates. He said that telegrams had been received from eight scattered sections asserting that mill owners were refusing to re-employ strikers.

Special Investigations Ordered.

In the same order which set up this board as arbitrator of all labor disputes in the far-flung textile business, Mr. Roosevelt ordered two investigations recommended by the Winant board.

The first is a study of wages and working conditions by the bureau of labor statistics. The second is a survey by the federal trade commission to determine "whether wage increases based upon reduction in hours or otherwise can, under prevailing economic conditions, be sustained."

Powers Are Granted Board.

Like the board appointed for the steel industry, the textile board is ordered to certify the results of elections conducted by workers for collective bargaining.

Not even the president, under the terms of the order, may interfere with acts or decisions of the board except where decisions involve Section 7 (a) of the national recovery act. Such cases may be taken before the national labor relations board either at the request of the textile board or at the instance of the national board.

Roosevelt Accepts Majority Rule.

In the executive order creating the textile labor relations board and outlining its powers and duties, President Roosevelt came out definitely, for what is believed to be the first time, in favor of majority rule in elections held under Section 7 (a) of the national industrial recovery act. Section 5 of the order states:

"The board shall certify the results of all elections conducted by it or by its agents to parties concerned, and the person, persons or organization certified as the choice of the majority of those voting shall be accepted, for the purpose of collective bargaining, as the representative or representatives of the employes eligible to participate in the election, without thereby denying to any individual or employes or group of employes the right to present grievances, to confer with their employers, or otherwise to associate themselves and act for mutual aid or protection."

Organized Labor Wins Long Battle For Board Member

George Forbes Named to County Body—Replaces D. M. Raulston.

Organized labor won a battle which has lasted for years when the Hamilton county court on last Monday named George Forbes, for many years active in labor affairs, as a member of the county school board. The local labor movement, through Central Body, had on several previous occasions made efforts to secure membership on the board, but each succeeding effort met with failure until Monday.

Mr. Forbes' election was the result of displacement of Mr. Raulston, who, incidentally, was reported as having been 100 per cent. friendly to labor during his membership on the board. Officers and members of the Hamilton County Federation of Teachers were high in their praises of the retiring board member, and it was considered fortunate that another friend was named in his stead.

Squire Kelso Rice, in nominating Mr. Forbes, called attention to the latter's long record of labor and civic activities. He recalled that Forbes has served as general chairman of the Memorial day committee for several years; member advisory committee of the county court for some time; was on the board of directors of the chamber of commerce; past commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans; past president Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and Tennessee Federation of Postoffice Clerks; former member of the executive council of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and other civic and labor activities.

Mr. Forbes' election was unanimous. The term is for seven years.

UNION DELAYS STRIKE UNTIL PRESIDENT ACTS

New York City.—Following word from Washington that President Roosevelt had granted a stay until Oct. 15 of his order increasing wages 10 per cent and cutting hours to 36 a week in the cotton garment industry, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union canceled plans for a general strike for the present.

The strike had been scheduled for Oct. 1, in support of the president's order, which was defied by the employers. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union had completed arrangements for a general strike in the women's branch of the industry. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and the United Garment Workers were expected to co-operate, increasing the number of workers affected to approximately 100,000.

After receipt of the news from Washington that the president had delayed his order and had directed the creation of a committee of three to hear protests, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union decided to await final action on the order before issuing the strike call.

MORE ABOUT CONVENTION

The report finds that there has been failure to bring three principal benefits expected by labor under the recovery act: Increased employment through the establishment of a shorter work week; increased purchasing power through the establishment of higher wages; the right to organize and bargain collectively without interference by the employers.

In the elimination of child labor, the codes, with few exceptions, have fulfilled expectations, the report says. Likewise, the codes are declared to have fulfilled expectations by largely eliminating industrial homework.

Hours Must Be Cut.

Of the failure of the codes to bring expected re-employment, the report says:

"It was hoped that when codes were adopted covering the majority of workers, hours would be so shortened that the millions of workers would be absorbed. This hope has not been fully realized.

"A survey of the codes adopted shows that industry has failed completely to realize the necessity for a shorter work week."

The report points out that the vast majority fix a 40-hour week or longer and that as the average work week is considerably lower, the codes have failed to solve the problem of unemployment. "It has been the constant demand of labor that hours of work be reduced to the point where the unemployed can be absorbed. It is estimated that between two and three million workers have found jobs in industry through the NRA. This is something, but it is not enough. Hours of work must be greatly reduced."

Wages Reduced to Minimum.

Codes have failed to bring the expected increase in purchasing power, the report declares, because no protection has been extended to skilled workers and the tendency of employers has been to make the minimum wage the maximum. All kinds of subterfuges have been resorted to, to reduce all wages to the minimum, it is charged.

"It seems obvious," the report says, "that codes must be revised to increase minimum wages, to eliminate groups of workers now below the minimum rates, and to protect wages of higher paid groups of employes."

Labor must be given a place in code enforcement and administration, the report declares. "Labor," the convention was told, "is one of the three elements of the new deal. As such, it has responsibilities which it is eager and able to assume. This it can only do by securing a place in all administrative and enforcement agencies set up under the codes. . . . Labor must be made an active partner in the supposed partnership of government, industry and labor."

MORE PAY FOR PRINTERS.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Buffalo newspapers have signed a contract with printers providing for an increase of 50 cents a day for all composing-room scales. The increase restores the 1929 pay level.

CONTRACTORS TO COMPLAIN OF GOVERNMENT COMPETITION

Annual Fall Meeting of Associated General Contractors in Chicago, October 22 and 23, Expected to Consider Labor Matters.

Washington, Oct. 4.—According to information secured from sources believed to be reliable here, labor matters will be the chief subject of consideration at the forthcoming annual fall meeting of the Associated General Contractors of America, in Chicago, when the delegates convene Oct. 22 and 23.

Charging that the federal government has deliberately and unfairly encouraged day labor competition and the consequent undermining of the contract system through the issuance of an executive order permitting governmental agencies to receive preferential discounts up to 15 per cent below posted minimum code prices in the direct purchase of materials, the association's board is expected to make a formal demand that the order be rescinded.

Evidence will be presented to the board showing that, in the three months since the order was issued, thousands of dollars worth of construction work which ordinarily would be offered to general contractors for competitive bids, has been diverted to the day labor system on the pretense that the governmental agencies could, with preferential purchasing power, do the work more cheaply with their own forces.

Officials of the association charge that the preferential price order constitutes out-and-out "chiseling" on the part of the government, and its own prostitution of the NRA codes which it is forcing private industry to observe. They point out that posted minimum code prices are supposed to represent the lowest prices at which producers can do business with a fair profit, and that when the government seeks for itself a preferential discount up to 15 per cent below these minimum prices it is deliberately inviting "cut-throat" and ruinous competition among producers.

MAINE JUSTICE URGES LABOR TO KILL COMPANY UNIONISM

Bangor, Me., Oct. 4.—In an address at a demonstration held by the Woodland, Me., Central Labor union, Justice Herbert E. Holmes, of the Maine superior court, urged organized labor to work for increased membership in the regular unions and to destroy "that foul travesty of unionism called the company union."

That the NRA had been "sabotaged by big business, and in many cases with the tacit consent of the NRA," declared Justice Holmes. "But I do not agree," he added, "with those labor men, who in their righteous anger, say, 'let us scrap the NRA.' If you scrap it, you will be playing into the hands of the reactionaries, who have always opposed all progressive legislation.

"Rugged individualism next time will mean the dictatorship by big business. In Europe, they call it fascism, and its first step will be to outlaw the labor unions and make it a penitentiary crime to belong to a union."

Justice Holmes advised labor to "Capture the NRA, throw out the enemies and fill their places with union labor men. Your most powerful weapon for this purpose is the strike. Labor ought not to surrender the right to strike under any consideration."

Justice Holmes, who before his appointment to the bench had been active in state politics as a liberal democrat, said his statements and opinions could not be construed as partisan politics, but principles assented in even more vigorous language by the supreme court of the United States. He declared that the scrapping of the NRA would send organized labor into the control of the "rugged individualists," and there is no hope for labor there, he asserted.

BIG PROFITS FLOW TO MOST SWEATED INDUSTRY

Washington, Sept. 20.—"The textile strike is the protest of a half million workers against intolerable conditions," said Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee of the United Textile Workers of America. In outlining the basic causes behind the strike, he added:

"Concretely, it is a protest against the 'stretch-out,' which makes the textile worker old before his or her time, as did the 12-hour day in the steel mills. It is a protest against working hours so irregular and erratic that no worker in this industry can plan for the future.

"The textile industry is over-built and over-capitalized. It admitted the first charge when it curtailed production this summer to let the market catch up. The textile workers did not do this over-building. They are not responsible for surplus mills. Yet they are asked to bear the load and the cost caused by this surplus.

"Stretch-Out" Dividends.

"No small part of the stretch-out is due to the effort to pay dividends on watered stock. In 1914 the industry was capitalized at $899,765,000, and used in that year 6,087,338 bales of cotton. In 1919 the industry was capitalized at $1,914,920,000, and used 6,807,817 bales of cotton. Capitalization had increased 112 per cent while cotton used had increased 11 per cent. Water in almost unlimited quantities had been pumped in—to be paid for by consumers and workers.

"As a sample, the Bibb company, of Georgia, in 1916 declared a stock dividend of 66 2/3 per cent. Not a dollar of new capital was invested. The next year the Bibb company declared a 20 per cent stock dividend, this making the total capitalization just double what it was when the process began. In 1918 it declared another stock dividend of 100 per cent; in 1923 one of 33 1/3 per cent, and in 1927 another 100 per cent dividend was made.

"Until the depression came, the textile industry, in spite of this stock watering, paid handsome profits. During the war years thirty cotton manufacturers netted from 24 to 212 per cent a year on their capital stock. The mills of Fall River and New Bedford ran for years with profits of from 12 to 32 per cent.

"In the seven years ending in 1924 the Botany Worsted mills, at Passaic, averaged $98 a year profit on their common stock.

Inflation and Profits.

"Then the company made a huge inflation of capital; and to get returns on this wind and water, they proclaimed a wage cut. The desperate textile strike in Passaic, in 1926, was the direct and logical result of this preposterous inflation.

"The textile industry has had its large profits by maintaining the worst sweated industry in America, with the most ingenious devices for crowding workers to the utmost limit.

"'Spinners used to tend ten sides—now they tend twenty-four. Weavers used to tend eight to twenty looms—now they tend up to 100 looms each.

"'Wages are too high in any individual textile mill unless that mill, on the basis of full time, is today operating its equipment with a little more than 50 per cent of the same number of operatives that it had on the payroll ten years ago,' says a textile trade paper.

"'Two men now do the work formerly done by nine,' one mill reports. 'Our labor cost for this department (spooling and warping) was reduced about 40 per cent . . . We were able to cut out five weavers on each shift.'

"And another mill reports that the labor cost on a given amount of cloth had been cut from 100 to $30."

Labor Hater Wants Members of Unions Personally Liable

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 4.—John E. Edgerton, president of the Southern States Industrial council, widely known among organized labor as a "labor hater," is reported as urging upon members of congress the passage of a law to "make labor unions legally responsible for their acts" and members personally responsible for individual conduct. In short, he would seek to prevent workers from organizing.

Calling the American Federation of Labor a "lawless organization, and one that has little respect for the rights of others," Edgerton added that "if the next congress has as much courage as sense, it will stop this business of coddling that aristocracy of labor by enacting such legislation as will reduce it to the level of the common citizenry of this country."

Further, the council president said "let there be equal laws honestly enforced and employers and employes can, and will, solve their own problems."

TIMES MAINTAINS POLICY IS CORRECT IN LABOR MATTERS

Manager Replies to Council's Resolution.

HOLDS PAPER NOT UNFAIR TO ANYONE

Workers' Charges of Misrepresentation Indicate Bitter Resentment Against Attitude in Textile and Other Local Strikes.

The Chattanooga Times has "nothing to retract," according to the answer of that paper to a resolution adopted following a warm discussion by delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in session last Monday night and which condemned the attitude of both daily papers in general for their handling of the textile strike, and the Times in particular for sentiments expressed in an editorial described as "for viciousness and utter disregard for the welfare of our city and its people has perhaps never been equaled in a Chattanooga newspaper."

The resolution condemned the morning paper also for a statement that "Chattanooga has achieved a national reputation as a place where law and order cannot be maintained in industrial disputes," and for its closing paragraph, which was described as a "vicious, unjustified and totally uncalled-for slander of an official of an international union who had taken part in the efforts to secure peace."

The Times' editorial was published on the very day when various shop committees were attempting to work out details of an agreement negotiated by Commissioner of Police Eugene J. Bryan and Mr. T. R. Preston, acting as mediators, and was declared in the resolution to have been "calculated to further inflame and array employer against employe, "and to nullify many days' strenuous labor "on the part of these two gentlemen to effect a peaceful and harmonious ending of the distressing condition."

The resolution asked the Times to state whether it is "definitely committed to a policy of unfairness and misrepresentation against the working people of Chattanooga."

A committee consisting of some thirty representatives of various craft unions called upon Mr. Adolph Shelby Ochs, general manager of the Times, Tuesday night, read the resolution and amplified the protest of the workers. The resolution was published on the front page of the morning paper Wednesday, and in an editorial reference the Times maintained its position and declared it had nothing to retract."

However, Mr. Ochs Thursday offered The Labor World a prepared statement, which is published below in full in keeping with The Labor World's traditional policy of trying to be fair:

"In a resolution recently adopted by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, condemning Chattanooga's two daily newspapers, the manager of the Chattanooga Times was called upon to state 'whether or not his paper is definitely committed to a policy of unfairness and misrepresentation against the working people of Chattanooga.'

"This is his answer:

"The Times was established in 1869. On July 3, 1878, when the newspaper came under its present ownership, an editorial announced the paper's dedication to the public welfare—'a paper primarily devoted to the material, educational and moral growth of our progressive city and its surrounding territory.' Through the years that have passed since 1878 the Times has not swerved from its purpose to advance the best interests of all of the

Scripps-Howard Asked to Enter Local Daily Field

Letter States Neither Chattanooga Newspaper Performs Proper Functions.

Because "neither Chattanooga newspaper performs the functions of a good metropolitan newspaper, i. e., to print news truthfully and impartially," the Scripps-Howard newspaper syndicate was asked in letter approved by Central Body Monday night to enter the local publication field. "We feel your policy is to report news truthfully and without regard to effect on large private interests," the letter states, "and that your editorial policies have always been for the so-called common class of people."

The letter follows:

Oct. 9, 1934.

Scripps-Howard Syndicate, Inc.,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

The city of Chattanooga has one morning paper, the Times, and one afternoon paper, the News. These are the only daily papers in this territory. Neither of them perform the functions of a good metropolitan newspaper, i. e., to print news truthfully and impartially.

Both papers are particularly venomous in editorial attacks on the working class of our citizens, such attacks reaching the point of vituperation and attempts to arouse sectional hatred among a peaceful populace. Their news-gathering forces, whether the fault of the reporters or the effect of blue-penciling by the copy desk, are seeping with obvious surrender to dictation of monied interests of the community.

Your system of papers has a gap in its continuity of southern representation in this locality, and we are formally requesting you to send your representative into this city and investigate the advisability of putting one of your papers in Chattanooga. We feel your policy is to report news truthfully and without regard to effect on large private interests, and that your editorial policies have always been for the so-called common class of people.

Yours truly,
Secretary.

Police Stop Meeting Of Book Workers

New York.—Police interruption of a meeting of striking employes of the Macauley company, book publishers, has been emphatically protested to Mayor LaGuardia. The meeting, scheduled for Monday, Sept. 24, in front of the company's offices, got under way but was not completed.

Although the committee said it had permission to hold the meeting at the corner at noon, the police halted the demonstration. The strike committee asserted that Lauren Gilfillan, author of "I Went to Pit College," was pulled down as she stepped into a chair to speak. Eventually the meeting was held across the street.

Election Ordered At Kohler Plant

Washington.—Ruling that the Kohler company, of Kohler, Wis., had violated Section 7-A of the recovery act, the national labor reltions board ordered an election by secret ballot to determine representatives for collective bargaining. The election is to be based on the company payroll of Sept. 7, 1933.

The board also ruled that unless the Kohler company co-operated in the holding of the election the case would be referred to the compliance division of the NRA and to other government agencies for action.

The decision held that the company had interfered with the self-organization of its employes and had taken active part in promoting the Kohler Workers' association, a company union.

Home Stores and Colonial Bakery Rapped by Labor

Delegates Indicate Publicity Campaigns Should Be Continued Indefinitely.

Roy McDonald's so-called Home Stores and the Colonial Bakery came in for an unusual share of the discussions by delegates to Central Body Monday night, and the members present, roused to "fighting pitch" by attacks from various sources during the past few weeks, expressed themselves in no uncertain terms with reference to the attitude of these two concerns.

The Colonial, whose headquarters are said to be at Kansas City, has been charged with responsibility for the fact that, although workers employed there were first to organize a local union of their craft, they suddenly and without exception withdrew from the organization. No member of the Bakers' or Salesmen's unions is employed at the local plant of the Colonial.

Roy McDonald's attitude toward the workers is well known, the grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, druggist, tire dealer, restaurateur, etc., having stated to a committee that he believed wages should be cut 50 per cent., and having only recently been charged with discharging a store manager for contributing a pound of coffee to striking textile workers.

It was the unanimous opinion of delegates present Monday night that publicity campaigns which have been carried on with respect to the two concerns be continued, and representatives of various unions pledged weekly contributions to pay pickets at the various McDonald units. These pickets, it was decided, will be maintained indefinitely.

Shoe Repairers In 'Best Session' Since Organized

Local 620, Shoe Repairers, Thursday night held the "best session since the organization was formed," according to D. R. Massey, financial secretary. "We had the largest attendance yet," Mr. Massey said, "and some constructive plans were made for the future of the local.

"Several applications for membership were acted on, and a vote of appreciation was extended Manager Moore, of Lovemans, for his assistance in assuring a 100 per cent. shop for the new department of that store.

"We are progressing nicely, and appreciate the interest our friends have taken in our organization."

Bijou and Bonita Settle Dispute With Signwriters

Bijou and Bonita theaters have settled their dispute with Local 226, Signwriters, according to a statement issued on behalf of the union Friday morning. Peace has not been made with the State and Rialto, the statement declares, although pickets have been withdrawn at the request of international officers of the theater unions and the painters, who will be in Chattanooga this week.

The statement follows:

"The Bijou and Bonita theaters have settled their differences with Local 226, Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, and are now fair to this organization.

"The trouble with the State and Rialto has not been settled. The pickets have been withdrawn by request of international officers of the Stage Employes, Motion Picture Operators and Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, who will be in Chattanooga Oct. 18."

WORKERS THROWN OUT.

Forest City, N. C. — Alexander Manufacturing company, making bed sheeting, on Sept. 17, mailed the following notice to all striking employes: "You are hereby notified to vacate the house you are now living in, which is owned by Alexander Manufacturing company, on or before Monday, Sept. 24. This demand is made necessary because you have voluntarily left our employ and the house is needed to take care of our regular employes."

WORKERS WON'T PATRONIZE STORES FAVORING BOSSES

Gaffney, S. C.—The comparatively few local merchants who recently formed the Gaffney Merchants' association and who have refused to sign a pledge to support striking textile workers as yet unemployed, will not be patronized by organized labor.

R. J. McClellan, union official, stated names of non-co-operating stores that allegedly favor the mill bosses will be made known to all workers by handbills and otherwise.

"We have found out how the merchants stand and every union member will stand by those who stood with us," he said.

FRUITS OF BIG TEXTILE STRIKE TAKING FORM

Government Forces Start Hunt for Facts.

THREE AGENCIES BEGIN THEIR LABORS

Importance of Union Victory Becomes Clearer to Everyone.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Bringing the fruits of the great textile strike victory to a head in the fastest action on record, the United States government is this week converging on the industry in the biggest fact-hunting expedition in American industrial history.

The three agencies now at work and well on the way are:

1—The textile labor relations board, headed by Judge Walter P. Stacy.

2—The bureau of labor statistics, directed by Isidor Lubin.

3—The federal trade commission, under chairmanship of Garland S. Ferguson, Jr.

The textile labor relations board is driving hard in the battle against discrimination. On Monday the first cases were filed by the union. Action was started at once and before night an agent of the board was en route to Columbus, Ga., scene of the six mills involved in the first complaints. The union has followed up rapidly with new complaints each day, the total running into thousands.

Meanwhile the bureau of labor statistics started its forces into the field. On one day this week 100 workers were sent into the field. These forces will get from employers' books a full set of facts on wages, hours and working conditions. This report will form the basis for wage readjustments.

At the same time the federal trade commission began its investigation of the financial condition of mills, throwing an enormous force into the job.

No such undertaking to find the inside facts of a single industry in so short a time has ever been undertaken. The textile victory was a real and smashing victory and these movements are its immediate result. Their fruit will come in adjustment of hours, wages and work load, while through the textile labor relations board the right to organize and bargain through unions will be established.

That the industry will fight the textile labor relations board to the last ditch is clear, but victory is not doubted by union officials.

Meanwhile the union has launched an intensive organizing campaign on every front, using new and effective methods to bring together the entire strength of the workers in one compact, solid organization under the banner of the United Textile Workers.

The fact-hunting expeditions now under way will, the government agencies announce, be pushed with all possible speed and the results will be in hand, ready for use, within an incredibly short time.

As these powerful agencies move on with their job the tremendous scope and importance of the union victory becomes clearer to everyone.

"The modern girl darns her own stockings," says a writer. She often expresses herself in far stronger terms on discovering a ladder in a new pair.

Textile Workers Accept Roosevelt Truce in Trial

But Renewal of Conflict Impends Unless Peaceful Methods Urged by President Are Speedily Effective.

Washington, Oct. 11.—In a letter to President Roosevelt, the United Textile Workers of America formally agreed for a period of six months to the president's proposed truce in industry. During the trial period, the union agreed to accept the findings of the national textile labor relations board and the national labor relations board. The letter was signed by Francis J. Gorman, first vice-president and chairman of the union's organizing committee.

"It is our hope that textile manufacturers will agree to like terms in order that there may be peace in the textile industry and a full use of the machinery created for that purpose in harmony with truly democratic American principles," the letter said.

After referring to the terms of the president's proposal, Gorman wrote:

"I am empowered to say to you that the United Textile Workers of America accept your proposal. You did not set a period, but we are prepared to enter into such a truce for six months, in the hope that it may be extended and that we may work rapidly toward permanent peace with the use of democratic methods in this industry.

"As we read your proposal you feel that such a truce is possible because machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes has been created. That, it seems to us, predicates peace upon the use of these peaceful methods of adjudication. There is a requirement, clearly implied if not specifically stated, that the findings of the tribunals of peace must be accepted by disputants. We accept that implication.

"To state the matter clearly and to define our acceptance, we declare that for the period of the truce we shall accept the findings of the national textile labor relations board and of the national labor relations board and we shall permit no stoppage of work in protest against any findings of those bodies. We shall accept in full the provisions of the Winant board's report.

"We shall understand that acceptance of this truce does not infringe in any manner upon the freedom of action which you described as a constitutional right written into statute law in Section 7-A of the recovery act and which has been clarified by the rulings of the national labor relations board created under public resolution 44.

"We believe sincerely that every major contention made by our union in the recent strike was sustained in the report of the Winant board and that these contentions will be further sustained through the governmental machinery which now is in action.

"However, we are compelled at this hour to face the fact that in literally thousands of cases employes are being denied re-employment because they were on strike.

"Furthermore, evictions are taking place in a number of communities. Employers, apparently, are resorting to every possible variety of tactics to tear our unions to pieces and the fact is renewal of conflict actually impends, unless the peaceful methods described by you can be brought into swift and effective action. We know that this machinery is doing everything in its power to act quickly and effectively and we know that we are using every effort at our command to exercise restraint until that machinery can bring issues to a conclusion."

Textile Workers Thank Merchants

A letter expressing appreciation to some merchants not named in previous communications was received this week by The Labor World from Miss Edith Nuckolls, publicity chairman for Local 1785, Textile Workers.

"We want the business people of this community to know that we appreciate their interest in our struggle," Miss Nuckolls' letter said. "Among those who contributed and who have not been named before were the Hill Stores, A. & P. Stores and J. M. Horton's grocery, which served hot coffee and cakes to the pickets on the day shifts.

"We should not forget who our friends were in times of trouble."

TWO HOSIERY MILLS BLOCK COMPLETION STRIKE PEACE PLANS

Chides Kiwanis Club for Speech Made by Member

Resolution Kicks Back at "Mr. Kickover" for Criticism of Textile Strikers.

Resolution recently introduced at a Kiwanis club meeting and a Constitution day speech made by Mr. Estes Kefauver, junior member of the firm of Chambliss, Sizer, Chambliss & Kefauver, textile mill attorneys, taking to task alleged "infringements of rights" on the part of textile strikers, found a kickback at Monday night's session of Central Body, when a resolution was passed calling attention to an incident which occurred in a Kiwanis session where one of the members is alleged to have used obscene language in the presence of ladies and gentlemen attending the meeting.

The resolution decries the "breakdown of observance of unwritten laws of decorum in public meetings which cause ladies assembled to be invited to leave rather than be embarrassed by obscene jokes," and suggests that the Kiwanians eliminate such affairs in future and place themselves in position to lead further crusades against the shortcomings of others.

It follows:

Whereas, a civic club recently commemorated Constitution week in the form of a resolution, publicly drawn up, and through a public speaker, deploring "the infringing of rights established by law" of employes of textile mills who were said to have been deprived of certain privileges to work in certain mills; and,

Whereas, in the same resolution it was specifically stated that the controversy between the textile employes of Chattanooga and their employers was a matter of their own concern, nevertheless a legal representative of the principal law firm representing textile owners, and members of which firm are now under a federal indictment, was allowed to drape the American flag about himself and picture the strikers as law-breakers; and,

Whereas, such uncalled for and unjust chiding of labor for alleged law-breaking activities from such civic organization has caused us to reflect on our shortcomings, and in reflecting, to observe the shortcomings of our critics who are so quick to leap to the front with wild cries of virtue; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in regular session, that we, as decent citizens, parents, and respecters of American womanhood, do decry the breakdown of observance of unwritten laws of decorum in public meetings which cause ladies assembled to be invited to leave rather than be embarrassed by obscene jokes; and be it further

Resolved, That we call on all civic clubs to rally around the flag of decorum and decency, and in this way put themselves in a position to lead further crusades against shortcomings of others;

Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to civic clubs of Chattanooga, to the Pastors' association, to the commissioners of the city of Chattanooga, to the sheriff of Hamilton county, to Gov. Hill McAlister, and to Mr. Estes Kickover.

HE'LL "BUST" UNION, TARBORO BOSS BOASTS

Tarboro, N. C.—Employes of the Hart and Fountain mills here have the option of joining a company union, promoted by Supt. George Smith, and giving up their connection with the United Textile Workers of America, or being discharged from their jobs. This is the ultimatum circulated among them as they have returned to work after striking. Smith's declaration is that he "will bust the union" and that no union member will be given employment in his mills.

Davenport and Champion Rulers Unmoved.

LATTER IS AGAIN 'MOVED TO GEORGIA'

Miller-Smith Signed — Boilermakers and Molders Mark Time as Local Plants Remain Closed—Police Arrest Negroes Who Fire on Pickets.

Agreement with the Miller-Smith company Wednesday, ratified by a special session of Branch 53, Hosiery Workers, left but two local mills which have refused to accept the terms under which a great majority of the strikers in that branch of the industry have returned to work.

Davenport and Champion managements were reported at presstime to be unyielding in their apparent purpose to refuse to deal with their striking employes, and the situation at these two mills was declared to be unchanged. It was understood that efforts of Commissioner of Police Eugene Bryan and Mr. T. R. Preston, president of the Hamilton National bank, to induce the managements to carry out the agreement which was supposedly acceded to by all will be continued, and a successful culmination of these efforts was hoped for.

A feature of the week was renewal of the old "stall" of moving the mill," perpetrated at the Champion. Local unionists recalled that in the early stages of the strike five machines were removed from the plant, which had never been uncrated, and that the incident drew a three-column front-page headline in the Times, "Champion Moves to Georgia." One striker Friday morning recalled the old second-reader story of "The Wolf, the Wolf," and stated that the threat to move the mill died a-borning.

BOILER STRIKERS MARKING TIME.

Some 550 boilermakers and other craftsmen on strike at the local plants of the International Combustion Engineering company were reported Friday morning as "marking time" while the local management communicates with superiors in New York City. A proposed basis of settlement was presented local company officials this week by a committee of workers headed by Sam C. Godfrey, representative of the Boilermakers' International union, and the local manager agreed to refer it to his home office.

TENNESSEE PLANT CLOSES DOORS.

After attempting to make a show of operating with a small number of colored workers, the plant of the Tennessee Stove Works closed this week following the arrest of twenty-two of these "loyal workers" by police, who are reported to have found guns, ice picks and other weapons on them. Searching of the negroes followed firing on a picket by one of their number. Trials of the crew were scheduled to come up in police court Friday morning.

The workers are maintaining the lines, and the plant remains closed. Past experiences with the management of the stove plant are declared to be in no small way responsible for an unusual determination on the part of the workers to gain recognition and improved working conditions at this time.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Does labor benefit when the workers are denied an opportunity to work long hours?

A.—The A. F. of L. Executive Council said in its report to the San Francisco convention: "The entire experience under legislation that we have had with which to compare it proves conclusively that we cannot progress in dealing with this problem by reducing the maximum hours per week of employment of the individual workers without a proportionate increase in the hourly wage rate. Any reduction of the maximum hours per week without a proportionate increase in the hourly wage rate means a reduction in the weekly wage and a consequent reduction in the purchasing power of the worker and his family."

Q.—How much will union men benefit from the N. R. A. if at all?

A.—It will be little more than a year before any definite and reliable answer can be given to this question. Much depends upon the attitude of employers and the willingness of workers to organize. Some authorities on the question believe that the benefits will be considerable. The answer is to be found in the degree to which the act is enforced.

Q.—Are union workers under any obligation to help organize?

A.—I do. They have now all the benefits of union and should be interested in seeing that others

Lady Went Back To Taking CARDUI and Was Helped

For several periodic pains cramps or nervousness my doctor would at times advise me to take CARDUI. So some fifty years ago Mrs. Dora Duncan, of Salyers Mill, Ky., writes: "Several years ago when I was teaching school, I got run-down and suffered intensely during menstruation periods. I took Cardui and was all right again. After I was married, when I felt all run-down and was irregular, I always resorted to Cardui and was helped." ... It may be just what you need. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician. Sold in E. dollars.

LABOR PLEDGES CO-OPERATION WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

"Hostile Attitude" of Manufacturers Is Soundly Condemned by President William Green, Who Will Hurry to Washington for Conference, Following Close of A. F. of L. Convention.

San Francisco, Oct. 11.—The "fireside" talk of President Franklin D. Roosevelt over the radio, in which he stated he would ask the co-operation of both employers and employes in a proposed labor-capital truce, met with immediate acceptance in principle by delegates attending the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here.

President William Green, in announcing plans for immediate departure for Washington for a conference with President Roosevelt, following the close of the convention, probably Oct. 13, said.

"Labor has always pursued the policy of arbitration of its disputes and we will gladly co-operate with the president."

Manufacturers Hostile.

"The manufacturers' associations have taken the attitude that the decisions of federal mediation boards should not be obeyed and respected," he charged. "They must change their hostile attitude."

Federation officers indicated they considered the challenge of the National Association of Manufacturers a closed incident.

Remodeling of NRA Is Started By New Seven-Man Policy Board

Lloyd Garrison Resigns as Labor Board Chairman; S. Clay Williams, Head of Policy Set-Up and Criticized by Labor, Indicates No Early Decisions.

Washington, Oct. 11.—As the dynamic Gen. Hugh S. Johnson passes out of the NRA picture, the new policy board, composed of seven men, has undertaken the huge task of remodeling the national recovery administration.

Meantime, Lloyd Garrison, able head of the national labor relations board, has definitely decided to quit and return to his duties at Wisconsin university, from which he had obtained a leave of absence for only three months.

Big Task Ahead.

The seven-man board selected to replace Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, resigned, began a searching investigation of the rambling NRA structure. Their task is to revise the recovery unit to make it more acceptable to congress, industry, labor and the consumer.

It was the board's first meeting and its members made a diplomatic approach to the multiple problems awaiting attention. They posed with Johnson, who was busy cleaning out his desk.

S. Clay Williams, chairman of the new agency, said Richberg outlined "our mission" and that the entire code structure of NRA had been reviewed. No decisions will be made for several days.

Richberg, Johnson Confer.

Donald R. Richberg, director of the industrial emergency committee and second only to President Roosevelt as the most powerful figure in the government today, conferred at length with the retiring administrator. Richberg, who clashed repeatedly with Johnson over matters of NRA policy and personnel when he was active as chief counsel of the recovery agency, intimated if there had been wounds they were now healed.

"We have had no quarrel," Richberg said with a smile. "The talk about that is all the bunk."

Arthur D. Whiteside, another member of the board, denied reports that he quit his job as division administrator six months ago because of the NRA price-fixing policy.

Some Features Permanent.

Taking a hint from President Roosevelt's "fireside" talk, however, observers felt the board's first decision would remove any code restrictions from small businesses and revise present price-fixing and production-control code provisions.

At the same time it was indicated that regulations bearing on child labor prohibitions; combinations to force fair trade practices and provisions designed to raise wages and reduce working hours, would be earmarked as "permanent."

Many Issues Developing.

Recovery officials are anxious to forestall a showdown between capital and labor at this time. President Roosevelt is leading the battle to avert such a crisis by proposing an era of industrial peace.

Simultaneously, developments over the issued piled up on many fronts. They include:

American Federation of Labor's demand for a 30-hour week.

Court fight over the national labor relations board decision that majority representatives have exclusive right to bargain with employers.

Test of the legality of Section 7-A of the NRA (the collective bargaining provision) in Wilmington, Del., led by the Weirton Steel company.

Demand by industry that Section 7-A be revised and made less restrictive in any permanent NRA move recommended by congress.

The White House said that Secretary of Labor Perkins, who is to address the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco, was not dispatched to the meeting by Mr. Roosevelt. She is carrying out a promise made to organized labor leaders several weeks ago, it was stated.

WORKERS MUST HAVE O. K. OF GUARDS TO GET JOBS

Caroleen, N. C.—Workers in the Caroleen and Henrietta mills are being hired on the approval of deputy sheriffs and armed guards who surround the mills. The workers had a parade when the strike ended, and every worker who took part in this demonstration is being weeded out by the armed guards and denied employment. Mill officials deny discrimination on the ground of union membership and assert they cannot control the actions of the mill guards.

MORE ABOUT THE TIMES

people of the community. The Times is not the servant of 'special interests.' Its independence, fortunately, is not hampered by special obligation to either Capital or Labor. It is a newspaper seeking to serve all the readers of the community, without social and economic class distinction, without prejudice—and without fear.

"The Chattanooga Times never has been, is not now and never shall be 'committed to a policy of unfairness and misrepresentation' against anybody or anything. The newspaper stands on its half-century record of striving for fairness and accuracy. At the outset of the textile strike the instructions of the management to the reporters assigned to the story were a repetition of standing instructions in the reportorial department: 'Get the facts and write the facts. When opinion is quoted in controversies, get both sides of the argument and quote both sides.'

"The files of the Times, available to anyone who wishes to examine them, furnish ample proof that throughout the strike, the columns of the newspaper have been open to both mill owners and strike leaders for free expression of their versions of events and their interpretation of the facts. Literally hundreds of interviews with strike leaders have been published from day to day. Column after column has been given by the Times to Organizer Fred Held and other labor leaders for expression of their opinions; the Times will not be denied the right to express its own opinions in its own editorials.

"Following is a paragraph from the labor council resolution:

"On Monday morning, Oct. 8, when it appeared that a complete settlement of the difficulty was imminent, and, in fact, various committees were working out details of an agreement providing for a return to work, the Chattanooga Times published an editorial which for viciousness and utter disregard for the welfare of our city and its people has perhaps never been equaled by a Chattanooga newspaper; this editorial proclaimed to the world that 'Chattanooga has achieved a national reputation as a place where law and order cannot be maintained in industrial disputes,' recited the alleged failure of the workers to gain anything by the settlement; took a sarcastic fling at the national recovery administration; in general expressing opinions calculated to further inflame and array employer against employe, and to nullify many days' strenuous labor on the part of Eugene J. Bryan, commissioner of police; T. R. Preston, president of the Hamilton National bank, and the above-mentioned representative of the United States government to effect a peaceful and harmonious ending to the distressing condition; and closing with a vicious, unjustified and totally uncalled-for slander of an official of an international union, who had taken part in the efforts to secure peace.

"The Times asks all fair-minded persons to read the editorial complained of before jumping at conclusions as to its 'viciousness' and 'utter disregard for the welfare of our city and its people.' It was written following announcement that a basis of settlement of the strike had been reached. In view of the following paragraph in the editorial, it seems absurd to charge that it was an effort to 'nullify' the peace efforts of Commissioner Bryan and Mr. Preston:

"But peace has come at last, and a brighter day dawns for all. And those who might be inclined to criticize our police commissioner for not taking more drastic action in the early stages of the strike should remember that it was largely through the efforts of Commissioner Bryan and Mr. T. R. Preston, as mediators, that a basis of settlement has finally been reached.

"Again on Oct. 9, the Times said in an editorial:

"Attention has been called to the fact that an editorial discussing the hosiery strike, published in yesterday's Times, has been interpreted by some readers as a criticism of Commissioner Eugene Bryan. No such criticism was intended. On the contrary, the police commissioner is entitled to the gratitude of the community for his valuable services as a mediator in bringing about a settlement under which the hosiery workers agreed to return to their jobs.

"The Times editorial of Oct. 8 was an effort to convince all concerned that neither mill owner, nor striker nor the public had been the gainer by reason of the strike. The Times was of that opinion and is still of that opinion. A high regard for the public welfare—not 'utter disregard of the public welfare'—prompted the expression of that opinion.

"The Labor council resolution declares that 'except on one insignificant occasion,' not a single blow has been struck during the strike. The Times cannot dismiss as an 'insignificant occasion' the recent rioting at the Bryan Hosiery mills. Nor can it be admitted that picketing is peaceful if there are threats of violence, even if no blow is struck.

"The Times does not deny the right to strike. But it upholds the right to work for those who want to work.

"The Times does not believe that violence and intimidation and ruthless disregard for property rights and personal rights are proper methods for the settlement of industrial disputes. It has always condemned and always shall condemn lawlessness. And in so doing, it believes it has the sympathetic support of all right-thinking workingmen and working-women in the community.

"A. SHELBY OCHS,
"General Manager
"The Chattanooga Times."

The resolution expressing labor's opinion of the Times' attitude in the strike follows, in full:

Whereas, during the past several weeks a walkout of textile and hosiery workers closed practically every mill in the Chattanooga territory, a result of increasing burdens placed upon the workers which became at last too great to bear; and,

Whereas, although some 10,000 workers were involved, the strikers conducted themselves as honorable, law-abiding citizens, and, except upon one insignificant occasion, not a single blow was struck during the entire period; and,

Whereas, the two daily newspapers of Chattanooga, voicing, obviously, the sentiment of a few selfish and arrogant industrial leaders, repeatedly published biased news stories and editorials condemning the strikers and picturing the strike as the creation of a few agitators, representing that the great majority of workers were forced from their jobs against their will; condemning the local law-enforcement officials for not using their forces as strikebreakers; and, by inference, the governor of Tennessee for his failure to call out the state militia for the same purpose; and,

Whereas, earnest efforts of a group of public-spirited Chattanoogans and a representative of the United States government, working between labor officials and mill owners, has been endeavoring for some days to effect a settlement of the strike, and has been hampered by articles and editorials appearing in said daily papers; and,

Whereas, on Monday morning, Oct. 8, when it appeared that a complete settlement of the difficulty was imminent, and, in fact, various committees were working out details of an agreement providing for a return to work, the Chattanooga Times published an editorial which for viciousness and utter disregard for the welfare of our city and its people has perhaps never been equaled by a Chattanooga newspaper; this editorial proclaimed to the world that "Chattanooga has achieved a national reputation as a place where law and order cannot be maintained in industrial disputes," recited the alleged failure of the workers to gain anything by the settlement; took a sarcastic fling at the national recovery administration; in general expressing opinions calculated to further inflame and array employer against employe, and to nullify many days' strenuous labor on the part of Eugene J. Bryan, commissioner of police; Mr. T. R. Preston, president of the Hamilton National bank, and the above-mentioned representatives of the United States government to effect a peaceful and harmonious ending to the distressing condition; and closing with a vicious, unjustified and totally uncalled-for slander of an official of an international union, who had taken part in the efforts to secure peace; therefore, be it

Resolved, by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, representing many thousand working people of this city, That we deplore the attitude in general of both daily papers, and denounce the Times editorial of Monday as a slap in the face of the national recovery administration, an unjustified interference with the fine civic spirit shown by Messrs. Bryan and Preston, an insult to thousands of Chattanooga working people, a veiled libel on a representative of an international union, a reflection on the law-enforcement officers of the state of Tennessee, Hamilton county and the city of Chattanooga; and as a whole calculated to retard recovery and to menace the peace, happiness and tranquillity of a people which that paper is supposed to serve; be it further

Resolved, That a committee from this organization be named to call on the manager of the Chattanooga Times and ask that he retract the implied charge against said international union officer, or explain just what was meant by the insinuations; that he state whether or not his paper is definitely committed to a policy of unfairness and misrepresentation against the working people of Chattanooga, and that he publish this resolution in a conspicuous place in his paper; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be also furnished to Mr. W. C. Johnson, of the Chattanooga News; to Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, owner of the New York Times and the Chattanooga Times; to the governor of Tennessee; to the sheriff of Hamilton county; to the mayor of Chattanooga; to the president of the United States; to Mr. Donald Richberg, director of the national recovery administration; to Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation, and to Mr. Francis Gorman, director of the national textile strike.

ILLINOIS VOTERS OUST STRIKEBREAKER FROM SCHOOL JOB

Gillespie, Ill.—David Tallman, a school teacher here, is said to have worked as a strikebreaker at the Laclede Steel company, in Alton, during the summer.

Rehired as a teacher at the beginning of the school term, the students called a strike, refusing to attend his classes.

A special election of the Gillespie High school district was called and the result, just announced, shows the taxpayers voted 1,660 to 1,015 against rehiring the strikebreaker as a teacher.

MILL OWNERS DODGING MEETING WITH WORKERS

Patton, Pa.—Workers in the textile mills here can have a conference with the mill owners relative to discrimination against them—if they go to New York City for it. The mill owners decline to come to Patton.

This is the statement given to them by the mill superintendent and overseers, who insist they are without authority to adjust any charge of discrimination or re-employ workers who were on strike.

Since the strike mill operations have been subjected to further "stretch-out" methods, and doffers, floor women and mechanics have been eliminated. The mill management says that the mill will run with a smaller force of employes hereafter.

ON NRA CODE BOARD.

Hartford, Conn.—Otto J. Schuetz, of Hartford, a veteran labor union official, has been appointed to the first regional board in charge of administration of the brewers' NRA code in the six New England states. Schuetz is business agent and secretary of the Brewers' Union of Hartford and senior vice-president of the Connecticut State Federation of Labor. His new position will involve considerable traveling through Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Offer Sympathy For Bereavements

Following resolutions were adopted by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular session last Monday night:

Whereas, the Angel of Death has entered the home of the Misses Munsey, active members of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, and delegates to this body, taking therefrom their mother, Mrs. Cora Lee Munsey, who passed away on Sunday, Sept. 8, 1934, at Bellebuckle, Tenn.; therefore, be it

Resolved, by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in regular session assembled, That we mourn with these good ladies in their great bereavement, and the sympathy of this body, individually and collectively, goes out to them; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be spread upon our minutes, and furnished the bereaved relatives of Mrs. Munsey.

Whereas, Mr. John G. Dobbs, citizen of Chattanooga for many years and uncle of Brother Joe G. Dobbs, a delegate to this body, passed away suddenly after a life of usefulness to his city, state and nation, a life which was a credit to the baseball profession which he loved and honored; therefore, be it

Resolved, by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in regular session assembled, That we extend to Brother Joe Dobbs and other surviving relatives of the late citizen our sincerest condolences in their loss; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be made a part of our record and furnished the survivors of Mr. Dobbs.

Q.—What is a short definition of a trade union?

A.—An organized association of workmen formed for the protection and promotion of their common interests.

CITIZENS PROTEST ABUSE HEAPED ON MILL WORKERS

Spartanburg, S. C.—More than 1,000 citizens in the school district and community surrounding the Powell Knitting mills have signed a protest to the textile labor relations board against the discrimination and abuses heaped upon the mill employes who engaged in the strike. The protest says:

"We do hereby protest the unfair and humiliating treatment to which some of the best citizens of the Powell Knitting mill community have been subjected because of their union affiliations. We ask a speedy investigation of conditions at this place in behalf of these law-abiding and peaceful citizens."

Charges made against the workers are asserted to be faked and without justification other than to deny re-employment to the workers.

Friend—Was you ever kissed?

Old Maid—Well, if I should die tomorrow it would not be from curiosity.

"BENIGHTED EMPLOYERS THINK ORGANIZED LABOR IS BAD," SAYS GREAT INDUSTRIAL LEADER

Colonel Wood F. Axton Thrills Delegates to American Federation of Labor Convention With Memorable Address—Has Operated Closed Shop Thirty-five Years.

Capitalist For Greater Farm Returns

Col. Wood F. Axton, noted Kentucky industrialist, speaking at the American Federation of Labor convention. William Green, labor president, seated.

Among the many memorable addresses delivered at the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at San Francisco, that of Col. Wood F. Axton, president of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, of Louisville, was outstanding.

Col. Axton called attention to the fact that he has operated a union shop for thirty-five years, and stated significantly that officers of the Tobacco Workers' union are still his friends.

"This is not the first time that I have been honored by the American Federation of Labor," he said. "When you held your convention in Cincinnati some years ago, your great president, Samuel Gompers, whom I considered a personal friend, honored me with an invitation to address your convention. Today your great president, William Green, has repeated that honor. As I look at the pictures of Sam Gompers and Will Green above this platform and the wonderful picture of our great president of the United States, I feel highly commented to be here.

"Here in this audience I see E. Lewis Evans, president of the Tobacco Workers' International Union of America. It was over thirty-five years ago that Mr. Evans came to my factory to organize it. I can say to the benighted employers of labor who think organized labor is bad, that after operating a union factory for thirty-five years, Mr. Evans and I are still friends.

"In looking over this gathering of delegates who have been selected to come to this convention to help work out our economic problems, I see here who can remember when the man on the farm cut his wheat with a scythe and cradle and trailed it out on the barn floor. When the threshing mill, if any, was a very crude affair, a sanding belt unknown. When we had no telephones, electric lights, electric generators or steam hoists, no passenger elevators and a thousand other labor-saving machines we now have are unknown in the memory of many men here.

"Today in our factory we have machines that can make as many cigarettes in a minute as a skilled workman can make by hand in a day. I think I am understating when I say that a million men working in the different branches of industry can produce as much as ten million men could fifty years ago, which is an percentage of profit was enough. Therefore, if men are producing ten times as much as they did fifty years ago, or way of saying that the average man can produce ten times as much as he could then, at which time the men they must have ten times as much purchasing power, for if labor produces ten times as much, and can only buy back five times as much, we are going to have so-called overproduction, and unemployment is sure to result. Then purchasing power vanishes, which means more unemployment. This soon produces the vicious circle we found ourselves in two years ago.

"Patents on labor-saving machinery were not granted to throw men out of employment, but rather to lighten their labors and give them more comforts and luxuries. I do not believe that a man should do the work of a horse, or do that which can be done by machinery. We must go forward and not backward. I do know that a bigger share of what labor produces should go to the producer. When I say producer, I refer to the farmer as well as the industrial worker.

"I am not so much interested in the money wages paid for labor today as I am in the real wages paid. What I mean by real wages is the amount of products you can buy back with the wages received. After all, if we are ever to have a return of prosperity in this country, the producer must have enough to buy back the products of his labor.

"I am referred to as an employer of labor. I am not an employer of labor. The people who buy the products of our factory are the real employers of labor. When people cease to buy our products, or the products of any other factory, employment ceases in the same proportion as purchasing power ceases. After all labor is the largest employer of labor we have in this or any other country.

"I only manage the factory—if I am unable to manage that factory without taking our profits out of the pay envelopes of the workers, or chiseling the consumer, then the sooner I get out of business the better. That's what brought on this depression. There has been too much 'takeout' in business. Some of you have been in poker games and know that when the keeper of the 'kitty' has too long an arm and keeps reaching for the yellow chips, the game soon breaks up. Monopolies have too long been the keeper of the 'kitty'—their long arms raking in the chips.

"The problem we are facing today is not one of over-production, but rather one of under-consumption. There can be no over-production of food when people are hungry, no over-production of clothing with people in rags. The coal miners, hungry and underfed, sit in idleness upon untold millions of tons of coal, while people in the cities suffer from cold.

"No, my friends, it is not a question of over-production, but one of under-consumption. I honestly and sincerely believe the best solution yet offered is the one advanced by your worthy president—reduce the hours of labor to the point where all who desire to work shall have that opportunity, to which I most heartily subscribe."

COLONIAL BAKING COMPANY PETITIONS FEDERAL COURT TO ENJOIN ORGANIZED LABOR

Seeks Relief From "Irreparable Damage" Inflicted on It Because Organized Labor and Its Friends Have Reduced Profits By Thousands of Dollars.

WASSON'S "FAIRNESS"

State of Tennessee,
County of Hamilton.

Personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public, Oliver Wheeler, who makes oath and states that prior to ....., 1933, he was employed at the Colonial Bakery in Chattanooga, Tennessee. That along about this time a bakers' union was organized, and he, together with fourteen others, made application for membership. Shortly thereafter Manager Hugh Wasson called a meeting of employes, and in a talk of some hour and one-half explained to them that if they desired to form a company union, or club, that would be all right, but if they joined an American Federation of Labor Union he would be forced to install machinery which would displace half of them, and the other half would then be too slow and he would have to get faster men from up north. He said the Union would get them nowhere, and if they wanted to get ahead they should work long hours for low pay. He said that he had once quit a $35 a week job and took a $15 a week job, and that when he quit working for a salary he was making $350 per week. Wheeler states that he was warned by a foreman not to associate with the employes of other bakeries, and not to go around said bakeries. Some few days later he was discharged for "unsatisfactory service," although he had been given assurance his services were entirely satisfactory. He was then given a recommendation stating that his work was satisfactory. He believes that his activity in the organization of a union was the sole cause for his discharge.

OLIVER WHEELER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this Sept. 28, 1934.

H. G. CAULKINS,
Notary Public.

My commission expires April 24, 1935.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 18, 1933.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The bearer, Oliver Wheeler, has worked for us as a Baker for two months. We have found his work to be satisfactory and would be glad to recommend him for a similar position.

COLONIAL BAKING COMPANY.
C. O. Peterson.

Mr. Hugh Wasson, president of Colonial Baking company, now declared by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council as "Unfair to Organized Labor," has pulled another one out of his bag of tricks. Officers of Central Body and of the two local unions in the baking industry, and "agents and representatives of said organizations" have been served with 24-hour notice that application for injunction in federal court has been made. Gist of the plea asks that defendants be enjoined from picketing stores, making oral or written statements concerning same, or from "interfering" in any way with the Colonial sales.

Hearing is to be held in Knoxville before Judge George C. Taylor, United States district judge, in Knoxville on Saturday, Oct. 20, at 9 a.m. Language of the plea, in five sections, follow:

(a) Standing in front or walking in front of, either on the sidewalk or the street, any place of business in the jurisdiction of this court where the said Colonial Baking company sells or has for sale its product, and restraining all of said associations and persons from carrying placards or signs, or anything in print to the effect that the said Colonial Baking company is unfair to labor.

(b) From further picketing any store, restaurant, hotel or other place of business within the jurisdiction of this court where the product of plaintiff is sold or offered for sale.

(c) From publishing in any newspaper or from circulating any poster or anything in writing or in print to the effect that the Colonial Baking company is unfair to labor.

(d) From going to any merchant, any operator or representative of any restaurant or hotel or other place of business that purchases the bread or rolls of the Colonial Baking company of Chattanooga, and from representing to such operators that the Colonial Baking company is not paying fair wages, is not furnishing proper working conditions for its employes and from making any representation or statement, either oral or in writing, that if such customer does not desist from purchasing plaintiff's product that union labor will picket the place of said operators and will brand them as unfair to union labor.

(e) That the said associations and persons, and their associates and representatives, all of whom will be made defendants in plaintiff's bill of complaint, be restrained from doing any act prejudicial to the operation and to the conduct of plaintiff's business within the jurisdiction of this court.

You, and all of you are further notified that at said time and place the Colonial Baking company will request that the court fix an hour and day and date at which it may apply for a permanent injunction herein. On demand Colonial Baking company will furnish to either of said parties a copy of its bill of complaint.

Secretary Perkins Says President Does Not Seek Forced Agreements

Voluntary Arbitration of Labor Disputes Is Goal; "Section 7-A Is Law of the Land;" Cites Figures to Prove 60% Less Strikes This Year Than in 1919.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—In a brilliant address delivered before the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, Secretary Frances Perkins, of the U. S. department of labor, laid especial emphasis upon President Roosevelt's recent appeal for a truce between capital and labor, declaring that the Roosevelt administration is opposed to compulsory arbitration of labor disputes.

"Compulsory arbitration would effect no useful purpose, for while coercion might avert impending trouble it would not prevent outbreaks in the future," she asserted.

After referring to the agencies of the various labor boards as constituting a pattern that might well be followed when collective bargaining breaks down, Miss Perkins said that when employers and workers were unable to reach agreements and then voluntarily submitted to arbitration these government boards would be available to them.

"But submission to these agencies should not take the form of compulsion," she said.

Commends Section 7-A.

Stating that while some employers were still reluctant to engage in collective bargaining, they were finding it convenient to do so, she predicted that these employers would come to see that, in negotiation with employes is to be found a method of cooperating for future prosperity.

"Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act is the law of the land," Secretary Perkins declared, adding that it was not surprising that, in a year and a half, there should be a difference of opinion as to the meaning of that section. While complete compliance could not be expected in a year and a half, compliance had been fairly effective by a large number of employers and would improve.

Proposed Social Security Program Praised.

Miss Perkins described the administration's social security program which is to include unemployment insurance, old age pensions and provisions for the ill and disabled, and maintained that the plan for social insurance "will not retard recovery but will mean the development of a more stable income which should not put a bottom to any future depression.

Disproves "Epidemic of Strikes."

After high praise of the work of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in NRA, indicating definitely that she does not wish to be in the position of being pleased with his retirement, Secretary Perkins submitted statements and figures to disprove the current cry of "an epidemic of strikes."

In 1919, she said, there were an average of 292 strikes a month, and in 1934 an average of 121 strikes a month. In the first half of 1919, 1,301,000 men were involved, and the first half of 1934 523,000 men were involved.

In the first six months of 1934 1,500,000 man days had been lost by strikes, compared with 8,250,000 man days lost in the first six months of 1919.

In 1924, she said, the average strike lasted fifty-one days, as compared to twenty-seven days in 1934.

Referring to the general policies of the new deal, Miss Perkins said that the Roosevelt administration "could not be expected to give us the millennium on a silver platter." However, she spoke of the marked recovery of the last year and of the increase in employment and payrolls since she last addressed the convention twelve months ago.

Bakery Local No. 25 Calls Special Meet

There will be a special meeting of Bakery and Confectionery Workers union, Local No. 25, at the labor hall. The time has been set at 4 o'clock Saturday, Oct. 20. Important developments will be discussed concerning the craft.

CURTIS SIMS, Pres.
R. J. GENTRY, Secy.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION VOTES FOR ORGANIZATION OF INDUSTRIAL UNIONS

International Charters Will Be Issued to Mass-Production Industries, Including Aluminum, Cement and Automobile; Also Decide on New Drive to Organize Iron and Steel Workers.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—Determined to meet squarely the changing industrial situation accompanying the development of mass-production industries, the American Federation of Labor, at its fifty-fourth annual convention here, made labor history and adopted one of the most far-reaching changes in its structural policy, when a report of the resolutions committee was adopted directing the granting of charters to workers in mass-production industries and calling for the immediate and effective organization of others.

Announcement of approval of the resolution by President Green brought forth prolonged hand-clapping and lusty cheers from 450 enthusiastic delegates, who recognized the occasion as a memorable one in the progress of the great American labor movement.

Craft Unions Fully Protected.

Adoption of the resolution directing that industrial, or "vertical" charters be issued, does not very materially affect the 106 existing craft or "horizontal" unions now affiliated with the A. F. of L. Protection of craft organizations in their own sphere is definitely assured.

Those who discussed the resolution predicted that it would bring to the trade unions hundreds of thousands who would learn and understand the struggles of labor.

The move was also hailed as organized labor's answer to the growth of company-fostered unions in the automobile, steel and other mass-production industries as well as to the competition of independent and communist unions.

The Resolution.

The resolution as reported by the committee and adopted by the convention reviews at length the changing industrial conditions and developments in industry and labor organizations, together with the vast amount of evidence presented to the committee at several hearings, and concludes with the following paragraphs:

"The American Federation of Labor is desirous of meeting this demand. We consider it our duty to formulate policies which will fully protect the jurisdictional rights of all trade unions organized upon craft lines and afford every opportunity for development and accession of those workers engaged upon work over which these organizations exercise jurisdiction.

"Experience has shown that craft organization is most effective in protecting the welfare and advancing the interests of workers where the nature of the industry, such as the lines of demarkation between crafts, are distinguishable.

"However, it is also realized that in many of the industries in which thousands of workers are employed a new condition exists requiring organization upon a different basis to be most effective.

"To meet this new condition the executive council is directed to issue charters for national or international unions in the automotive, cement, aluminum and such other mass-production and miscellaneous industries as in the judgment of the executive council may be necessary to meet the situation.

"That the executive council shall at the earliest practical date inaugurate, manage, promote and conduct a campaign of organization in the iron and steel industry.

"That, in order to protect and safeguard the members of such national and international unions as are chartered, the American Federation of Labor shall for a provisional period direct the policies, administer the business and designate the administrative and financial officers of such newly organized unions."

Rosenblatt Says NRA Codes Can Be Changed When Proven Unsatisfactory

Divisional Administrator Addresses A. F. of L. Convention in San Francisco on Code Progress.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 18.—Sol A. Rosenblatt, divisional administrator for the national recovery administration, speaking before the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here, declared that various codes might be changed if found unsatisfactory, and explained to eagerly interested delegates the experimental nature of some of the work.

"With respect to the labor provisions of any code," he said, "even though such provisions constitute advances for the maintenance and raising of the labor standards present in the industry affected, nevertheless under the ever-present concept of flexibility, if such code provisions do not at once accomplish the end for which they are intended, appropriate changes can and will be promptly and effectively made."

'Opportunity to Work Constructively.'

Mr. Rosenblatt further stated:

"The miracle President Roosevelt has wrought is not that he can accomplish at one stroke the cure for all economic aches and pains of the United States, but that as opposed to the inertia and lack of effort of those who preceded him he has given us all an opportunity to work constructively in achieving the goal which he has set before us."

Hundreds of Thousands Benefited.

Mr. Rosenblatt said he would defend anybody's right to criticize the codes, but he asked the critics to bear in mind that in spite of ineffective enforcement there were hundreds of thousands of people who have benefited to a tremendous extent because of the NRA.

NRA Forces Chiseling Employers To Pay $2,000,000 in Back Wages

Washington, Oct. 18.—Efforts of NRA compliance and enforcement agencies have resulted in restitution of $788,422 in back wages to workmen between June 16 and Sept. 29, 1934, the NRA compliance division reports. This brings to approximately $2,000,000 the amount of back-wage restitution obtained through intervention of administration agencies since the recovery act was passed.

This sum represents the amount repaid workers through intervention of NRA's own agencies, and does not include the wages restored through efforts of various industries' code authorities. It is the difference between the amounts actually paid workers as wages and what should have been paid them under their codes.

During the period surveyed, restitution of back wages was made through NRA intervention in 8,786 cases, involving 35,148 employes. The total during the first year of NRA has been estimated at more than $1,000,000.

The compliance division pointed out that its figure for restitution of back wages does not include the amounts of wage increases brought about under code clauses providing for "equitable adjustment of wages above the minimum." An effort is being made to collect this information.

Preliminary statistics from a survey in Indiann, covering nine firms in four industries, showed wage increases as high as 45 cents an hour under the "equitable adjustment" clause.

Injunctions

The use of injunctions by unfair employers to beat down organized labor in its struggle for existence has always been a powerful weapon and in the past has been used with deadly effect. Recently, certain laws have been passed which has curbed to a certain extent the ability of such employers to rush into court with a plea to prohibit workers to even speak to other workers. In the last six weeks, however, the injunction process papers have fallen on all and sundry like snowflakes. Pleas have been made to prohibit workers from doing illegal things that were never contemplated by those enjoined, and therefore were really harmless. Enjoining a group of individuals from doing illegal acts mean nothing with organized labor. It is only when they are enjoined from doing acts which are inherent rights of American citizens that one wonders what seekers of such suppression are thinking of.

Organized labor of this country, represented by the American Federation of labor, has always been upheld in courts that it has a right to say who are its friends and who are not its friends. Organized labor, represented in Chattanooga by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, has always exercised the right to designate its choice of friends, and also to say who are not its friends. This right has never been successfully challenged. Many times, of course, the wisdom of such choice has been questioned, but never has its right to make such choice been destroyed.

This principle of freedom of choice in selecting our friends is being attacked by the action just taken by Mr. Hugh Wasson, president of Colonial Baking company, in petitioning a federal court to enjoin organized labor from committing, not illegal acts, but from exercise of the right to advise members and friends of organized labor that, in its opinion, the Colonial Baking company is "Unfair to Organized Labor."

Careful scrutiny of the case, which has been dragging along for over a year, reveals that there is not one union baker in the Colonial plant. The other two bakeries sell products that are made by union bakers. The question of why the Colonial has no union bakers while the other plants do have union employes, is not material at this time.

Even though Mr. Wasson appealed to the Atlanta regional board, the records show that the board did not question the right of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council to designate the Colonial as "Unfair to Organized Labor." Although Mr. Wasson is apparently suffering excruciating pains from his actions toward forestalling organization of his employes over a year ago, we think that he will find the federal court will tell him in clear terms what are the rights of organized labor in the selection of its friends.

Even if the court, or any other agency or individual, should honestly believe that the action of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in declaring Colonial "Unfair to Organized Labor" was not just, we believe they would say, with Voltaire, "I abhor utterly what you say, but I shall defend to the death your right to say it."

Lady Went Back To Taking CARDUI and Was Helped

For severe periodic pains, cramps or nervousness, try Cardui which so many women have praised, for over fifty years. Mrs. Dora Dungan, of Science Hill, Ky., writes: "Several years ago, when I was teaching school, I got run-down and suffered intensely during menstruation periods. I took Cardui and was all right again. After I was married, when I felt all run-down and was irregular, I always resorted to Cardui and was helped." ... It may be just what you need. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Social Crime of Unemployment

The determination of the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor to make a nationwide drive on both the economic and political fronts for the inauguration of the 30-hour week as a partial remedy for unemployment should receive the whole-hearted support of every patriotic citizen.

The necessity for militant action by organized labor to secure the shorter work week is emphasized by the terrible toll levied on the millions of unemployed and their families in other ways than the direct suffering caused by hunger and lack of sufficient clothing and shelter and the failure of federal, state and local authorities adequately to provide for those who are jobless through no fault of their own.

The extent of this untold suffering is tersely and poignantly recited by Newton D. Baker, chairman of the National Citizens committee of the 1934 Mobilization for Human Needs. In discussing the effects of prolonged unemployment on the health of the unemployed and their families, Mr. Baker says:

> Unemployment increases sickness. A study made by the Milbank Fund in eight industrial cities reveals that there is 48 per cent more illness in families of the unemployed than in families having full-time workers. * * * One-half of all the care administered in the voluntary hospitals today is given free—an increase of 46 per cent over 1929. Hospital facilities are overcrowded by the needy who come empty-handed and cannot pay. The wards overflow, and patients lie on cots in the corridors. At the same time the earnings of the hospitals from pay patients have fallen off, as have the contributions and the endowment incomes.

Turning to the millions of jobless who are not yet registered on relief rolls, but whose needs are desperate, Mr. Baker adds:

> The relief rolls include millions, but there are perhaps as many needy off the rolls as on, people near the end of their resources and still struggling unaided. They have no margin left for health protection when sickness comes. They are too poor and too distraught to give their children proper care, or to keep their own minds and spirits dauntless in their years of trial. * * * Normal childhood is peculiarly a prey to the ills of the depression. Today more children by 30 per cent are cared for outside their homes than five years ago, and the number who should be taken away from homes demoralized and brutalized by the unexampled poverty of the time is legion.
> In homes subsisting on public relief allowances are 7,000,000 boys and girls. * * * Surveys show that one-fifth of all pre-school children are undernourished; that one-third of all children are physically or mentally handicapped, and that only 20 per cent of handicapped children receive adequate care.

How are the various governments—federal, state and local—measuring up to these emergencies? According to Mr. Baker, "public relief of unemployment falls far short of meeting the need" created by the 48 per cent more illness in families of the jobless than in families where the workers have full-time jobs. "It cannot," he says, "pay for medical care" for these sick people.

With regard to hospitals whose "wards overflow" and whose "patients lie on cots in the corridors," he declares the "hospitals and nursing associations that are supported by taxes cannot meet the emergency" because public appropriations for their support have been cut down.

When it comes to the 7,000,000 children in homes depending on public allowances for their living, Mr. Baker states "they get little from relief expenditures but the barest means of keeping the spark of life in the body."

This is the picture of existing nationwide distress imposed on millions of workers and their dependents by those who own and control industry. They stolidly refuse to reduce the length of the work week and open the doors of their factories to the jobless working men and women, unless they are assured the extortionate profits which they extracted from the workers under the Old Deal.

Still animated with the never-satisfied greed of Shylock, too many industrial leaders seek to apply now the same business policies which brought about the devastating depression and which have prevented recovery.

With hearts hardened to the suffering of the unemployed army so poignantly described by Mr. Baker, these industrial bourbons lock their mills, close the opportunities of employment, and brazenly say to the jobless army: We will not permit you to make the things you require for yourselves and your dependents unless we draw fat dividend checks from all the necessities of life you produce. We take this Shylock position despite the fact that every one of the factories which are now our private property was built from the surplus wealth which you workers, yourselves, produced in the years of prosperity, and which we, under an industrial system operated solely for maximum profits, supported by the letter of the law and the dictum of the courts, appropriated to be used for your further exploitation.

It is time for America to end this anti-social policy of these blatant business reactionaries by making the 30-hour week, demanded by the American Federation of Labor, compulsory for all industries throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

When that is done, and hundreds of thousands of the jobless put to work at good wages, much of the suffering cited by Mr. Baker will automatically cease.

Until the 30-hour week is made compulsory the suffering will continue and will constitute an outstanding disgrace to our American civilization.

The Popular CCC

One New Deal measure which seems to have universal approval is the CCC—Civilian Conservation Corps. President Roosevelt's statement recently that the work of the corps must be continued will bring no protest worth mentioning from any quarter. Everybody's for it.

The corps has a present authorized strength of just under 370,000; and its main work has been cleaning up, policing, and making roads in national parks and national forests. Robert Fechner, director of the corps, reports to the president that in his long inspection trip last summer:

"I did not meet one individual who expressed an unfavorable opinion of the organization or its accomplishments. On the contrary, everyone with whom I came in contact made an urgent plea for more CCC camps."

Mr. Fechner says that the work of these boys has advanced the forestry program of this country from five to fifteen years. On guard during the greatest drouth recorded in our history, they probably prevented devastating forest fires; and some of them paid for their service with their lives.

Best of all, young men from more than half a million families on relief have been revitalized, encouraged, turned from hopelessness to confidence. At the present time, about 10,000 of them are quitting each month to go to private jobs; and that means much for the training they have had, as well as for improving industrial conditions.

It is well to remember, too, that the director of this successful enterprise is vice president of the International Association of Machinists.

CENTRAL BODY REGULAR MEETING MONDAY, OCT. 22

Regular session of Chattanooga trades and Labor council will be held Monday night, Oct. 22, at 7:30 p.m., in Roosevelt hall. Most recent maneuvering of the Colonial Bakery will be a center of interest, along with reports from other "battle fronts." President Kamin requests that delegates from all locals attend 100 per cent.

NOTICE

Reports have been coming in to our office that lead us to believe some merchants are being imposed upon by unauthorized committees who solicit supplies for relief of destitute workers.

We ask all merchants who are solicited to scan closely credentials which legitimate committees should have, and see that such credentials bear the seal of the organization asking for aid, and the proper signatures of officials of the organization with it.

Editor R. M. Cooke Ill at His Home

Thousands of friends of R. M. Cooke, editor of The Labor World, will regret to hear that he was forced to remain at home today because of illness. Although advised by his physician some months ago to "slow down," the veteran unionist stuck it out as long as possible. Although there is no cause for serious alarm at present, it is hoped that a rest of several days will find him back in harness at his old post of duty.

Most particularly is it hoped by his substitute, who was called on with no warning to take over the "sitchuation" in the emergency.

MILL PROPAGANDA FLOODS NEWSPAPERS

Greensboro, N. C.—Advertisements are appearing in the newspapers of North Carolina addressed to the textile workers, and labeled "What Has Been Gained" in the strike? While these advertisements are signed by the local Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' association, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, Mill Owners' association and other organizations, they are identical in their wording.

The advertisements are said here to be the result of the huge slush fund raised by the mill owners and being expended from Charlotte to defeat the aims of the textile workers to put an end to the wage cutting and "stretch-out" practices of the mills, which brought on the strike.

Every method of intimidation that can be devised is being used to frighten the workers into again accepting the conditions which caused the strike. Workers who took part in the strike are called "rioters and hoodlums." Officials of the international textile workers' union are declared to be trying to save their faces, or the recipients of "large salaries," and the union described as a lot of "agitators," carrying on their purpose by "ruinous warfare, flying squadrons, intimidation, terrorism or communistic agitators."

Seldom before has such a campaign of villification, misrepresentation and terrorism been engaged in by employers in a southern state and with such determination to keep their workers on a basis of absolute starvation, and working conditions not to be found in any other industry of the country.

MADISON NEWS WRITERS WIN UNION SHOP

Madison, Wis., Oct. 18.—The Madison Newspaper Guild, having a 100 per cent membership of news department employes of the Wisconsin State Journal and the Capital Times, has begun operation under a union shop contract negotiated with employers.

The contract provides a 48-hour week for reporters and desk men, with cash or time off for overtime.

What Next!

German postal authorities are reported planning to institute soon a "television telephone" service between principal cities, such as Berlin and Munich. The system will be based on a successful television telephone device shown at the recent Berlin radio exposition. The device includes a desk apparatus showing a clear picture of the person at the other end of the line. Those conversing see each other plainly as they speak.

LABOR BRIEFS

Lieut. Kilnourne Johnston (and please note the "t"), son of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, has been named as acting administrator of the manufacturing division of NRA.

Communists were reported as especially active during the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco, in devious ways. On one occasion, three agitators were removed from the Civic auditorium by detectives.

In a speech at Ogden, Utah, prior to the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco, William Green stated that any organization of NRA should include three fundamentals: (1) The principle of collective bargaining, (2) abolition of child labor and (3) maintenance of minimum rates of pay.

The North Carolina Granite corporation has been ordered by the national labor relations board to abandon its "company union," held to have been fostered through duress and bribery, and deal only with the local of the Granite Cutters' International association, or the firm will lose its NRA Blue Eagle.

A proposal to permit increasing the number of performances by road shows from eight to twelve or fourteen per week, without increase in wages, has been rejected by the Actors' Equity association.

Madame Secretary Perkins has a new hat. A union-made hat, presented to her while attending the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco, by millinery workers affiliated with the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International union. Furthermore, she said she'd wear it "as an example of the good will of a great and growing union."

Higher Wages, Shorter Hours

The NRA Labor Advisory Board is more firmly than ever convinced of the validity of organized labor's claims that code hours must be shorter and wages higher in order to provide jobs for millions of the unemployed and increase the ability of the workers to expand their buying power of commodities and services.

Before the staff of the National Recovery Administration four members of the advisory board informed the officials of labor's reasoned conclusion that a year's experience with the Blue Eagle had proved the imperative need of higher wages and shorter hours than those in existing codes. The advisory board members who addressed the NRA officials were Dr. Gustav Peck, Miss Rose Schneidermann, Father Francis J. Haas and Sidney Hillman.

Mr. Hillman's contention was that the work week should be reduced to at least 35 or 36 hours, contending a year's experience had proved labor right and industry wrong about working hours and wages as a means of fostering recovery.

Father Haas claimed the purposes of the recovery law, pointing especially to its declaration in favor of increasing purchasing power. He said this could be done by boosting wages and shortening hours.

It would be a fine thing for the stabilization of economic relations if those who own and control industry would recognize once and for all the inevitability of shorter hours and higher pay and adjust their businesses to this permanent plan. One important element in the problem of industrial relations would be settled if they would do this, and tell consumers, stockholders, bond owners, and every other interested party that the policy of higher wages and the shorter work week will be the permanent policy upon which every other policy must rest.

Industrial Leaders Oppose Labor "Truce"

New York.—According to a special article appearing in the New York Journal of Commerce, presumably following an extensive inquiry, industry will not submit voluntarily to arbitration by the various new labor relation boards. Neither will industry enter into a truce with labor on the terms proposed by President Roosevelt.

Corporation executives in charge of industrial relations, it was learned, have become convinced that the administration is more than ever "committed to the cause of organized labor" and "industry will not write a blank check."

Because industrial leaders are opposed to the proposed truce, failure of the president's efforts in this respect is predicted.

On the other hand, organized labor through President William Green, of the A. F. of L., has announced complette willingness to confer with President Roosevelt regarding the proposed truce and to continue its established policy of co-operating in every possible way with the government.

Climber—But what if the rope breaks?

Guide—Now don't worry about that. I have plenty more at home.

LOUISIANA CITY INCREASES MUNICIPAL WORKERS' PAY

Monroe, La.—Declaring the action was made necessary by the increasing cost of living and was in accordance with the national recovery program, Mayor Arnold Bernstein announced that the Monroe municipal council had increased the pay of all city employes approximately 10 per cent. Members of the police and fire departments were given flat raises of 10 per cent, while in some individual cases the increase in salaries and wages varied. Of the opinion that the financial condition of the municipality justified the pay raises, the mayor expressed the hope that all Monroe firms that have experienced increased profits under the recovery act would follow the lead of the city.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Women Urged by President Green To Aid Union Labeled Products

Addresses Union Label Trades Department on Label Support; Says Labor's Own People Should Be More "Label-Minded."

San Francisco, Oct. 11.—The women of America were called upon by William Green, President of the A. F. of L. to co-operate in the promotion of union-labeled products, during a stirring address delivered at the convention of the Union Label Trades Department here.

His plan, in brief, would be to form auxiliaries in every city, hamlet and village of the country, with centrally located storing depots, where in times of peace large supplies of clothing, shoes and foodstuffs could be accumulated to aid when and if industrial strife should come.

Coal Strike Cited.

He cited an 18-months' Ohio coal strike a few years ago, which he said was brought to a successful conclusion mainly because of the co-operation of the women in the coal districts who sewed, worked and collected supplies for the families of the unemployed workers.

"It's just an idea of mine. I haven't gone ahead with it so far, but I believe it a good plan and know that I will have your help when needed," he declared.

President Green previously told the delegates that he believed that the country was gradually becoming label-minded and that the NRA movement with its Blue Eagle had helped make Americans label-minded.

Label-Minded.

"We can further this great cause," he said, "by making our own people label-minded. Nothing more than the success of this movement would go further to bring to union labor proper sanitary conditions, decent wages and American standards of living."

Other distinguished leaders to speak to the union label members were Charles P. Howard, international president of the Typographical union, and William McHugh, vice-president of the Pressmen, who is representing President Major George L. Berry, unavoidably detained in Washington.

LABOR BOARD SAYS AGREEMENTS SHOULD BE MADE IN WRITING

Washington, Oct. 11.—An oral agreement between employers and employes might be regarded as legal, but such an agreement might be impracticable in satisfying the collective bargaining provisions of the national industrial recovery act.

A ruling to this effect has been handed down here by the national labor relations board, in a decision on the complaint of the Allied Chemical workers against the National Aniline and Chemical company, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Refusing to sign an agreement may be taken as a denial of the right of collective bargaining, the board held.

In the case at hand, the union and the company held several conferences, and the company conceded some of the union's demands. The company then posted its concessions in the shop but refused to draw up a usual union contract.

Before condemning a writer's work because it is not original, just think how much worse it would be if it were.

Weirton Employe Threatened With Exile, He Says

Witness One of Many in Government's Suit Who Says Coercion Was Used in Support of Company Union Plan.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 18.—Edward Dickey, employe of the Weirton Steel company at Weirton, W. Va., testified in the government's suit here against the company that he was told by a plant superintendent that he would have to get out of town unless he voted at a workers' election under the company union plan.

Dickey also testified that J. C. Williams, president of the company, had told a meeting of workers that he would not recognize the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, or any other "outside" union.

The government is asking an injunction to prevent the steel company from interfering in an employes' election to select representatives for collective bargaining.

Dickey named Barney West, tin house superintendent at the Weirton plant, as the man who said the worker's vote would have to be cast in the election or "you can get your suitcase and get out of town."

His testimony followed an assertion by another Weirton worker, Emil Walter, an employe representative in the company union at the Clarksburg, W. Va., plant, that under the company union plan, workers could not bargain collectively with the management.

"The company union system was not collective bargaining," Walter declared, relating that when he asked a plant official if the Clarksburg workers' pay could be raised to equal that of employees in the company's other two plants, he was told it was impossible.

Walter also testified that employe representative elections, although supposed to be secret, were not because the workers were ordered to place their "check numbers" on the ballots.

Dickey testified that a plant superintendent had told him: "You must remember you're getting your bread and meat from the Weirton Steel company and you got to vote in the general election."

Under cross-examination Dickey said he was still in the company's employ, and in reply to a question, if he had noticed any change of attitude, he said, "Well, they're kind of slow in worrying me any more."

Following the testimony of Dickey and Walter, the government sent a parade of minor employes of the steel company to the witness stand to support by mass testimony a charge that the company practiced wholesale coercion in seeking to force adoption of its employe representative plan.

In each instance, the employe called was a member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which, it is contended, the workers would have chosen for collective bargaining hay they been allowed a free choice.

CONFERENCE TO TELL WORLD ABOUT SAFETY

Chicago.—With "Let's Tell the World About Safety" as their battle cry and official slogan, some 6,000 to 8,000 delegates will convene in Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 1 to 5, for the twenty-third annual safety congress and exposition. They will represent industrial, educational, civic and official bodies from all parts of the nation and several foreign countries.

The official program, just issued by the National Safety council here, shows a total of 120 sessions and more than 350 speakers. Separate programs have been prepared for almost every branch of industry, thus making the congress in effect a joint safety convention of some thirty different groups. In addition, sessions have been planned for school executives, street traffic authorities, and those interested in safety in the home. To complete this vast program in the short space of five days the facilities of three hotels will be taxed to the utmost, and it will be necessary at times to run as many as fourteen sessions concurrently.

Brewery Workers' Old Jurisdictional Claims Stand as Decided in 1933

San Francisco—A report by the committee on claims of the brewery workers respecting engineers, firemen and teamsters, was referred by vote of the A. F. of L. back to the Executive Council.

The report pledged the council to see to it that the decision of last year's convention on this dispute be observed. The decision grants jurisdiction over the teamsters, engineers and firemen in breweries to the respective unions, compelling brewery workers to relinquish these members.

The vote on this question was taken as a preliminary skirmish but not a decisive one in the struggle of the proponents of industrial unionism versus craft unionism.

On a roll call the vote was 15,558 for the report and 9,305 against. One vote is allowed for every 100 members.

President Green Sounds Warning Against All War

San Francisco.—Speaking at a session of the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here, while formally introducing fraternal delegates from Canada and England, President William Green sounded a sharp warning against war talk and all war.

Especially interesting paragraphs of his statement on the subject included the following:

"Workers of the world must unite solidly to prevent what seems to be an approaching war!

"We believe that the purpose and spirit of the workers of the world is to see that war will never occur again.

"We cannot allow those with a mad lust for power to have their way. They must not be allowed to command masses of people to march out on the battlefield and destroy each other."

The interest of the common people, Green said, is to preserve peace, for "we abhor war in any form."

Labor Relations Board Orders Gorman to Complete Task.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The national labor relations board authorized James A. Gorman, umpire of the Anthracite board of conciliation, to complete the inquiry into the anthracite industry, sponsored by its predecessor, the national labor board. The investigation was begun after a series of strikes in the northern field that threatened to disrupt the entire industry last winter.

The national labor board passed out of existence through an act of the last congress.

In requesting Mr. Gorman to continue the investigation under the auspices of the new board, Lloyd E. Garrison, its chairman, expressed the hope that the undertaking would be completed Oct. 1.

The taking of testimony was completed before Umpire Gorman last month, but there was a setback in filing some of the briefs. The cases are being forwarded to the umpire for decision as rapidly as the evidence is transcribed.

Charges Made Against Clark Thread Company

Clarksdale, Ga. — Discrimination through refusal to re-employ any worker on strike has resulted in charges being sent to the textile labor relations board against the Clark Thread company. Circulars are being distributed to the effect that "advices reaching here from widely scattered mill centers in the south tell of a revulsion among mill workers against union leadership." Francis J. Gorman is charged with having a "Napoleonic complex." The company has indicated its intention to defy the agencies of the federal government in connection with the discrimination charges.

West Virginia State Policemen Attack Strikers' Prayer Meeting

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 18.—The peaceful character of the strike here at the Interwoven Hosiery mills was suddenly shattered when state constabulary attacked with clubs and tear gas a prayer meeting led by a woman striker.

A group of workers had assembled at a railroad siding near the plant when the company moved out merchandise in a closed freight car.

Prayers were offered pleading that the company alter its adamant policy towards the union of its employes.

Many of the workers were still on their knees in prayer as the police attacked. Strikers were beaten with riot sticks and American flags were torn from the hands of those who carried them.

Five men and two women were injured by police during this attack.

Not content with that outrage, state cops next day clubbed two men sitting quietly in a parked car near the mill. Later it was discovered one of the men is a local ice dealer not connected with the strike at all.

Local police arrested a petty boss at the mill for pulling a gun on strikers who sought to talk to him.

The local labor movement has retained a firm of lawyers to prosecute the state police for unprovoked clubbing of peaceful strikers.

LABOR ASKS ALL CANDIDATES TO SUPPORT THIRTY-HOUR WEEK

Washington.—A major labor effort to win the 30-hour week for American industry was forecast as the American Federation of Labor sent out a questionnaire to all candidates nominated in the primaries, seeking their views on extension of the recovery act and a broad social justice program. It was indicated labor will oppose candidates who will not agree to support the program.

Candidates are asked to say whether they will favor the 30-hour week for inclusion in all codes, whether they favor old-age pensions, unemployment insurance legislation, work security and health protection, outlawing of company unions and a big-scale program of public works.

President William Green, of the federation, who sent out the questionnaire, wrote the candidates that the replies will be turned over to the national and international unions, state and city branches and local unions. Failure to reply will be taken as an indication that the candidates were opposed to labor's legislative proposals.

In the letter sent with questionnaire, President Green said:

"The national recovery act has been of great benefit and its extension is necessary. It should retain, however, Section 7-A, providing for the right to organize and bargain collectively; the prohibition of child labor and the elimination of unfair trade practices. We believe that all codes should contain a clause establishing the six-hour day and five-day week.

"Then there will be a social justice legislative program presented to congress which will provide for old age pensions, unemployment insurance, work security and health insurance. There is pressing necessity for further appropriations for public works. The horrors of previous winters should not be permitted to continue. Such appropriations will be a partial remedy at least for unemployment and for the relief of the dependent unemployed workers and their families."

BIBB COMPANY CHARGED WITH DISCRIMINATION

Macon, Ga.—Workers of the Bibb Manufacturing company who were on strike will be required to sign as new employes, and to be examined by the company doctor, social worker and personnel director, before they are given employment, according to a company announcement. The action is regarded as intended to weed out all employes who may be affiliated with unions, and a form of discrimination. he matter has been referred to the textile labor relations board.

PAY ENVELOPES SHOW LOW WAGES

Biddeford, Me. — Pay envelopes handed to workers from the mill of the Pepperell company here in recent weeks show their compensation at the lowest point in more than two decades. These envelopes are the basis of allegations to the textile labor relations board that terms of the textile code have not been carried out.

Workers who are employed for 8, 16 or 24 hours a week are not paid in all instances for these hours, but one hour a week has been deducted. The mill does not set up wage schedules in any of its work rooms, and workers have no knowledge of how they are being paid. Some workers are paid less on the same work than others. Motors have been speeded up and looms are running at a faster clip.

Many of the workers complain they are not given time to eat their lunches; the bosses insist they keep at their work. Workers are watched, timed, retimed, and told to hurry on their jobs—that they are falling down on production and sometimes laid off for this reason.

Since the strike the workers have been told by their bosses that if they are seen with union cards they will be fired. Cases of rank discrimination as a result of the strike are found, and complaints have been made to the textile labor relations board. Outside workers are being hired, and workers who are active in union matters or attend union meetings are being discharged.

MAX WINTER AT CONVENTION.

San Francisco.—Among the many notables attending the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here is Max Winter, exiled mayor of Vienna, Austria.

In a brilliant address before the convention, Mayor Winter declared: "The unhappy workers of Austria stand as the innocent victims of the world's most vicious dictatorship." President Green made a very sympathetic response to the speech.

Public Officials Praise Action Of Textile Workers

Acceptance of President's Proposal Brnigs Strong Condemnation from Nation's Leaders of Public Affairs.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Action of officials of the United Textile Workers of America in being the first group to accept the proposal of President Roosevelt that for a period of six months all industrial controversies shall be settled by boards appointed by the president has brought strong praise from members of congress, editors of leading publications and men interested in public affairs.

Under this proposal questions of difference between employers and employes would be placed directly in the hands of boards created by the president for study and adjustment.

One of the strongest recommendations of the action of the United Textile Workers in accepting the president's proposal came from Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina. In his letter, Senator Byrnes said:

"You are quoted in the newspapers as stating, in behalf of the United Textile Workers, that you will comply with the request of the president and agree that during the period of six months, all controversies arising between your organization or its members and the employers, be settled by the commissions and boards appointed by the president, and that for such period the strike will not be resorted to. If you are correctly quoted, I wish to congratulate you upon your attitude in this matter and upon your willingness to co-operate with the president.

"I recognize that during this period of six months the commissions and boards appointed by the president will have under consideration complaints of discrimination against employes because of their affiliation with unions, the very controversial subject of the stretch-out system, and other questions, and if your organization is willing during such period to agree to the president's request, it is an exhibition of an exceedingly fine spirit on your part which ought to be appreciated by all who desire to promote amicable relations between employers and employes. I hope that the manufacturers will in the same spirit comply with the request of the president."

PRESIDENT ORDERS WEEK CUT IN COTTON GARMENT INDUSTRY

Reissues Order for 36-Hour Week with Present Pay Rates at Recommendation of Impartial Investigators.

Washington, Oct. 18. — President Roosevelt has reissued an executive order requiring the cotton garment industry to reduce hours of work from forty to thirty-six a week, while maintaining weekly wages. The order is effective Dec. 1.

The president's action was taken on recommendation of an impartial investigating committee which had been created under an agreement with the industry that the findings would be accepted as final.

The order, in addition to directing that the regular weekly wages shall remain at present figures, provides for an increase of 10 per cent in the piece rate so that these workers will suffer no loss. The order also provides that the NRA board shall appoint a committee of three to investigate and report by Dec. 1. on the competition faced by the industry from prison labor and sheltered workshops.

It was estimated here that about 10,000 new workers would be required in the cotton garment manufacturing industry under the shortened work week required by the president's order.

The original order cutting the work week and raising wages was issued in August. Representatives of 100 leading cotton garment manufacturers, meeting in New York a few days later, announced their intention not to abide by the order. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union and other unions in the industry decided to strike in support of the order, on Oct. 1, when it was to become effective. Strike action was delayed when the president directed a postponement of his original order until Oct. 15, at the same time directing that an investigation be made by a committee of three neutral persons to be named by the national industrial recovery board.

Following hearing, the committee recently reported in favor of the hour cut order, pointing out that the 36-hour week is already in effect with industries competing with the cotton garment industry.

PRESIDENT ACTS TO END TEXTILE STRETCH-OUT EVIL

U. T. W. Is Given Recognition by Roosevelt Order—Code Authorities Tacitly Recognize Union — Provision Is Made for Stretch-Out Investigations at Labor's Request.

Washington, Oct. 25.—More complete justification could hardly be asked for the textile strike, and for the calling off of that great protest action by the textile workers, than is contained in the four executive orders from the White House this week, which strike at the heart of the textile stretch-out system.

Two of these executive orders constitute code amendments to the codes of the cotton industry and of the silk industry. The third order recognizes the provisions already embodied in the code for the wool industry for a method of freezing the intensity of the stretch-out, and puts these provisions into effect along lines parallel to those in the code amendments for the cotton and silk divisions. The fourth order contains a carefully constructed set of rules and regulations governing the control of the stretch-out in all of the textile divisions up to February 1, 1935.

The effect of these four orders is, to create the textile work assignment board, with functions of investigating and controlling the whole field of the stretch-out (or specialization), with a common impartial chairman presiding over the proceedings of the three special panels of the board appointed for each division of the textile industry, representing the industry and the workers.

In general, the orders provide that there shall be no change in the work assignment burden in any machine textile process, except when there is a change in the character of the material or product, or in the nature of the machinery used. In the latter case, there shall be no increase of the work burden over that which controlled during the period prior to September, 1934, except upon fulfillment of conditions laid down. Burden of proof is placed upon management.

Employers may petition for modification, but the changes may not be made until the lapse of a six-weeks' period, during which there may be petition of the workers for investigation and correction of hardships in the changes proposed.

Petitions may be filed at any time by the workers for investigation of existing stretch-out conditions, and these may be modified upon order of the board if the conditions are found to involve excessive effort on the part of workers.

Thus that part of the textile industry where the workers have felt most keenly the impact of the mass production process, comes under the immediate and authoritative scrutiny of the representatives of the collective bargaining power of the workers, as embodied in the United Textile Workers of America.

Implicit in this situation is the recognition by the three code authorities of the United Textile Workers as the representatives of the employes in the industry. The selection of the plants to be scrutinized, for the study of the stretch-out system as practiced in the industry, is to include plants named by the United Textile Workers. This provision has been tacitly accepted by the code authorities of the cotton, silk and wool industries, respectively. Their action upon this program cannot be taken otherwise than as an industry-wide recognition of the United Textile Workers as the authorized representatives of the workers in the industry.

These results will long stand as the fruition of a strike which was the most complete demonstration in the history of American labor, of an organized capacity for united action under self-imposed discipline. When half a million men and women can make the showing made by the United Textile Workers, they have merited all that can be gained by the carrying out of this program.

RADIO PRIEST TO CONTINUE "ROOSEVELT OR RUIN" TALKS

Royal Oak, Mich. — The Rev. Fr. Charles E. Coughlin, famed "radio priest," will continue his "Roosevelt or Ruin" theme in his series of 26 radio broadcasts which begin Oct. 28, he announced today.

Some of his addresses, he said, will seek to prepare the people for "An Age of Leisure." He declared that he would urge his listeners to support the present administration.

Union Employer Heads Chest Drive

The annual drive to raise funds for the Community Chest will start during the early part of November. Trades unionists of this section will have particular interest in the drive, due to the fact that Mr. O. B. Andrews has been chosen to act as general chairman for the drive.

It will be remembered that Mr. Andrews is head of the O. B. Andrews company, manufacturers of paper boxes and containers. His employes are members of Papermakers union, Local 219, and they testify frequently that their boss is one of the rare examples in this city of a manufacturer who has not chiseled and cheated on them to the limit of his ingenuity.

The labor movement congratulates the Community Chest on selecting Mr. Andrews, and The Labor World extends to him its co-operation and good-will.

Building Contractors Fight Seven-Hour Day

New York City Employers Notify Unions They Will Not Agree to Shorter Day with Eight Hours Pay.

New York. — General contractors and subcontractors said to represent the bulk of the building trades here have notified the building trades unions they would not grant demands for a seven-hour day at eight hours' pay.

Building trades unions generally are reported to be planning such a demand. The inception of the movement came from Electrical Workers' union, No. 3, which on Oct. 3 made an agreement with a group of Brooklyn electrical contractors for the seven-hour day, with eight hours' pay. Later a similar agreement was made with a group of electrical fixture manufacturers in Manhattan. The union followed up its action by asking the Electrical Contractors' association to make the same kind of agreement.

It is pointed out here that the Electrical Workers' union has several times led in movements for higher wages and shorter work hours by setting precedents afterward followed by other trade unions in the building industry.

TRUCKING INDUSTRY BOARD LABOR MEMBERS APPOINTED

Washington.—The national recovery administration has announced recognition of the temporary membership and the plan of procedure for the trucking industry's national industrial relations board. The members are:

Allen W. Wilson, Boston; William G. Fitzpatrick, Detroit, and S. J. Cashel, St. Louis, temporary industry representatives; Edward J. Tracy, of the NRA labor advisory board; Fred Tobin and Thomas O'Brien, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Washington, temporary employe representatives.

COLONIAL BAKING COMPANY UPHELD IN FEDERAL COURT TO ENJOIN ORGANIZED LABOR

Temporary Injunction Granted Colonial Company by Judge Taylor Which Bars Union From Branding Concern Unfair or Hurting Its Sales.

Knoxville, Oct. 25.—United States District Judge George Taylor today granted the Colonial Baking company, of Chattanooga, a temporary injunction restraining members of the Bakers' union from "making any representation tending to brand the company as unfair to organized labor" or "making any threats or representations" that would prevent customers from buying the company's products.

H. P. Wasson, president of the company, said employes of his bakery were not unionized, but "I told them they had a right to join a union."

He claimed that members of the Bakers' union and the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council had charged him with being unfair to labor and through publicity and picketing of stores and restaurants using his products had injured his business.

Four Chattanooga merchants, A. C. Robertson, manager of A. & A. stores; M. Sherrill, grocer at 1725 Dodson avenue; S. W. McPherson, grocer at 2646 Broad street, and T. G. Parham, manager Hill Stores, testified that the defendants had told them if they continued to use products of the Colonial Baking company in their stores they would be picketed.

He charged by this method organized labor had tried to force his employes to join a union.

"In this case," Judge Taylor said, "the defense is that the complainant was unfriendly to organized labor in the sense that he preferred that his employes not be affiliated with organized labor.

"The proof shows that the employer told his employes the results that would follow from economic laws if his employes joined the union. He would have to resort to more modern machinery, thereby laying off employes, and employ men who could keep up with the speeded processes.

"Aside from that, there is no proof of coercion on the employer's part.

Can't See "Coercion."

"The court is asked to reach the conclusion that those facts are sufficiently strong enough circumstances that such acts amounted to coercion or want of freedom of employes to affiliate with organized labor. I cannot so find."

Defendants in the suit were George H. Hattenbach, C. R. Bales, J. E. Payne, C. R. Sims, R. J. Gentry, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union 25, Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers' union, and Arthur C. Kamin, president, and T. R. Cuthbert, secretary, and the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

Judge Taylor said further:

"There is some controversy as to whether there would be picketing if the plaintiff did not enter into an agreement

"The defendants have made no representations in this case except in the light of the zeal they have in organizing the employes of the complainant. There has been no violence nor threats of violence on their part.

"Certain representations were made by the local labor organizations to merchants using the complainant's products. There is no other possible construction but that these representations were threats that other merchants would be picketed if they handled the complaiant's products.

"Any fair-minded man would have to agree that this is coercion. The whole movement was to force or make the complainant make his employes become members of organized labor."

Judge Taylor added that "statements made (in circulars and posters) are false and fraudulent, but I do not brand the defendants as making false statements. I give them full faith and credit that they believed something unfair was being done by the complainant against organized labor.

Oliver Wheeler, who said he was discharged by the baking company in August, 1933, after a few months' employment, told of a meeting of employes called by Mr. Wasson.

"Mr. Wasson," he testified, "told us about organizers who made a living by being slick tongued, who collected the initiation fee and took it off some place else.

"He said if we organized a union he would be forced to buy a molder which one man could run, cutting off four hands, and he could get an even faster machine that would cut about half the force there. He said then if we were not fast enough he would have to get men somewhere else."

Testifying about the meeting, Mr. Wasson said he told his employes they had a right to join a union and that "I belonged to one myself one time."

"Some one," he said, 'asked why we couldn't pay wages in the south as they did in the north. I told them if we were equipped to make bread at a higher speed we could pay higher wages."

He told of the loss of business his company had sustained as a result of the campaign charging his firm with being "unfair to organized labor."

"Grocers say they have been threatened with picketing if they handle our bread," Wasson declared.

Judge Taylor said that final hearing on the merits of the case will be set for the Chattanooga term of court. He pointed out that provisions of the Norris act giving the complainant five days in which to move for a permanent injunction did not apply in this case, as both sides had had notice.

James H. Anderson represented the defendants and Joe V. Williams the baking company.

Pacific Mills Payroll Shows Low Wages of Skilled Workers

Washington, Oct. 25.—Wage conditions existing in southern cotton mills, where the maximum wage prescribed under the cotton textile code is more and more becoming the maximum, are reflected in an examination of the pay envelopes of the employes of the four mills of the Pacific Mills, Inc., at Columbia, S. C., for a recent pay day.

These mills, with the Pacific mills at Lyman, S. C., are branches of the Pacific Mills corporation of Boston and Lawrence, Mass. They are owned by New England interests and are among the handsome dividend payers in the textile field. These mills, like many others, were attracted to the south by "cheap labor," and earn profits for stockholders in distant parts of the country at the expense of the buying and consuming power of the southern mill towns.

The Pacific mills in Columbia employed 2,000 persons, and are among the largest in the south. With the exception of the highly skilled workers who cannot be easily replaced, the wages of practically all of these workers are within two or three dollars of the $12 minimum wage fixed under the cotton textile code for the 40-hour week in the south.

Before the code was promulgated some of these highly skilled workers were earning $20 and $25 a week. Wages of the unskilled workers were raised to the $12 minimum at the expense of cuts in the wages of the skilled workers.

Buying Plan Proposed To Aid Idle Miners

Pottsville, Pa.—About 36,000 idle miners would be given jobs under a government coal purchasing program proposed by James A. Gorman, umpire of the Anthracite Conciliation board.

Under the program, the government would purchase 5,000,000 tons of coal and distribute it to the unemployed and needy. Minimum weekly wages would be $13.86 for three days' work.

Gorman revealed the plan in a letter which characterized it as an "application of the New Deal to a too long forgotten army of unemployed mine workers."

Gorman proposed to have the authorities at Washington distribute the coal among the destitute, so that it would not be in competition with the regular output.

The orders would be limited to the larger companies and larger independent operators. The entire field would share in the production, the workers to be employed three days a week for five months at a minimum rate of $4.62 daily. Where higher wages are called for, the miners would be paid accordingly.

AMENDED CODE RAISES THEATER MINIMUM PAY

Washington.—The national labor relations board has approved an amended legitimate theatrical industry code superceding the code approved Aug. 16, 1933.

The amended code revises minimum wages upward and has maximum hour provisions for employes not heretofore covered.

NRA Violators to Get Publicity.

It is reported that the future policy of the NRA will be to give publicity to deliberate violations of the national industrial recovery act. It has been the policy of the compliance division heretofore to keep confidential the handling of complaints of code violations and facts as to specific cases adjusted.

IN MEMORIAM

Following poem was written in memory of Mrs. Compton, mother of Mrs. Monica McDaniels, a member of Textile Local 1785. Mrs. Compton died on Oct. 4. It is submitted by Miss Anna Compton.

A little old lady,
So small and quiet,
Had lain in her bed
From morning till night.

For five long years
She harbored the pain
At knowing she'd never
Be able again

To do the things
She liked to do—
Washing the dishes
And cooking, too.

She had made a home
And liked to work—
She never was known
A duty to shirk.

But she wasn't strong—
God must have known—
For only last week
He called her home.

A resting place
Near her home was made
For the little old lady
Who was known as Babe.

CAR SERVICE CUT.

Pittsburgh.—In an apparent endeavor to offset the award of a five-day week to employes of the Pittsburgh Railways, with about the same pay as for six days, the railway company announced that seventy-three runs in the daily service would be cut off. This curtailment of service means that inauguration of the five-day week will result in the employment of only thirty more street car men, although the board which made the award said the principal change "for the better" sought by its decision was to "produce employment."

Former Manager Home Store Opens Store in East Lake

McDonald Reported Steadily Losing Business as Weeks Go By.

One of the Home Store managers, W. A. Armour, was summarily fired by Roy McDonald some weeks ago when said manager donated a pound of coffee to textile strikers and former customers, it has been reported previously to this paper. Report comes now that this manager has just opened up a first-class store at Twelfth and Thirty-fourth streets, and asks that his friends and customers of former days pay a visit with him. Opening day was Saturday, Oct. 20, and large crowds were in attendance all day. Prizes were awarded to lucky customers.

Serving with Mr. Armour is Mr. Whit Akin, who was one of the casualties when he refused to take Mr. Armour's job. Therefore, his head went off, it is reported, and residents of that section of the city have a gleam of satisfaction in their eyes when they realize that their protest against Roy McDonald's actions can be registered in still another way.

Workers of Chattanooga, at regular session of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night, grimly rolled up their sleeves, took a fresh hold, and voted to carry on the fight against the "man of all trades"—Roy McDonald — and fresh impetus was given to the picketing of Home Stores in the city. These pickets carry banners telling the world that Roy McDonald is "Unfair to Organized Labor."

Home Store Pickets Thank Friendly Cafes

General manager of the Home Stores picket squads, Jimmie Adkins, reports to The Labor World that many proprietors of restaurants and cafes are expressing their approval of the fight on Roy McDonald's unfair ways of doing business. Walking the picket lines six hours a day is a hungry job, and when the boss puts his head out the door and rings the dinner bell, the response is inevitable.

A letter to The Labor World, in which thanks are formally expressed, follows:

Editor of The Labor World,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Dear Sir:

We wish to express our thanks to the cafes in Chattanooga and vicinity for their splendid co-operation in giving Home Store pickets their dinners each day while on picket duty.

We know there are quite a few cafes that have been giving Home Store pickets their dinners, but we haven't their names, so if you should be among those not advertised, kindly turn your business address in to some Home Store picket, requesting them to turn it over to Jimmie Adkins.

The list we have now that has not been thanked in the past is as follows:

Reece's Cafe, 2518 Broad street.

Almo Chili Parlor, 2507 Broad street.

E. F. Freeland's Cafe, 2515 Broad street.

John C. Ross Beer Garden, 3509 Rossville boulevard.

JIMMIE ADKINS,
Local 1785.

Mr. Adkins is a member of Peerless Woolen Mills Local Union No. 1751, and he has done fine work in trying to keep as many Home Stores picketed as his resources permit.

CONVENTION CITY FOR 1935 WILL BE NAMED BY COUNCIL

By unanimous vote of the delegates attending the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, in San Francisco, the matter of selecting a city in which the fifty-fifth annual convention will be held, next year, was left in the hands of the A. F. of L. Executive Council.

The matter came before the convention in the usual manner, and Atlantic City, N. J., was nominated. Strenuous objection to this city arose, when it was brought out that the mayor of Atlantic City is reported to have forbidden city employes, particularly city firemen, to organize. No other city had been nominated when the motion to refer the matter to the Executive Council carried.

Roosevelt Hits Voting Bar Against Persons on Relief

Washington, D. C. — President Roosevelt regards as un-American any movement or suggestion that would classify as paupers and bar from voting in some states persons on relief rolls who wish to work but are unable to do so.

His views came in reply to a statement that at least twelve states had laws prohibiting paupers from voting.

Under no possible decent conception could a person willing to work but unable to find work be classified as a pauper, Roosevelt said. He explained he thought no court would classify such an individual as a pauper.

TOBIN RAPS EFFORTS OF RADICAL ELEMENTS

San Francisco, Cal. — Communists and other radical elements in the ranks of organized labor were deplored in a resounding pre-convention statement statement made here by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers of America.

"We must have a more militant spirit—more fighting blood in the labor movement," said Mr. Tobin.

"Labor must fight the communist. We do not want this element in organized labor."

Q.—Who recently said: "There is no force that can stay the trend to the establishment of the shorter work-day and the shorter work-week?

A.—Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

What Next!

A new flexible, waterproof wrapping material called parafilm has been produced and is about to be marketed. The new material resembles heavy waxed paper and feels like a thin sheet of wax. It stretches but does not snap back. It can be sealed with heat and pressure and comes in colors and patterns. It is remarkably resistent to water and humidity and it is expected to win wide use as a packaging material.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. . . . Price $1.

Birds of a Feather

The United States Chamber of Commerce, in a statement issued from its Washington headquarters, declared that business places "high confidence" in S. Clay Williams, newly appointed chairman of the administrative division of the national recovery administration. Mr. Williams is chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, officiates as chairman of the code committee for the cigarette and smoking tobacco manufacturing industry, and has been an official of the national recovery administration for the past fifteen months.

In a resolution presented to the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, I. M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, declared that Mr. Williams, when finally forced to present a cigarette and smoking tobacco code, submitted one which would have permitted the payment of wages as low as 12 cents per hour, and which deprived the president of the United States of the mandatory power contained in other codes to amend or modify them.

Mr. Ornburn also declared that "since Aug. 21, 1934, when a public hearing was held on the code, Mr. Williams has refused to participate in any hearing or meeting with representatives of the workers of the cigarette and smoking tobacco industry and officials of the NRA, and has stated that 40 cents per hour is an excessive minimum wage to be made effective for skilled workers."

When these anti-labor and subversive actions of Mr. Williams were presented to the A. F. of L. convention, that body unanimously instructed the Executive Council of the Federation to call the attention of President Roosevelt to the biased and unfair attitude of Mr. Williams toward labor and to suggest an impartial investigation of his activities as an officer of the national recovery administration.

In justification of its action, the convention called attention to the "impropriety of appointing individuals to positions under the industrial recovery act whose public record has been one of opposition to trade unionism, collective bargaining, and the principles and definite provisions embodied in Section 7-A and 7-B of the national industrial recovery act. The convention added:

> "It is difficult, if not impossible, for trade unionists to co-operate satisfactorily with individuals whose public statements and personal policy have been at variance with the intent and the provisions of legislation which declares that the right of labor to voluntarily organize is equal in every respect to that of all other groups of citizens."

Despite this unsavory record of Mr. Williams, the United States Chamber of Commerce, well known for its own hostility to the reasonable demands of organized labor and higher living standards for the workers generally, declared that the chamber, as representative of business places "high confidence" in the anti-union, low-wage chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company in his capacity as chairman of the administrative division of the national recovery administration.

Verily, birds of a feather flock together!

Labor Representation on Code Authorities

President Roosevelt's reported plan for industry to do its own policing under NRA codes and discipline its own chiselers emphasizes the paramount importance of having labor representatives on all code authorities.

All NRA codes contain two major sections: One section sets forth the rights of the workers in their industrial relations with employers. The other section sets forth the rights and duties of employers in their relations with each other.

Code authorities, now made up chiefly of employers, may administer, with a fair degree of justice, the provisions governing the various fair and unfair practices in the manufacture and sale of commodities. But it is not reasonable to expect them to administer justly the labor provisions of the codes.

Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act, incorporated in every code, guarantees the workers the right to organize in bona fide trade unions and elect agencies for collective bargaining without interference by employers or their agents. To expect a code authority made up of anti-union employers to enforce this section is absurd.

Moreover, every code contains numerous provisions relative to maximum hours, minimum wages and various other work conditions, which most employers oppose. To expect a code authority made up exclusively of such employers to administer these provisions with justice to the workers is absurd.

The recent convention of the American Federation of Labor took a rational position on this question. Pointing out that in less than twenty-five out of more than 500 codes so far adopted has labor achieved representation, and that in only five or six of these instances has there been direct union representation on the code authorities, the convention declared:

> "Recommendations have again and again been made to the national recovery administration that labor representatives be placed on all code authorities. These labor representatives must be given on the code authorities equal in power and in privilege to all other members of the code authorities.
> "This means that the labor representatives must have full access to all information of the code authority in connection with the administration of the code; they must have the power to attend all meetings of the code authority. In no other way can they have adequate information of the policies adopted by the code authority, and in no other way can they influence those policies.
> "The attempt has been made to give the labor representatives on code authorities only advisory powers, and to make it impossible for them to attend meetings of the code authority except when they are specially invited to attend.
> "This places them in a position where they can hope to accomplish little, and will entirely defeat the purposes which labor has in mind when it demands representation on the code authorities."

The convention added that months of experience stresses the fact that "strongly organized unions are the most effective agency available for the enforcement of the codes."

The whole scheme of industrial recovery will necessarily be worked out largely through the codes. Labor cannot secure the benefits from the national recovery act, which it of right expects unless it is in a position to participate effectively in the administration of the codes.

To confer upon code authorities the power to police industry under the codes, without giving labor adequate representation on the enforcement bodies, is an anomaly which should not be considered by responsible government officials, supposed to serve all of the people.

NLRB SUPPORTS UNIONS AGAINST CHICAGO PAPER

Washington, Oct. 25. — Charges made by organized labor against the Chicago Defender, a negro weekly paper, were upheld by the national labor relations board, which held that the paper had violated Section 7-A of the recovery act in summarily dismissing all of its skilled union workers, three of whom were colored and sixteen white, and replacing them with non-union negro workers.

The company publishes the Defender, operated under a union shop agreement with the Chicago Typographical union, the Chicago Mailers' union, the Chicago Web Pressmen's union and the Chicago Stereotypers' union. The board found that the company's chief motive in the action which it took was to avoid the payment of the wage rates fixed in the agreement.

The board directed the Defender company to reinstate the discharged employes within ten days, to pay them the wages which they lost and to negotiate with the unions in an endeavor to bring about acceptable modifications of the agreement.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Reaction dies hard.

Business doesn't want to pay higher taxes.

Business doesn't want this; business doesn't want that.

Business can't get it through its thick head yet that business no longer sits upon a throne before which the multitudes must bow and scrape the last nickle out of their pocket and the last patch of skin off their knees—and other places.

And it is whispered that the administration is going to reassure business.

Well, business shouldn't be butchered and made to serve as the sandwich filling for a Roman holiday.

That isn't part of any fair program.

But this returning tendency to stand up and try the dictatorial stunt can only react against business to bring upon it more contempt than ever.

There wasn't any restraint upon business in 1929. It had the world by the tail and the swing was all with the wind. So what happened?

Ten million people are still out of work as a result of a plunge that threw fully fifteen million workers into the streets in one of the most awful calamities of world history.

It takes nevre now to step forth and try to tell the nation how to run itself—nerve on the part of that famous wrecking crew.

Just now southern textile manufacturers are giving an example of piggishness—they're famous for it—by demanding no more government interference, while in the same breath demanding that the government arrange trade agreements for them so they can export more cloth at a profit. All take and no give. It's a great idea!

* * *

Now here's a guess. If the administration starts leaning toward business at the expense of its social justice program, then labor will begin doing some leaning.

But that isn't probable, on the basis of all known facts. The social legislation program is being broadened, rather than contracted.

There is a real possibility that the legislation to go through this winter will make last year's crop seem tame and pale by comparison.

There may be a shocking invasion of the pasture wherein the sacred cows are kept.

All of which leads to just one conclusion: Business will have respect and protection only insofar as it can point the way to re-employment. If it insists upon the old game, which piles up unemployment, then it is clearly going to be too bad for business and very much too bad, at that. If it can show that the business way is the way to decency and jobs and good order, then there will be an accolade for business and many other rewards likewise.

Business, of and for its own sake, isn't worth very much of a headache. What we call business is simply a method—a way of doing things. There isn't anything holy about any given way of doing things.

If one way doesn't work, then some other way may work and surely some other way must be tried.

The president doesn't accept unemployment as a permanent and necessary thing—neither does labor.

Business, thus far, doesn't accept anything else.

There's a showdown coming 'round the bend, tra la la.

Union Printers Home Per Capita Food Costs Compared With Erlanger

When reactionary bosses tell their victims that all the union does is to get the money and then lose interest in the worker, these comparative costs of operating the Union Printers Home in Colorado Springs and Erlanger hospital of Chattanooga might make said bosses' faces red. "Ed" Crump, member of Typographical union, submits that there is no room for "graft" and the big fat cigars the bosses talk about in the cost of 15 cents per meal served in the printers home. And look at the menu!

Mr. Crump says:

"From Erlanger hospital comes a report stating that the cost per meal for food during the month of August was only 11 cents, with 27,674 meals being served. Such a report should be of interest to the taxpayers who contribute largely to the support of the hospital.

"Consider, however, that this cost per meal is for meals of a type largely suitable for sick people. People confined to their bed do not eat so heartily as people who are able to be up and get plenty of exercise.

"Compare this cost of 11 cents per meal with the cost of 15 cents per meal at the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs, Colo., where some 445,432 meals were served during the past year. Of these nearly a half million meals, 276,861, were served at tables to residents not confined to their beds, 85,115 were served on trays, 82,125 were served to employes and the rest to visitors—an average of more than 37,000 meals per month.

"Erlanger reports dietary department expenses for August as being $4,549.72. The average cost per month of the culinary department of the Union Printers Home during the past year was $5,947.26. Erlanger is supported partly by taxes and partly by pay patients. The Union Printers Home is supported solely by members of the International Typographical union, each of whom pay 40 cents per month into the home fund.

"Meals at the home are served cafeteria style, enabling the resident to select what he desires and as much as he desires. It is surprising what enormous appetites can be worked up by a group of old-timers whose time is all their own.

"It is to be wondered if Erlanger can prepare a meal for 11 cents which can compare with the following menu selected at random from a list of menus served at the home:

"Breakfast: Orange juice, oatmeal, fried mush with syrup, eggs as desired, bran muffins and jam.

"Dinner: Clam chowder, salmon croquettes or fricassee of chicken, baked sweet or creamed potatoes, peas or cauliflower au gratin, apple Betty with vanilla sauce.

"Supper: Oyster stew, tuna fish salad or country sausage and gravy, mashed or country fried potatoes, buttered string beans, pickled beets, boiled rice and raisins, hot rolls, sliced bananas, oatmeal cookies.

"The Home's cost of 15 cents per meal compares favorably with Erlanger's cost of 11 cents when it is considered that the home serves largely residents who are able to be out in the open and get plenty of exercise, while the majority of Erlanger's meals are served to people who are confined to their beds.

Neighbor—So your son got his B. A. and his M. A.?

Proud Dad—Yes, indeed, but his P. A. still supports him.

Nu-Way Grocery Store Thanked for Its Help

Don Maguire, chairman of the Signal Knitting mills textile union, requests that the labor movement be informed of the splendid co-operation given to the workers when they were on strike by the Nu-Way Grocery at 417 Market street. Mr. Maguire states:

"Mr. Humphries, of the Nu-Way Food stores, has always been fair to organized labor, particularly during our strike. His store kept many of our strikers supplied with food every day. This attitude by Mr. Humphries is nothing new to him. His meat market has the union shop card posted in a conspicuous place, and when the bakery and bakery salesmen were in trouble he voluntarily lent his active support to them in a tangible way. We bespeak for the Nu-Way grocery the patronage of organized labor."

That cellophane stuff just seems to be another thing that people have to go and pick up after some birds drop it just where they open the package it covered.

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Bridegroom (to the bride when they had settled down to housekeeping after their honeymoon trip)—Now, let us have a clear understanding as we settle down to married life. Are you the president or the vice-president of this organization?

Bride (sweetly)—I want to be neither president nor vice-president. I'll be perfectly content with a subordinate position.

Bridegroom—What position is that, my dear?

Bride—Treasurer.

Man—I waited two hours for my wife to get ready to go out last night.

Friend—Two hours, eh?

Man—Yes, two hours. She took one hour to make up her face and the second one trying to make up her mind what dress would best go with her complexion after she had put it on.
